BRITISH SQUADRON.

It is Not Bound for American Waters.

The Venezuela News is More Pacific and There is a Belief That the Trouble is at an End.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The admiralty department informs the Associated Press that the destination of the flying squadron of British war ships now off Spithead has not been determined upon, even by the admiralty, and that certainly the war ships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere else in American waters at present.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The statement from London that the British flying squadron was not intended for American waters was received with visible relief in naval circles, but in the state department it was evident that it had been anticipated, and it is surmised that Ambassador Bayard had already communicated directly with the department on the subject and given satisfactory assurances as to the intentions of the British government. The impression is strengthening that the Venezuelan matter is soon to be settled, or rather put in the way of settlement (for the execution of the details of the project will occupy much time) in the course of a few weeks at furthest, and that upon lines indicated in the recent Associated Press dispatches from Washington. The plan is likely to take the shape of a double arbitration, and in this respect it will parallel the Behring Sea arbitration. First will come an arbitration of the title to lands lying west of the Schomburk line. To an extent this will be a concession to the British position, which has been one of constant readiness to arbitrate this territory, but it will be a concession in part only, for there will be a provision that if it shall appear in the course of the investigation of the arbitrators that there is reason to doubt the sufficiency of the British title to any part of the lands lying to the eastward of the Schomburgk line, then this fact shall be reported to the British and Venezuelan governments and shall constitute a sufficient ground for another arbitration. This would parallel the course of the United States and British governments in the Bering sea arbitration, wherein the original arbitrators passed upon the question of damages sustained by the ships of the power who was found to be in the right, but left to another commission the method of adjusting these claims.

It is pointed out here that by the action of such a course the British government would avoid any direct recognition of the, to it, obnoxious Monroe doctrine, as construed by Secretary Olney, the first precedent would be followed and the United States would still achieve its object, namely, a judicial settlement of the entire boundary question upon its merits.

GUILTY.

Elverton Chapman Must Take His Medicine.

Was Stubborn and Refused to Testify in the Sugar Investigation Last Spring.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—The jury in the trial of Elverton R. Chapman, the member of the New York stock broking firm of Moore & Schley, who refused to answer questions put by the senate sugar investigating committee, returned a verdict of guilty at noon today, after being out all night. The case undoubtedly will be appealed to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia and thence to the United States supreme court, which ever way the next highest tribunal decides. The defense took numerous exceptions to the rulings of Judge Cole, in the course of the trial, and these exceptions, including objections on constitutional grounds, will be the basis of the argument on appeals. The Chapman trial was regarded as a test case and will be followed by the trial of Correspondents Edwards and Shriver and Broker John W. McCarthy, of this city.

LEATH OF FRANK LAWYER.

Well-Known Politician Dies Suddenly From Heart Disease.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18—Alderman Frank Lawler, ex-congressman, and one of the most widely known and best liked politicians in Chicago, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart disease at his home, 424 West Taylor street. Death was absolutely unexpected, the alderman having been apparently in the best of health and spirits the night before, while attending a charity ball which he himself had arranged in West Twelfth Street Turner hall. His death took place in the presence of his wife and five children.

HEALTH BREAKING DOWN.

Convict Redwine, the Bank Embezzler, is Dying.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 18—Dr. W. T. Rowles, of the Ohio penitentiary, being asked, said today that he believed Redwine, the bank embezzler of Atlanta, would not live three months. His health is very poor. He is breaking down fast. He is becoming bloodless. This statement, Dr. Rowles says, has been made to the president officially, Redwine being an applicant for pardon.

Big Blaze in a Rice Mill.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18—The Crescent City rice mill, on Toulouse street, burned today. Loss, about $75,000; well covered by insurance.

The Shipping Strike.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The great shipping strike is once more announced to have been ended. It is added that the Belfast and Clyde men, as the result of a ballot, have accepted the compromise terms which were proposed in December last.

INSANE ASYLUM.

Provisions for Its Enlargement Now Under Way.

Over 100 Applications for Admission—Dr. Smith Talks on the Situation.

RICHMOND, Ind., Jan. 18.—The completion of extensive improvents at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane, located here, promises to relieve to some extent the deplorable condition of affairs that now exists with regard to the insane. For a long time the management has found it necessary to reject a large number of deserving cases that asked for admission because there was no room for them. In this way a large number of cases collected within the district and at most of the time there were at least 100 applications on file for admission that could only be considered when a patient died or was discharged as cured. With a view to relieving this condition of affairs the last legislature appropriated $50,000 with which to build additions, and these are now approaching completion. The work of equipping the new buildings for occupancy is in progress and it will be but a short time until they can be taken possession of. About 100 more patients can then be admitted, but the medical superintendent, Dr. Samuel E. Smith, says that the condition will soon be as bad as it was before and that it will be necessary to ask the next legislature, which meets next year, for another appropriation of $50,000 with which to make further additions.

In regard to the report that insanity is rapidly increasing, Dr. Smith says that he believes the increase is only relative and that could the cases all be accommodated within the walls of the institutions, where they would escape public notice, this opinion would not prevail. Indiana's rate of increase in the matter of insanity, he says, is small compared with that of the other states, although one or two others run below it.

RIVALS QUARREL.

Both Wanted to Marry the Same Girl.

They Fight in a Saloon and the Vanquished One Takes Revenge on Innocent Parties.

JACKSON, Ky., Jan. 18 — William Smith was mortally and James Frazier seriously wounded at Quicksand, this county, yesterday afternoon by George Smith. Smith is at large, though a posse has gone in search of him.

George Smith and James Frazier, jr., were in love with the same girl, and both were jealous. They met in a saloon near the mouth of Quicksand yesterday, and while under the influence of liquor engaged in a quarrel. Frazier knocked Smith down. Bystanders interfered and Smith left the saloon. He met on the outside the elder Frazier and Wm. Smith, a relative of his rival. Without any warning he leveled his pistol, which he carried in his hand, and, after shooting both men at close range, continued his flight. The two victims had nothing to do with the fight, nor had they any knowledge of it.

PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The National Convention Will be Held July 22.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18—The hearing of representatives of the different cities which are working to secure the national populist convention that meets on July 22nd next, was continued today, when the national committee reassembled. Chicago was the first to present its claims, the speakers in behalf of that city being B. M. Fulweiler, of Arkansas, Dr. H. Taylor, Eugene Smith and F. J. Schultz.

S. Schieler and H. O. Schneider spoke for Kansas City, Kansas.

Harry Tracey, D. E Leidy and Mayor Holland spoke in behalf of Dallas, Texas. When they had finished the committee went into executive session to consider the proposition of the various cities.

MAHER-FITZSIMMONS.

George Siler Referee and James Lawler Stakeholder.

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 18.—Julian and Quinn have agreed on George Siler, of Chicago, for referee of the Maher-Fitzsimmons fight and James Lawler, of Houston, Texas, for final stakeholder.

The City Minister's union has decided to send a circular letter to all the religious bodies in the United States calling on preachers, Christian Endeavor societies, Epworth league and Young People's societies generally to unite, January 26, in prayer that the prize fights may be prevented and the city of El Paso saved from disgrace.

Diamond Dealers Fail.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Gustave Fox & Co., dealers in diamonds, east Fourth street, assigned today to Gus May. Their liabilities are placed at $35 000, with assets at about $25,000. Preferences for $11,000 were given, the largest being $6,000 to Jennie Fox. They hope soon to resume.

Emanuel B. Heller, of Streator, Ill., and his nephew, Master Sidney Wolferton, are the guests of Mr. Heller's mother and sister.

PREFERRED DEATH

To the Dishonor of Wearing Stripes in Prison.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Jan. 18.—Charles H. Anderson, a sergeant in company E, Twenty-third infantry, of the regular army, stationed at Fort Clark, Texas, attempted suicide on the eastbound Clover Leaf flyer, when near this city.

As the train came to a standstill at the depot, Anderson got up with blood pouring from his neck. A bloody razor lay on the car floor and as he picked it up a panic ensued among the passengers. The man is yet living, but with scarcely a chance of recovery. On his collar, which he had removed and put in his pocket, the following was written:

"I would return for trial, but prefer death to the dishonor of wearing stripes."

Of the crime indicated, nothing can be learned. Papers indicate that he has been in the regular army since 1880 and that his home is in Buffalo, N. Y. He had nearly $400 in his pockets.

WITH PASTOR HICKS.

Indianapolis Christians Say Immersion is Not a Test of Fellowship.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—The departure of Rev. Mr. Hicks, of the South Side Christian church in receiving members without the formality of baptism by immersion has led to open war between his church and other churches in the same denomination. Pastor Lucas, of the Tabernacle Christian church has openly declared from the pulpit that Rev. Mr. Hicks' church is not a Christian church and inviting its members to fellowship with those of the Tabernacle. To this the members of the south side church have made a reply, declaring in an address just issued that whoever believes in Christ is a Christian; that the individual Christian must interpret the Bible for himself and allow everyone else the same privilege; that faith in Christ implies obedience to him according to the measure of the person's knowledge of his will; that baptism should not be made a test of fellowship, but the person should be left to obey as his understanding leads him.

GERMANY'S EMPEROR.

Speech From the Throne on an Anniversary Day.

BERLIN, Jan. 18—Throughout the German empire today the twenty-fifth anniversary of the crowning at Versailles of King William of Prussia, grandfather of the present emperor, as emperor of Germany and the consequent re-establishment of the German empire was celebrated in some form or other. The great event was the gathering in the white hall of the castle, where the emperor, surrounded by ministers of state, admirals of the navy, members of the diplomatic corps, kings and princes, all in glittering uniforms, made a speech from the throne.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Dr. James Harvey Killed in West Virginia.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va, Jan. 18.—News is just received that Dr. James Harvey, of Wyoming county, was shot from ambush at Guyan Roughs. He was riding on horseback when he received the fatal shot and was found by friends on the public highway. James Allan is under arrest charged with the crime. The two men had trouble recently.

Christian Houses Burned.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 18—In a letter just received, Rev. H. N. Barnum, D. F., of Harpool, Eastern Turkey, where property of the American board was burned, says that the reports have been secured from 176 villages in the vicinity of Harpool. Those villages contained 15,400 christian houses. Of this number 7,074 have been burned, and 15,845 persons are reported killed. Dr. Barnum adds: "The loss, I fear, will prove to be much greater."

James Hopkins Dead.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 18—James M. Hopkins, an old time iron master and politician, who was the last man living who figured conspicuously in the famous Christiania riots, died at his home at Conowingo this county, aged seventy-five years. In 1858 he ran for congress on the democratic ticket against Thaddeus Stevens, and gave the great commoner the hardest fight in the latter's congressional career.

Hudnut Owns the Line.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 18.—Vincennes shareholders have sold their interests in the Citizens' Electric Street railway to B. G. Hudnut, of Terre Haute, who is now sole proprietor and who assumes control of the line. E. F. Tindolph, general manager, has resigned.

Anxious for Dr. Gasser.

HANCOCK, Mich., Jan. 18.—Friends of Dr. Adelin Gasser are greatly worried about his safety. Dr. Gasser left here in October for his old home in Zurich, Switzerland. He wrote from Havre, but has not been heard from since.

Dies of a Broken Heart.

LIMA, O., Jan. 18.—Miss Mary Jones died today from a broken heart caused by her brother's forgeries, which will amount to $50,000, and the death of her father, who brooded over his son's disgrace.

Faster Dead.

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 18—After twenty one days of voluntary fasting Mrs. Isaac Gephart, of New Carlisle, this county, died yesterday afternoon. On Christmas day she ate her dinner but not another meal in all the rest of the time. Her determination was the result of reading a book on Christian science. Her husband is a substantial farmer.

SENSIBLE MOVE.

The Manufacturers Trust Company Have Gold to Spare.

They Propose to Deposit it in the Government Treasury To Be Used for Purchasing Bonds Later.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 18—Ex-Congressman W. J. Coombs, president of the Manufacturers Trust company, of this city, has sent the following letter to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle: "We are subscribers to the popular loan and have accumulated gold to be used in payment for the same. We are willing to deposit this gold in the treasury for the use of the government and receive a receipt therefore, specifying that in case none of the bonds be awarded to us, that the gold shall be returned out of the proceeds of that which is received from successful bidders. We think that many other banking institutions are willing to do the same thing and in that way, without loss to themselves, assist the treasury in the interim in maintaining its gold reserve."

Mr. Coombs says people all over the country are accumulating gold with which to buy the new issue of bonds. This is being drawn from the treasury and the result may be that the reserve will be reduced to the danger point. "We have no doubt," he said, "that other banking institutions will be as willing as we are to give the government the use of the accumulated gold until February 5."

GAIN A POINT.

Democrats Secure a Victory in the South Bend Muddle.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 18.—The democrats gained a point today in the fight against the republican gerrymander of the city by the resignation of Councilman Frank Gonsiorowski, republican, who gives his reason as having no desire to take part in a scheme that would limit the influence of his people in the government of the city to one ward. Mr. Gonsiorowski has remained away from two council meetings, thus, with the absent democrats, prevented a quorum. He takes this means to relieve himself of any further responsibility to his party in the affair. Mr. Gonsiorowski's resignation complicates city affairs to an unknown extent. Of course democrats will not attend the council meetings and there are no means of compelling them to do so without a quorum present. The republicans cannot fill the vacancy, neither can they transact any business until nearly time for the spring elections. The gas company's franchise has expired and they have applied for another. The waterworks fund is about exhausted and the trustees want more money. In addition to this city bills must be audited and a new hose company is waiting for the council's acceptance of its new building.

SCENE IN AN ANDERSON COURT.

Lawyers Use the Word "Lie" and Come Near Having a Fight.

ANDERSON, Ind, Jan. 18—There was an exciting scene in the circuit court yesterday that for the time looked as if it would end in a fistic encounter. An effort was being made to disbar Attorney Kittinger in certain of the white cap cases now on trial. He was making his reply and made a very free use of uncomplimentary terms in speaking of the part Prosecutor Campbell and Judge Ellison had taken in the cases from the start, and, as he puts it, without any foundation whatever. He questioned certain official acts. This resulted in a very hot retort and discussion, and as a result the word "lie" was used several times. Judge Ellison appealed to Judge Bundy, who was on the bench, and asked for protection from unjust charges. Prosecutor Campbell was direct in his remarks and matters looked decidedly squally. Friends, however, interfered in the matter and at last induced all to let it drop.

Dr. Haygood Dying.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 18.—Dr. Haygood, bishop of the M. E. church, south, a prominent churchman, editor and author, is dying at his home in Oxford, Ga. A telephone message late this afternoon says he will not survive the night.

Abandoned Eleven Years Ago.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 18—The ex-attorney general of Cape Colony, Mr. Schreiner, has expressed the opinion that the British suzerainty over the Transvaal was abandoned in the convention of 1884.

M. Floquet Dead.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—M. Floquet, who was at one time president of the council of ministers, and also minister of the interior, is dead.

WAS NOT BOYLE.

The Cleveland Man Was E. M. Cameron, a Picture Agent.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion Again Disappointed in the Search for William Boyle.

The sensational story published in a Fort Wayne paper a day or two ago that William Boyle, the man who is said to be defrauding the Catholic Benevolent Legion out of his life insurance policy of $2,000, had been captured in Cleveland, turns out to be a fake.

Fort Wayne people are familiar with the history of the case. Boyle was a member of the legion and carried $2,000 insurance. Some years ago he disappeared and the supposition is that he was drowned in Lake Michigan. His widow sued to recover the insurance and the case has been bitterly fought through all the courts, the legion contending that Boyle is not dead and that he has been seen in various places since his reported death.

A. C. Gocke and W. H. Gordon, members of the legion in this city, went to Cleveland Thursday to identify the man who was under surveillance, and they have returned with the knowledge that the wrong man had been captured. The Cleveland man proved to be E. M. Cameron, a picture agent.

Cameron displayed a clean right leg, which satisfied the scruples of the Fort Wayne men. However, the examination brought to light one of the most remarkable cases of mistaken identity on record anywhere. Boyle's description is tallied by that of Cameron in every particular. Even their occupations were the same and they traveled the same territory. The history of the arrest of Cameron is one of more than ordinary interest.

Cameron represents the Hunger Portrait company, of Cleveland, and several months ago he called at the home of J. D. Bresnahan.

Mr. Bresnahan is the Cleveland collector of the society which Boyle defrauded, and the similarity of the appearance of the solicitor and the missing man struck Bresnahan so forcibly that he communicated with the police and a detective was detailed to arrest Cameron. On July 8 Cameron was seen by Detective O'Hara and Mr. Bresnahan and placed in custody. When accused of being Boyle he said he was not guilty, but he acknowledged that his picture adorned the circulars sent out by the supreme secretary of the order. At his request he was taken to several prominent business men, and they said he had lived in Cleveland for fifteen years. He was released, but on last Monday John D. Carroll, the supreme secretary, telegraphed Mr. Bresnahan to hold Boyle until Fort Wayne comrades could arrive and identify him. A. A. Gocke and W. H. Gordon arrived Thursday night and proceeded to Mr. Bresnahan's house and wanted him to cause Cameron's arrest immediately. He refused to do so and explained the outcome of the first arrest of the man, and assured the Fort Wayne men that Cameron was all right. They were not satisfied, and this morning, accompanied by Mr. Bresnahan and two detectives, they called at the real estate office which was frequented by Cameron. The suspected man did not put in an appearance, and it was thought that he had become alarmed at the publications in the newspapers and had flown. Then they went to the office of the Hunger Portrait company and waited an hour, but Cameron did not arrive. As the men stepped out of the elevator to go to the street, Cameron walked in. He was confronted by the Fort Wayne men, and they at once saw that he answered the description of Boyle. Upon being questioned, Cameron said he had been in Fort Wayne and had talked with a number of prominent citizens here. He had been in Wabash and Toledo, Ohio, where people made affidavits that they had seen Boyle since he had been reported drowned, and that he had been in Chicago in the summer of 1891, when Boyle was drowned. The circumstances indicated that the right man had been secured, and he was taken to the central police station, and an examination was made for a certain scar on the right leg, which it was said would identify Boyle without a doubt. As the party walked to the prison, Cameron limped with the right leg, as had Boyle, and the Fort Wayne men were congratulating themselves, notwithstanding the statements of the Cleveland men who had identified Cameron as a resident of that city. Cameron submitted to the examination and the detectives and Fort Wayne men were astonished when they found that there was no scar on the leg and the accused was released and the Fort Wayne men left for home. The authorities pronounce the case one of the most remarkable they have ever heard of.

DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN

Begins His Pastorate of Bethany Church at Philadelphia.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, who conducted the series of union revival services in this city in November, began his pastorate of the Bethany Presbyterian church at Philadelphia last Sunday and delivered sermons that day to immense audiences. In its write up of the services the Philadelphia Times says: "He arrived in the city Saturday and will be the guest of John Wanamaker at Lindenhurst for the present. He has cancelled his evangelistic engagements, which extended over the entire year. Since he left Bethany his evangelistic tours have been attended with great blessing and success. Mr. D. L. Moody said recently that he considered Dr. Chapman the foremost evangelist of the day, and while the evangelistic field has great charms for him, the earnest and urgent call from the Bethany congregation to be associated with Rev. Dr. Dickey, Rev. J. C. Thompson and Rev. George S. Van Deurs in church work along evangelistic lines has drawn him to Philadelphia to enter upon what is believed to be one of the most important movements of the age."

MEMORIAL DAY

Will Be Appropriately Observed by the A. O. U. W.

The Services Will Be Held at Wayne Street M. E. Church—Public Cordially Invited.

Tomorrow will be a day of more than usual interest to members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in this city.

Today is the date set apart by the supreme lodge for the surviving members to congregate and pay due respect to the memory of its deceased, but it was deemed advisable to postpone until Sunday afternoon the services that those members who could not otherwise attend might be present.

Since the reorganization of the first A. O. U. W. lodge in this city, there have been eleven deaths, which means that this order has handed to widows and orphans $22,000 in the short space of eight years. The various lodges have also aided sick and disabled members to the extent of several thousand dollars.

Through the kindness of the pastor, the services will be held in Wayne street M. E. church, to begin promptly at 2:30 p. m.

Hon. J. M. Robinson, who will deliver the principal address, is a member of No. 19, and a member from each of the three lodges will briefly refer to the memory of the deceased of their respective organizations.

The Degree of Honor will also be represented on the program, a member from Nos. 2 and 11 paying due respect to the memory of their deceased brothers and sisters.

It is urged that every member of the order be present, in company with their friends. A cordial invitation is also extended to the general public.

The following is the War Ended.

ACCRE COLD COAST COLONY, BRITISH WEST AFRICA, Jan. 18—The Ashanti war is ended. Sir Francis Scott, in command of the British expeditionary force, has occupied Coomassie, the capital, without opposition. King Prempeh accepts all the British demands. Prince Henry of Battenburg, and half of the white troops, have returned to the coast for embarkation. There is general rejoicing among the natives at the bloodless British victory and the prospect of a return of trade and prosperity.

No Faith in It.

LONDON, Jan. 18—The officials of the foreign office here say that there is no truth in the despatch received from Pekin today saying that the British minister there has presented an ultimatum to the Chinese government, demanding the opening of the West river.

Newspaper Man Dead.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—M. Henry B. Chancellor, an early resident of Chicago, and one of the foremost owners of the Chicago Times, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Col. Charles S. Diehl, at Yonkers, N. Y., this morning.

Sues the Vandalia for $1,000.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 17.—S. N. Warbritton has brought suit against the Vandalia railroad for $1,000. A train took him past his station and the conductor told him to jump off, which he did, and was injured.

Chinese Loan.

HONG KONG, Jan. 18—The Dutsch bank has obtained the contract to issue a Chinese loan of 100,000,000 taels, with interes at 5 per cent. to cost 89½ and to be issued at 95.

BROKEN LIMBS

Also Dislocated Joints and a Concussion.

John Parker Badly Hurt—T. J. Cummings Falls on the Sidewalk—Other Accidents.

John Parker, a farmer living about six miles from this city on the Leo road, fell from a load of hay yesterday and suffered a concussion of the brain. His right wrist was also dislocated. Dr. Dinnen was called and attended him. Last evening Parker was in a dangerous condition but he is reported better today.

T. J. CUMMINGS INJURED.

This forenoon T. J. Cummings, of the Indiana Furniture company, was walking on High street and fell on a slippery sidewalk. His left shoulder was dislocated. Mr. Cummings was removed to his home, No. 31 Grand street, where Dr. George C. Stemen attended him.

ANKLE BROKEN.

Mr. Hughes, of Decatur fell on the sidewalk as he was leaving a barber shop on West Main street, this forenoon, and broke his ankle. He was removed to M. Frank & Co.'s store, where Dr. M. Rosenthal reduced the fracture. Mr. Hughes is a friend of Mr. Frank and is a wealthy dealer in marble. He is interested in the marble business in several places.

FELL FROM A CHAIR.

Dr. Porter was called this forenoon to the home of F. W. Gronau, near the toll gate on the New Haven road, to reduce a fracture of the right thigh of Mr. Gronau's three-year-old son. The little fellow had fallen from a high chair.

TREE FELL ON HIM.

August Sarrazen, who lives about six miles from this city, in Washington township, was seriously injured yesterday by a tree falling upon him. He and his son had been felling trees all day. Toward evening one large tree fell in the opposite direction from what they had calculated upon and it struck Mr. Sarrazen. He was rolled over under the tremendous weight, and it was thought his legs were broken. This proved untrue, but the injuries he received are so severe that he has been unable to move his limbs. The exact extent of his injuries could not be learned.

BROKE AN ARM.

David Dick, of Webster street, fell on an icy sidewalk in front of his home last evening and broke his right arm.

LOST A FINGER.

A BROKEN LIMB.

INJURED HIS KNEE.

Henry Janzen, of Force street, fell on the ice yesterday and injured his knee very severely.

FELL ON THE ICE.

Mrs. Joseph Chavane, of East Jefferson street, suffered a fracture of the right limb, Thursday evening, by falling upon the ice.

AT EIGHTY-THREE

Hon. A. P. Edgerton is Active and Glad to Meet With Young Friends.

As has been stated in THE SENTINEL, last Sunday was the eighty-third birthday of Hon. A. P. Edgerton, who is now residing at Hicksville, where he looks after his large property interests at that place. The Hicksville News of Thursday publishes a fine picture of Mr. Edgerton and has this to say about him and the anniversary of his birth: "Last Sunday was the eighty-third anniversary of the birth of our esteemed citizen Hon. A. P. Edgerton. Letters and telegrams of congratulation poured in on the old gentleman from many sources. The News joins in wishing him the prolonging of his useful and upright life. Mr. Edgerton is very active physically for a man of his years. His mind is bright and keen, and he takes an active interest in what is going on. He is the same interesting and engaging character as of yore, and ever ready with words of encouragement for youthful ambition."

NEW DRY GOODS STORE.

Rumors That One is to be Opened in the Certia Block.

It is stated upon good authority that the store rooms now occupied by the Dittoe grocery and Peter Certia's saloon, on Calhoun street, have been leased by Samuel Wolf and an eastern gentleman, who will occupy them with a dry goods store in a short time. The two rooms are to be thrown into one and the fronts remodeled. It is understood that the annual rental of the place will be $3,500.

NEW COURT HOUSE.

County Commissioners Get Valuable Information by Their Chicago Trip.

The county commissioners have returned from Chicago, where they had been for a few days inspecting material and getting ideas for the new county court house which they will build. They received much valuable information, by an inspection of the buildings there, concerning the best qualities of stone to be used and the construction of the edifice. It is their purpose to erect a building that is absolutely fire proof and not a particle of wood will be used in its construction. The floors will be of the best quality of marble. The commissioners intend to have their own water works system, electric lighting and steam heating, and in this respect they will have everything under the entire control of the county. The commissioners purpose putting up a building that will be a model one in every respect, elegant in all its proportions, and at as near rock bottom prices as can be had.

GENERAL MARIN.

Takes Charge of the Spanish Armies.

He Pays a High Tribute to His Predecessor, Whom He Claims Did Not Have a Fair Show.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—General Marin the acting captain general of Cuba, in an interview today, said he thought that politicians here and elsewhere in the island went further in their judgments passed upon the conduct of General Campos than the circumstances warranted. He insisted that Campos was worthy of every consideration and spoke very highly of the ability of his late chief as a military commander.

There is no doubt that General Marin perfectly understands that it is necessary, in order to successfully administer the affairs of the island, to have the support of all political parties, and he will do his utmost by the use of his personal influence and that of his friends to bring all elements to the support of the government. The acting captain general will not go into experiments, military or political, during the period he is in command here. But this does not mean that his policy will be lacking in energy. Indeed, General Marin has already taken steps in the province of Santa Clara towards reorganising the Spanish forces there, and he is also adopting other measures to oppose the advance of the second insurgent army under Rabi and Jose Maceo.

MORTUARY RECORD.

T. O. Winans Receives Word of the Death of His Mother.

T. O. Winans, of 137 Shawnee avenue, received the sad news today of the death of his mother, Margaret, wife of Rev. R. J. Winans, at Colorado Springs, Col., which occurred on the 8th of January, 1896. She died of old age, being in her seventy-seventh year. Her death was painless and peaceful, she passed away as one falling asleep. She leaves a devoted husband, three sons and one daughter to mourn their loss.

THE WEEK'S DEATHS.

The following are the deaths for the week ending Jan. 18, as reported by the city undertakers:

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Once Believed to Be the Only Cure for Piles and Rectal Diseases.

A Better Way Now Discovered, Which Cures Every Form of Piles Without Pain or Inconvenience.

Many people suffer the pain, annoyance and often serious results from piles for years, and after trying the many lotions, salves, ointments and so called cures without cure or relief, give up the hope of a final cure, rather than submit to the intense pain and danger to life which a surgical operation involves.

Happily all this suffering is no longer necessary, since the discovery of the Pyramid Pile Cure; a remedy which is approved by the medical profession, as being absolutely safe, free from any trace of opiates, narcotic or mineral poisons and which may be depended upon as a certain cure (not merely relief) in any form of Piles, whether itching, blind, bleeding or protruding. Some of the hundreds of cures recently made are little short of marvelous, as a perusal of the following will demonstrate.

Major Dean, of Columbus, Ohio, says: I wish to add to the number of certificates as to the benefits derived from the Pyramid Pile Cure. I suffered from Piles for forty years and from itching Piles for twenty years, and two boxes of the Pyramid Pile Cure has effectually cured me.

Dr. J. W. Megan, Leonardville, Kan., writes: I have used a box of Pyramid Pile Cure and received more benefit and relief than from any remedy I had used in the past twenty-two years.

James Jemerson, Dubuque, Iowa, says: I suffered from Piles for six years; have just used the Pyramid Pile Cure and am a well man.

Mrs. M. C. Hinkly, 601 Mississippi St., Indianapolis, Ind., says: Have been a sufferer from the pain and annoyance of Piles for fifteen years, the Pyramid Pile Cure and Pyramid Pills gave me immediate relief and in a short time a complete cure.

The Pyramid Pile Cure may be found at druggists at 50 cts. and $1.00 per package. A book on cause and cure of Piles will be sent by mail, by addressing the Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich.

The Evening Sentinel.

BY E. A. H BACKETT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 18. 1896.

How it Can Be Done.

Judging from the large attendance and interest manifested at the democratic mass meeting held last Tuesday evening at the circuit court room, for the purpose of arranging the preliminary details for the coming city election, it is evident that the democracy feel the importance of unity of action and the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder in the municipal campaign which is now so closely upon us.

In view of these facts THE SENTINEL desires at this time to say that, if we, as a party, expect to succeed in the election this spring, we must have good men, from top to bottom, as our candidates for the various offices. There was a time in the history of Fort Wayne, as well as in the history of other cities, when a man who received the nomination of the party in the majority was almost certain of an election, no matter what his qualifications for filling the office were. That time, however, in the history of human events, has gone by, and we say "peace be to its ashes."

The people in this day and generation think, and they think for themselves, and they cannot be deceived by any false statements made by newspapers or public speakers respecting the fitness for office of certain candidates. They are not so bound by party ties that they will vote for an unfit or an incompetent man simply because his name is on the democratic or the republican ticket. We again say this day has gone by. We are living in a day of enlightenment, in a day of higher ideas, in a day when right motives and higher aims and thoughts prevail in the minds of the people, when something more is required of a candidate for office than the simple fact that he is a democrat or a republican.

The voter of today cannot be driven to the polls and forced to cast his ballot for unworthy men solely for the reason that they have been nominated by his party. He realizes that in doing so he is not a free man, but a slave. He knows that the government administered by the best men will be the best government, and he, therefore, demands integrity and the highest qualifications in those who are the candidates for office.

There is no doubt but that Mayor Oakley will be renominated by the republicans for that office, and there is no disguising the fact that Mayor Oakley will make a strong candidate. His enforcement of the law has made him many friends among the better element in the city, and, if the democrats do not put forward as his opponent in the mayoralty contest a man whose life will bear evidence to the people that he will enforce the laws, fearlessly and without favor, we do not believe that our party can elect their candidate for mayor.

We have men in the democratic party who would come up to these requirements, not only as a business mayor, but also as one who would have all the best interests of the city at heart, and such a one should be nominated. The SENTINEL has no candidate, nor has it any one in view at this time. We merely sound this as a warning that if the democracy desire to be reinstated to power in this city there is but one way for them to bring it about, and that is to nominate a clean ticket from beginning to end, one which will have weight in itself, and one of which the people of all parties will be proud. Will we do it?

AND now it is authoritatively announced, from the lips of the ex-president himself, that General Harrison is going to get married. The lady who is soon to become his bride is Mrs. Dimmick, who, though a widow, is still young and quite pretty. Her father was Russell F. Lord, who was general superintendent and chief engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, at Honesdale, Pa. THE SENTINEL contained the announcement of this marriage some time ago, but Ben, just like all prospective grooms are apt to do, would not admit the truth of the rumor.

In a review of the congressional contests in Indiana, the Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis News mentions the names of Stephen Powers, of Steuben county, and Judge Ballou, of Lagrange county, and James M. Robinson, P. A. Randall and Judge S. M. Hench, of this city, as the democratic candidates of this congressional district.

WHO says that women are not coming to the front in business affairs? At the meeting of the stockholders of the First National bank, of Huntington, on Tuesday, Mrs. Sarah F. Dick was elected a director of that institution and was re-elected cashier. So far as known, Mrs. Dick is the only woman bank cashier in the United States.

THE assessors in many of the cities are keeping down the valuations of business houses and dwellings on account of the decline in rents, and our assessors should do the same, so that we may not pay a higher rate of taxation than other cities do.

Now that the political parties have decided on the dates and places of holding their national conventions, presidential candidates will bob up all over, and many a boom will be started only to burst.

EDITORIALLY the Indianapolis News says: "The liquor leagues, both state and national, are said to be opposed to Governor Matthews for the presidency. This is something in the nature of a boom."

A THEODORE SHOCKNEY club has been organized at Union City. Its object is to boom Mr. Shockney as a republican candidate for governor.

Capt. Alfred T. Mahan will have a paper in the February number of the Century on "Nelson at Cape St. Vincent." This is the first of four articles which Captain Mahan will write on the naval engagements that gave Admiral Nelson his fame. The combat off Cape St. Vincent was notable because of the disparity in numbers between the Spanish and the English, and by reason of Nelson's quick wit in deciding upon a dashing manouver at a critical moment.

Shot Himself.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 18 —Calvin B. Duncan, one of the best known politicians in Rensselaer county, shot himself in the right temple at his home in this city today. He can not recover. The cause is assigned as financial difficulties. Mr. Dunham is about fifty years of age.

THE BRITISH ARMY

Obtains Coffee Direct From the Plantation.

The British Government formerly bought the coffee intended for the army direct from the coffee plantations in Java and the term "Old Gov't Java" is familiar to all. Mr. P. M. Hanney now manager of the grocery department of the great house of Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago, was located in Java for about nine years, purchasing coffee for Her Majesty's troops and his ability to judge of the quality and flavor of coffee will hardly be questioned. Experts of Tea, Coffee, Tobacco and Whisky are not always free users of the article they judge so keenly of. Indeed the reverse is frequently true. In Mr. Hanney's family, Postum Cereal is used in place of coffee. The immediate cause being that the wife had trouble in digesting coffee and Mr. H—, knowing that the grain beverage which looks so much like coffee and which fits the coffee drinker's taste, was a pure and nourishing drink, introduced it to his own family with the result that the old ailments which were directly attributable to coffee drinking, have materially disappeared. Proper adjustment of our food and drink means good bodies, clear minds and the ability to push to the front and make a success of life, while those who insist upon using such dietary articles as they know check digestion and impair the health, will lag in the race for prosperity. The law of the survival of the fittest is plainly marked.

Beware of the fradulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Grain coffee. Insist on Postum.

CUBAN NEWS.

The Constitutional Party Demand Campos' Withdrawal.

The Spanish Government Also Losing Confidence in the General and May Release Him.

MADRID, Jan. 18. — Dispatches received here from Havana say that the constitutional contingents and reformists have cabled to the government here demanding the recall of General Campos. The autonomists, it is added, favor his retention in command of the troops in Cuba. A cabinet council will be held tonight in order to discuss the matter. In the meantime the government expects to hear from Campos as to whether he is disposed to change his military policy. General Polavejs, who is mentioned as Campos successor, has suddenly arrived here.

THE SITUATION IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—The situation here today is critical. It is the general opinion that General Campos will either resign today or be recalled to Spain very shortly. The agitation over his conduct of the military operations against the insurgent forces has been steadily growing for some time past, and although the Spaniards have loyally stood by him, the wholesale destruction of property and the failure of the Spanish troops to bring the enemy to a decisive encounter have brought affairs to a climax and there seems to be only one way out of the difficulty.

The newspapers will no longer be controlled by the press censor and print strong editorial articles reflecting upon Campos. Repeated dispatches have been sent to Madrid by some of the most influential party leaders in Cuba, demanded Campos' recall, and a reply has been received saying that the matter will be considered by the cabinet council to be held today. It is believed that the Spanish government has been communicated with by Campos explaining the situation to him and asking him for his views on the matter. It is also said here that the captain general has replied to Madrid saying that in view of the critical situation and not having the entire confidence of the public he leaves the government to decide the question of his relief from further duty in Cuba.

The utmost respect is still shown personally for the veteran general, who has done so much gallant work for Spain, and he is still sustained by the autonomists. But this is not likely to have much influence now upon the decision of the Spanish cabinet, as the tide of public disapproval has set so strongly against the captain general politically and otherwise, that the most graceful way out of it, it is said, would be to promptly accept the situation and resign in favor of General Arderius, his brother-in-law, second in command of the Spanish forces here, pending the arrival from Spain of his successor.

In this connection, the man whose name is most referred to as Martinez Campos' successor is General Polavaja, who was hastily called to Madrid today and who is understood to have been in consultation with the minister of war. The captain general was down town today, accompanied by an aide de camp. He looked a very old man, utterly worn out with anxiety. He was respectfully saluted by everybody; but there was no mistaking the coldness of the manner of the people towards him.

Election Confirmed.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 18.—The standing committee of the West Michigan Episcopal diocese met here last evening, and, after receiving the protest and all the other documents relating to Bishop Mott Williams, voted unanimously to confirm his election. Bishops Satterlee, of New York; Garrett, northern Texas; Johnson, Detroit, and Burton, Louisville, were also confirmed.

Said to be Dying.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—M. Floquent, formerly president of the council of ministers, who has been suffering from congestion of the lungs, is said to be dying. He was born in 1828, and was at one time editor of the Temps, and later, of the Siecle. He was also assistant of the mayor of Paris during the commune and has held the office of president of the chamber of deputies, minister of the interior and other important posts.

Mrs. Charles Koenig, of East Washington street, celebrated her birthday anniversary last night.

A man's life may be saved in many ways. A man may commit suicide in a great many ways. Shooting himself through the head is quicker, but it is no more certain than neglecting his health. If a woman saw her husband with a pistol to his head, she would take prompt and vigorous measures to save him; but the same woman might see her husband on the down-grade to disease and death without seeing the seriousness of it. One-sixth of all the people who die, die of consumption. Consumption doesn't come all at once. It is insidious. The seeds of it are seemingly insignificant. Most people do not know how it starts. Thousands of people are on the road to consumption and don't know it. Whenever there is loss of flesh—paleness—wasting away—look out. Consumption easily finds a foot-hold in a weakened body. Low vitality, impure or poor blood, imperfect digestion, nervousness, sleeplessness—all these lead to consumption.

Taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent the development of the disease. Taken according to directions, it will positively and perfectly cure ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of consumption, whether incipient or fully developed. Consumption is a disease of the blood. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a cure for all blood diseases, no matter in what part or how they manifest themselves.

WANTS TO MARRY HER

WEALTHY RANCHER'S OFFER TO AN ACTRESS.

MARIE STUDHOLME'S PICTURE CAPTIVATES HAINES WEBSTER.

He Writes Her a Letter and Tells of His Vast Wealth and What She Might Expect as His Wife—Can Have a Fresh Horse Each Day in the Year.

ELDOM has a woman's beauty received substantial recognition more speedily than in the case of Miss Marie Studholme, the English actress who is the theatrical sensation of the hour in New York. Less than six weeks ago she arrived in this country. Her remarkable personal attractiveness was made the subject of many newspaper articles, not a few of which were accompanied by pictures of her lovely face and wavy hair. Apparently the fame of her beauty has traveled to the far northwest, for a couple of days ago Miss Studholme received by mail an offer of marriage from Haines Webster of Fort Casper, Wyo. Mr. Webster explains in his letter that he has frequently seen pictures of Miss Studholme in the papers; that he is an Englishman; that he owns a ranch; that he has 300 horses—she can have a fresh one every day in the year if she wants it, he says—and cattle galore, and that a bank at Green River, Wyo., or the Chemical National Bank in New York city will give information as to his wealth. He wants Miss Studholme to enter into correspondence with him—with matrimony as the ultimate object and he will either send her his "photo," or, better still, if she desires it, he will come on to New York to see her. There is much more than this in the letter, of course, every line breathing ardent devotion and assuring the recipient that the writer, though he has thus suddenly declared his admiration, is not one to change his opinions or falter in his regard.

Miss Studholme was astonished on receipt of this letter, not so much on account of the subject discussed as of her correspondent's evident sincerity. Like most stage beauties, she is familiar with the maudlin sentimentality usually found in such missives, but declares that never before has she received a letter from an admirer who seemed to mean so much. It is understood in New York that Miss Studholme is already married, though so far nothing definitely is known in regard to the matter.

ACCUSED OF ABDUCTION.

Musical Instructor Is Arrested on a Grave Charge.

Professor Harold Land, director of the Ladies' Military Band of Creston, Ia., has been arrested on a charge of abduction. He represented himself as a widower, and has had living with him two young women whom he introduced as his sisters, Mabel and Helena. They were both members of the band. Mayor Scurr of Creston last week received a letter from Mrs. Gilmore Smith, of Wingham, Ont., in which she asserts the two women are daughters of hers, who disappeared from home over a year ago and of whom no trace could be found. She charges that Land is an assumed name and that his real name is Duncan Sumners, and that he has a wife and children living in Canada. Mrs. Smith inclosed a letter she received from her younger daughter, Helena, which implores her mother to forgive her and to aid her, representing that she is badly treated by Land and her elder sister. The chief of police at once investigated the matter and the two young women confessed that the facts stated in the letter were true. Land was immediately taken into custody.

Cured by a Schlatter Handkerchief.

Nathan W. Baker, proprietor of the Baker house at Lewisburg, Pa., asserts that he was wholly cured of acute inflammatory rheumatism, from which he was a sufferer for a score of years, through the mysterious power of Francis Schlatter, the Colorado healer. None of the local doctors were able to help Mr. Baker, and it was only by the aid of crutches that he was able to move about when not confined to his home entirely. Miss Fesnaught, a Lewisburg girl who was visiting Denver friends, had Schlatter bless a handkerchief, and then she sent it to Mr. Baker. He placed it over the affected part of his body, and says he was able to walk without pain or trouble in twenty-four hours. Now he claims to be better than he has been for years.

REUNITED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Long Search of Michigan Brothers for Each Other Happily Ended.

B. D. Williamson, a hardware merchant of Morley, Mich., has been in search of two sisters and a brother for many years. His father having died before he was born, and his mother dying when he was only six years old, he went to live with his uncle in Flowerfield township, St. Joseph county, and the members of the family gradually drifted apart. It was recently published that Hiram Williamson, of Pierson, had been granted an increase of pension. B. D. Williamson at once wrote him to learn the name of his father and mother, and received an invitation to visit him. It developed that they were brothers, and recently they held a reunion, it having been forty-five years since their last meeting. The sisters are living in the southern part of the state, and Hiram Williamson has lived seventeen years on a farm near Pierson, only thirteen miles from his brother, and each was in search of the other all this time.

FIRE CHIEF A. H. RUNGE.

His Restored Health Was Due to Paine's Celery Compound.

The position of chief of fire department in a big city like Minneapolis, with its acres of valuable building property, crossed by numerous railroad lines and dotted with factories where the fires are never "banked," is one of the utmost responsibility, and can be entrusted only to a man of unquestioned character and ability.

August H. Runge, who has filled this responsible position for several years with so much credit to himself and to the city, was born in New York in 1852, where he received a common school education.

What such a man as this has to say can scarcely fail to carry weight with it:

"With the hope that what I say may in some way be brought to the attention of others who, like myself, have suffered without any apparent cause, I feel constrained to recite a brief tale regarding an experience which I trust may never be repeated in my case.

"A few months ago, owing doubtless to the exacting nature of my duties as head of the fire department, I began to feel a sort of languor and listlessness, to disguise which I was compelled to bring into play all the strength of will I could command. The feeling grew upon me, however, and in a short time it took such possession of me that it affected my appetite and caused insomnia. I approached my meals with a feeling amounting almost to nausea, and my bed with horror at the restless night which I was almost certain was before me. Matters became so serious with me that I could no longer keep silent about myself, and speaking of it to one of my friends one day, he suggested that I try Paine's celery compound. I purchased a bottle and before I had taken a dozen doses I knew that the suggestion was a good one. I felt an improvement. I continued to use it, and felt and to. My appetite is good, and I sleep well, and instead of an irksome grind my business is again a pleasure to me. I attribute this happy state of affairs to Paine's celery compound."

As in the case of Fire Chief Runge, the beginning of poor health is very apt to rob one of the will power to start immediately about getting out of danger. It is this inertia of poor health that makes an ordinary "run-down" bodily condition so dangerous, and so likely to go on to something worse. Every day it is clearly shown that it won't do to live tired out, and on the verge of breaking down. The languor and the lack of strength are sure to increase.

Now is the time to throw off disease. As the new year begins there are fewest hindrances o getting back strength and sturdy health. The bracing weather arouses a longing for health. Paine's celery compound, taken now, does its best service toward driving out disease and establishing firm health.

BILL NYE'S COMET.

HE BOUGHT IT IN GOOD FAITH, BUT IS DISAPPOINTED.

He Finds That Investing In an Unbranded Comet Is Extremely Hazardous and Not Always to Be Relied Upon—He Wants to Exchange It.

[Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.]

I suppose that I have done a very foolish thing. But my impulse was a good one. Last year an astronomer who was very hard pressed for money came to me and wanted to dispose of a comet that he had just discovered. He needed the money so sadly that he won my young heart after awhile in spite of my better judgment.

Common sense told me not to buy a heavenly body on the hoof, but tenderness and a warm, sympathetic nature overcame my cool business sense. We looked over the property through a telescope, and when my attention was called to its speed and good condition and low taxes I yielded.

The first jolt, as I might say, which was given to my faith was when our gentlemanly, genial and urbane registrar of deeds refused to record the transfer. He said that nobody but a literary man would be such a wild, unfettered ass. He is cynical to a degree. He told me that all I needed was a nursing bottle connected with the Milky Way to do real well.

I consulted an attorney regarding the matter. He also is a local humorist.

He said that buying unbranded comets on the range was hazardous in the extreme, especially in the winter season. He wrote out quite a long opinion on the case, for which he charged me an outrageous price, and in which he stated that a man who would advance money on a high spirited comet, relying on the provisions of the Monroe doctrine for the confirmation and preservation of title, did not know enough to carry viscera to a bear.

He told me that it would have shown more mental acumen if I had exchanged my North Minneapolis building lots and Hudson's bay addition to Arctic park for the Big Dipper and gone into the shelf and heavy hardware business, but to put cold cash, or ready John, as he phrased it, into a luminous hole in the sky showed more possibilities as an intellectual disaster than anything he had seen during six years' experience as civil service examiner for vacancies in idiot asylums.

He went so far as to ask me why I didn't catch my own comets by putting salt on their tails. I submitted to almost every indignity from this man, including a bill for $18. He has been told by friends that he is humorous, and it has destroyed his usefulness. His business suffers, and his clients become offended and go elsewhere. Among other things he asked me why I did not organize an International Lighting and Heating company and pipe the surplus heat from the burned district of a future state.

The astronomer told me that my comet would come up every night, and then he rolled up the money I gave him and went abroad for much needed rest and change of scene. He told me that he would have the astronomical record changed so that it would hereafter be referred to as Nye's comet, but he did not do so. There has been nothing published connecting my name with the affair, and a week after I bought it I mislaid it one night and have not seen it since.

I am told also that these comets have a way of changing their appearance and then retiring to their former haunts. The astronomer to whom I allude and who chiseled me out of my means had a long brass telescope on Broadway, and he not only cracked up this comet to the very top notch, but he assured me on his honor as a gentleman that it would become a parent in the spring. Of course, he said, I ought to reap some dividend after a long, hard winter with a comet eating its head off, but June would find me away ahead of the game. Sometimes these comets have twins, he said, and there you are, maybe with a whole sky full of heavenly bodies at the cost of one only.

I am almost ashamed to tell this now, for it shows how my faith in my fellow worm of the dust causes me to be reviled by practical and cynical business men in this commercial age.

But this has been a lesson to me. Some have been coarse and rude to me when I have tried to sell, while others have treated me with well bred contempt. One man, who is said to literally have "money to burn," refused my comet because the astronomer who sold it to me had not secured the acknowledgment of his wife. I regard that as a mere technicality, and so informed him; but, no, he would not put his money in a comet, he said, and then in future years, after I had passed beyond, find himself confronted by heirs claiming a dower interest in his comet because my conveyance did not show that the wife of the conveyer had been taken apart and examined by the notary as required by law.

This proves that we live in a cold, selfish world, and also that most literary men are not practical. I am not. Neither was Milton. Still I am a little more businesslike than Milton. He got $45 for "Paradise Lost," however, and that shows that he was pretty keen on a trade, I think, for I had to analyze it in my school days, and when I heard that John got $45 for it the idea came to my childish mind that literature was a cinch. Of course I do not use slang now nor even think slang, but that was the way the matter struck me in my callow days. But the practical poet of today is careful to write in such a way as to fill out columns that need one or two stanzas only. Milton today would be unpopular, and if he sent "Paradise Lost" to one of our old season cracked editors he would send the poem down the dumb waiter to the room of a pale girlish youth, with orders to boil it down to 16 lines to "justify" with the Holmes murder.

But since my real estate deal in the comet line I have been reading up more in regard to these erratic bodies. I am surprised to find that they are irregular in their habits and move in a parabola, like a presidential candidate.

I had made some calculations covering both sides of the barn and was sure that I was coming at the date of my comet's return when I ran across this caution: "It has been remarked that when an ephemeris of geocentric positions (right ascension and declination) for any length of time is required it is convenient to calculate with rectangular equitorial coordinates instead of by the process we have followed in comparing the orbit with the middle observation."

So then I had to buy a new barn and begin all over again.

At one time I had the whole back yard full of logarithms, and a person going out after coal in the gloaming would fall over and skin his nose on an equation almost invariably.

After I had worked my multiplier till I had to build on a lean to for my multiplicand I ran upon this little paragraph of instructions:

"We may now refer to the calculation of ephemerides of the geocentric places of a comet from the parabolic elements which are required during its visibility to facilitate observations."

Now, what sort of reading matter is that to place before a family?

The general respect and esteem shown by comets toward the sun have endeared them to the thinking mind. I have read of every comet since the savant was enabled first to ramble through the sky, and no comet has ever been known to turn its tail toward the sun during that time. Comets for many years were regarded with disfavor and were unpopular among the masses, the general opinion being that they preceded pestilence and congressional legislation. In the fifteenth century to the "Ave Maria" was added "Lord, save us from the devil, the Turk and the comet."

The chemical construction of comets has for many years occupied the attention of our greatest scholars and atmospheric explorers. Generally they are thought to contain nothing but carboniferous gases and scenery. As one may comfortably observe the stars through the tail of a comet, says the astronomer, we are led to believe that the whole substance of the comet is merely a nebulous gas illuminated by other bodies, such as the sun or moon.

If I had known that in April, it would have been worth something to me, but I am too apt to purchase things and then read about them afterward.

Donati's comet, I think, gave the most general satisfaction. It was here in 1858 and returns regularly every 1,950 years, rain or shine. It would come oftener, but has an aphelion of 15,000,000,000 of miles and therefore has to be very active in order to make the trip.

Donati was very proud of his comet, but it has never paid him at all. Since getting mixed up in the matter I have had a good deal of correspondence with other discoverers, owners or assignees of comets, and many of them are actually suffering from want.

A general movement toward the relief of these people is now on foot, and a Christmas tree is talked of at least for next year.

Any one visiting the Holy Land this year who may notice an unscrupulous astronomer over there carrying a good gold watch with my initials on it and inclosed in a chamois bag will do well to communicate particulars to me at an early date. I will drop everything and go at once.

I would exchange my comet with a steady, industrious man for a revolving bookcase with a much smaller orbit, if in good condition.

"I have always read," soliloquized the kind hearted man, "that the most dangerous place in a railway car going at full speed is a seat near the stove. In the event of a collision the occupant of such a seat is either thrown with great violence against the stove or crushed by the telescoping of the cars and slowly burned to death. I will keep the dangerous seat I am occupying here near the stove. I will not expose that lady standing up in the aisle to the risk of death or lasting disfigurement."

MEN ONCE PROMINENT WHO HAVE DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

Oldest Living Ex-Senators—Oldest Railroad Builder—Railroad Tie Inventor. Many Has Been Now Living In New York and Engaged In Business There.

It would be an interesting thing if it were possible to find out and set down on paper the facts regarding some scores of men who once were prominent in the great world of national affairs, but who are now heard of but seldom. So seldom indeed are the names of some of those once giants in the public's eye seen in the newspapers that their appearance excites surprise and occasionally the comment, "Why, I thought that man was dead."

These men are sometimes termed "has beens," and so they are in a sense, but many of them are still in active life, though not in public life, and no doubt the intimate friends of many such would be surprised to know how completely they have dropped out of public knowledge.

Among the most interesting of all the present has beens are Joseph Bradbury of Maine, George W. Jones of Dubuque, Ia., and Alpheus Felch of Ann Arbor, Mich. These men are the oldest living ex-United States senators; they were all members of that body at the same time, but they retired so long ago that they have been forgotten by the great mass of their fellow citizens, although during the years of their public activity they were all personages of prominence. The oldest of the three is Joseph Bradbury. As he was born in 1802, he is now 93 years old. His six years' term in the senate began with 1847 and closed with 1853. Mr. Jones is nearly two years younger, his birth having occurred on April 12, 1804. His term of service in the senate began in 1848 and ended in 1859. Mr. Felch is a little younger than Mr. Jones, his birth was on Sept. 8, 1804, and he served exactly the same time as Mr. Bradbury.

All three were members of the Thirtieth and Thirty-first congresses. They are the sole survivors of the senates of those congresses. They were the colleagues of John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, Sam Houston of Texas, Robert M. T. Hunter of Virginia, Tom Corwin of Ohio, William H. Seward of New York and John A. Dix of the same state, Thomas H. Benton of Missouri, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi, Daniel Webster of Massachusetts, Lewis Cass of Michigan, Hannibal Hamlin of Maine, Henry Clay of Kentucky, Herschell V. Johnson of Georgia, John M. Clayton of Delaware and many others of lesser importance, long since called from the scenes of their earthly labors and forgotten by the rushing world of today.

Each of the three oldest ex-senators must have stored up in his memory a series of reminiscences that would prove a veritable mine to the inquiring writer. What they could tell of the politics of past years would no doubt be vastly entertaining and valuable. They could talk about other things than politics most interestingly also. Mr. Bradbury was a member of the famous class of 1825, at Bowdoin, and among his associates there were Longfellow, the poet; Nathaniel Hawthorne, the writer of eerie romances; John S. C. Abbot, whose "Tales of Franconia" delighted the young several decades ago and whose life of Napoleon found thousands and thousands of readers, and Jonathan Cilley, the Maine congressman who was killed in a duel by Graves of Kentucky in 1838. Mr. Bradbury was a practicing lawyer for many years and when a young man was also a journalist, being editor of the Maine Patriot for a number of years. He is extremely well preserved and attended the World's fair in 1893.

Mr. Felch, who served as senator from Michigan, was the recipient of many political honors in his young manhood and middle life, having been a member of the state legislature, and serving a part of a term just before his election to the senate as governor of Michigan. After the expiration of his senatorial term, he was sent by President Pierce to California as a member of the commission appointed to settle the land claims there.

Mr. Jones served also in several other public places besides being a senator. President Buchanan sent him to New Granada (now Colombia), South America, as United States minister. Upon his recall from that place in 1861 he was accused of disloyalty and imprisoned at Fort Warren, but he was soon released. He was a warm friend of Jefferson Davis, and it was partly owing to the intimacy of the two men that Mr. Jones was charged with disloyalty. Like both the other venerable ex-senators here spoken of, Mr. Jones is in excellent health in spite of his advanced age. Three years ago he led the grand march at a charity ball, and he was one of those who, in 1893, escorted the remains of his old friend Davis from New Orleans to Richmond.

So much for these three of the oldest has beens. There are not many who have attained to their great age. John I. Blair, the venerable pioneer in railroad building, is one of those who have. Perhaps he should not be termed a has been, yet he is one who has been obliged to retire from the stress and anxiety of active life and whose name is seldom seen in print, excepting when a searcher after reminiscences seeks him out at his home in Blairstown, N. J. Mr. Blair is possibly not so active as the oldest ex-senators. It is true that he is still president of the Belvidere (N. J.) bank, which he founded 50 or 60 years ago, but he is not now very active in its management and he passes most of his time in the warm weather sitting upon the upper veranda of the fine old house which has been his home since very early manhood. He likes to sit in the sun, and a part of the veranda has been inclosed with glass, so that even in cold weather he may enjoy his much loved sun bath every day that the solar luminary deigns to show its face.

General James S. Greene, the oldest living graduate of West Point, is another venerable has been. He lives in Morristown, N. J., in the winter, but he spends the summer, like the sprightly old man that he is, at Newport, the summer capital of America's fashionable folk, while his autumns are put in at Schenectady, N. Y. General Greene has other distinctions besides that of being the oldest graduate of Uncle Sam's military academy. It was he who when the iron horse began to run his course on roads of iron in America, nearly 60 years ago, devised the railroad tie or sleeper. During the civil war he was a member of the northern army and he distinguished himself at Gettysburg.

The city of New York is the home of many has beens, several of whom are ex-governors. Ex-Governor Hoadly of

JOHN S. WISE.

Ohio, who during his term in that post was one of the best known men in the United States, is one of these. In a certain way, Mr. Hoadly is not a has been. His law firm enjoys one of the largest practices of any concern in New York. Mr. Lauterbach, who is now so prominent in New York city politics, is one of his partners. Mr. Hoadly was born in New Haven and comes of what might be termed "official stock," since his father, when a young man, served a term as mayor of New Haven, and then of Cleveland, while his grandfather, who was a captain in the Revolution, was elected to the Connecticut legislature 26 times consecutively, a record which has not been broken or equaled, so far as I know, in the land of steady habits. Mr. Hoadly was a partner of Salmon P. Chase in the law business at Cincinnati, and also served on the bench in that city. But from a money point of view, at least, he has scored his greatest success in New York.

Two of the other ex-governors now living in New York are named Chamberlain — Joshua L., ex-governor of Maine, and Daniel H., ex-governor of South Carolina. Joshua L. is an ex-college president as well as an ex-governor. For years he was the chief executive of Bowdoin, and he served as professor of mental and moral philosophy for a number of years after 1874. He was an officer in the Federal army during the civil war and served in 24 pitched battles, a record that has been equaled by few. In his early days he was licensed to preach, and was government commissioner to the Paris exposition.

Ex-Governor Lounsberry of Connecticut, still a resident of that state, is now a bank president in New York, and although he is a has been so far as the entire country is concerned, he is still an important factor in the business life of the metropolis of the Atlantic seaboard.

John S. Wise, sometimes called colonel and sometimes ex-governor, who was once much more prominent than he is now, is also living in New York at present. He was a soldier on the Confederate side, but he was neither a colonel nor a captain nor was he ever a governor. It was his father who was governor of Virginia, and who ordered the execution of John Brown. Like some of the others mentioned in this article, although Mr. Wise is less of a public character than in the past, he is making more money during his apparent retirement than he ever was before.

NEW STYLE FARMING

PROJECTED AGRICULTURAL VILLAGE IN THE SACRAMENTO VALLEY.

Irrigation Plays an Important Part In the Plan, Which Is Partly Socialistic—To Make Twenty Acre Farms Profitable. William E. Smythe the Promoter.

A new colonization scheme for Americans has been proposed that appears to be entirely practical, and that is interesting at least. The promulgator is William E. Smythe, who is well and favorably known throughout the west as the editor of The Irrigation Age.

Mr. Smythe's plan is somewhat socialistic and somewhat co-operative, but is not wholly of either nature. He proposes, in brief, to found a farm village somewhat on the order of many that now exist in Europe. He has selected as a site for the proposed colony a ranch of 10,000 acres located in the Sacramento valley in northern California. The property was very valuable in the days when wheat raising was profitable, but since this market has failed the land has depreciated because other crops cannot be raised there on account of lack of irrigation. Mr. Smythe proposes to cut canals through from the Sacramento valley and reclaim this almost arid land.

In the center of this tract 300 acres are to be set aside for a village. The rest is to be cut up into 20 and 10 acre farms. Each purchaser of a farm is to be given a single or half acre lot in the village. The idea is that the farmers shall live in the village and till their adjacent lands. The village is to be surrounded by a broad, circular boulevard on which the houses will face.

Another feature of the plan is to be the system of ownership. The owners of the farms are to constitute a company which shall own the village and conduct various enterprises necessary for the profitable utilization of the crops. Thus there will be a creamery, to use the surplus milk; a cannery for the fruit, a packing house and a starch factory to convert the surplus potatoes into a marketable article.

The most important feature of the plan, and the one on which its life depends, is the irrigation system. This is to be in the hands of the company and the water right goes with the title to every farm. Each colonist is to purchase as many shares of stock as he does acres of land and the capital thus acquired is to be used for the general benefit of the colony. While the Sacramento valley is not actually an arid region, the rainfall is only sufficient for the raising of grain and early vegetables. With sufficient irrigation almost any kind of crops could be raised, as well as such semitropical fruits as oranges, lemons, limes, pomegranates, olives and figs. Good railroad facilities are easy of access and, besides, the Sacramento river furnishes a clear waterway to Sacramento and San Francisco.

It is estimated that a capital of $670 is sufficient to establish a family on a 20 acre farm in the proposed colony and $447 on 10 acres. In return for this it is said that from $50 to $100 an acre can be made over and above living expenses.

Mr. Smythe's idea is to attract a number of thrifty American families to the west, gather them into farm villages like this, where they can rely upon their own efforts to bring them a good living with good prospects for acquiring a modest fortune. A community similar to the one proposed has already been started in Payette Valley, Ida., and in the two years of its existence has prospered greatly.

The plan gives the colonist a great advantage over the individual farmer, for the village company, of which he is a member, furnishes him with water, power, electric light and, what is more, a good market for his products. He gets the benefits of living in a village and is still near to his farm.

Mr. Smythe, the author of this scheme, is neither a wild dreamer nor a selfish land boomer. He is a young, energetic, earnest business man, with lots of practical common sense. He was born in Worcester, Mass., about 34 years ago and comes of Puritan stock. He is a journalist by profession, but has been identified with several successful business enterprises in the west. For two years he was president of the irrigation congress.

His plan is the outcome of a study of various colony schemes that have already been tried, and he claims to have embraced all the best points and avoided the bad ones. The idea is primarily that a hundred such communities would reclaim by irrigation the so called arid lands and secondarily the establishment of combined agricultural and manufacturing communities on a sound financial basis. These colonies would consist of men who owned their own farms and at the same time had an active interest in the community in which they lived. Their interest would not depend on a mere theory. It would be a financial interest and consequently a lasting one. Social economists will watch with great interest the new colony which Mr. Smythe is to establish.

OLIVER BELMONT'S SECOND BRIDE.

She Will Be Alva Vanderbilt, Who Not Long Ago Divorced William K. Vanderbilt.

New York society was not at all surprised when it was recently announced that Mrs. Alva S. Vanderbilt would soon wed Oliver H. P. Belmont. He was one of the guests on the Vanderbilt yacht Valiant in 1893 when Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt disagreed for some reason and the cruise around the world was abandoned. Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Consuelo, went to England, Mr. Vanderbilt went to Paris and Mr. Belmont returned to his home in New York. Then followed Mr. Vanderbilt's escapades in Paris and Mrs. Vanderbilt's suit for divorce in New York. At the time of the divorce it was rumored that Mrs. Vanderbilt would marry Mr. Belmont.

Oliver H. P. Belmont is one of fortune's favorites. He is a son of August Belmont, the world famous banker, who died a few years ago, and a direct descendant on his mother's side of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, who at the age of 27 whipped an entire British squadron of six ships on Lake Erie in 1813 and sent his famous message, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," to General William Henry Harrison. Oliver Belmont as a boy adopted the sea as a profession and with a commendable desire to become a hero like his illustrious ancestor was educated at the Annapolis Naval academy and served long enough to learn that he would probably be old and gray before he rose to the command of a ship.

Resigning from the navy, Belmont married Miss Susan Whiting, who later divorced him, and devoted himself to travel. His father left him a fortune, and his wealth has made it possible for him to visit about every part of the habitable globe. He has also devoted himself to the acquisition of a great racing stud and possesses one of the finest stables of carriage horses in the world. He owns a palatial mansion called Belcourt at Newport and entertains there in princely style. His grand bachelor ball at Belcourt last summer was one of the social sensations of the season.

A WOMAN AT THE WHEEL.

Mrs. Thorrold Steers a Tug and Will Soon Be a Full Fledged Captain.

Mrs. E. Thorrold probably does not know it, but she is a new woman of the thirty-third degree. She is the pioneer tugboat captain of her sex and not only owns, but steers the tug Ethel and Marion in San Francisco harbor. She did not make this departure because it was the fad to do so, but because five children were dependent upon her, and personally conducting a tugboat seemed the best paying thing she could do. Her husband owned the tug, and it gave him a good revenue until one day, during a birthday romp with his little daughter, he was pricked by a pin, blood poisoning set in and he died.

For a time Mrs. Thorrold endeavored to continue his business with the aid of hired help, but the tug's net earnings were insufficient for her needs, and she concluded to learn the business herself. With an engineer at her elbow she took her first lessons and ere long was able to steer the tug as well as a veteran.

This does not mean that she can yet be officially addressed as captain, for she lacks the "papers," without which no one is allowed to engineer a tug on San Francisco's bay, but she is competent to pass the statutory examination and intends soon doing so. Then she will be the titular captain of the Ethel and Marion, as she is now really captain in fact.

The engineer is still with her when she grasps the wheel and the tug goes puffing about among the ships, but Mrs. Thorrold does not need his services in the least. With a brisk business air she rings the bell. Her soft, white hands clutch the wheel firmly; her bright eyes watch the course ahead with unremitting vigilance. The screw begins to turn and the tug is off on a mission that means bread for a family of six. Mrs. Thorrold is not particularly anxious to vote, but she is proud of the fact that she is the only woman skipper of a tugboat in the United States.

AVENGED BY HIS DOG

MURDERER OF TOMAS MARTINEZ BROUGHT TO JUSTICE.

AN AFFECTING STORY THAT COMES FROM SANTA FE.

The Faithful Canine, Seriously Wounded, Leads the Way to the Scene of the Crime and Uncovers the Body of the Victim.

ON CARLOS is a dog of hardy, mongrel breed, the property of the wealthy Martinez family, of Santa Fe, N. M. He is not beautiful, but he is the hero of the countryside. Up to the time of the recent tragedy that made him famous his name was simply Carlos. The "Don" was prefixed in a feeble but praiseworthy attempt to recognize the brute's claim to distinction. That a Mexican should so honor a dog signifies a great deal.

The story of Don Carlos' leap to fame is the story of a foul crime. Don Lorenzo Martinez, of Santa Fe, owns and operates an extensive cattle and horse ranch at Ojo de la Baca (Cow Springs), in the southeastern part of the county. Last January his sons, Tomas and Maximiliano, were there looking after their father's interests. On Thursday morning, Jan. 17, Tomas, the elder of the young men, started away from the ranch on horseback in quest of missing cattle. He was mounted on a good horse, had a first-class saddle and bridle; was well armed and had an excellent equipment of blankets and warm clothing. Carlos, who was accustomed to such trips, eagerly followed his master. As the young man rode away he told Maximiliano that he would be back on Sunday afternoon.

Tomas Martinez never returned.

On Tuesday morning, when Maximiliano was becoming anxious about his missing brother, Carlos limped back to the homestead and fell exhausted on the threshold. There was a ghastly wound in his head, and his limbs were quivering with weakness produced by loss of blood, hunger and exposure. Water was brought to the dog, and he drank greedily. It seemed to restore his strength, for he barked, ran out of the house again, looked around at the younger Martinez, and barked again more loudly.

"Yes! yes! I will come with you, my brave Carlito," replied Maximiliano, whose fears were now thoroughly aroused. "Only you must eat first."

He threw the animal a piece of meat, which Carlos devoured in two gulps, and quickly saddled a horse. Tomas had ridden south, and Maximiliano started in the same direction. But Carlos barked distressfully, and ran almost due east, turning round every few yards with such manifest tokens of intelligence and purpose that Maximiliano spurred on his horse and blindly followed the dog.

With his nose to the ground, and pausing only to drink at the brink of a creek, Carlos led the horseman nine miles across country to Don Lorenzo Martinez's round-up corral at La Muralla. As Miximiliano dismounted, Carlos, yelping as if with pain, rushed to the remains of what had evidently been an unusually large camp fire and began digging furiously in the ashes.

And then, amid the black and gray ashes disturbed by the dog, young Martinez found a curious thing. It was a foot, his brother's foot. Although it was charred he had no difficulty in recognizing Tomas' heavy shoe and overshoe. A moment later he discovered the large bone of a human pelvis, burned to a dead flaky white. All around, as his eyes grew accustomed to the sight, appeared smaller bones, but they crumbled at a touch.

The riddle of the grewsome heap was solved.

Jesus Vialpando and Feliciano Chavez were arrested, tried and hanged the other day in the presence of 2,000 people. Pablo Martinez, a brother of murdered Tomas, followed them to the scaffold. Don Carlos was at his heels. The crowd cheered the dog. Jesus Vialpando turned his lean, dark face in time to catch a glimpse of the brute's scarred and ferocious head, and a great shudder passed over him just as Sheriff Cunningham pulled the lever. Don Carlos' work was done.

VICTIM TO MISFORTUNE.

Did Not Complain Until His Favorite Fiddle Was Broken.

From the Washington Star: John Stratton has just returned from Wise county, Virginia, where he went to survey some coal lands. "While down there I saw a modern Job," he said to a Star writer. "I was about twenty miles from Gladeville, the county seat, when a storm threatened. Not wanting to be out in the mountains during a storm I hastened to a log cabin. Under a tree in front sat a ragged, uncouth looking man playing a fiddle. In the tree was a half-grown boy.

"'Come right in, mister,' was his answer to my request for shelter. 'I don't reckon it'll rain much no how. Kin' o' quit rainin' hyar. Didn' rain all summer, an' all the craps I got war one leetle bunch o' 'baccer.'

"'Pretty hard luck,' I said.

"'Yaas, middlin.' But I didn't keer so much as when the ole 'ooman tried ter get water outen the well. It war mos' dry an' it kin' o' took a knack ter git it. So she leaned over too far an' fell in. She's thar yit. I hain't got no way to git her out, an' as she didn't never know what hurt her I reckon I'll jest fill up the well an' put a board up ter mark her grave.'

"'Well, you seem to have had a great deal of trouble,' I remarked.

"'Yaas, it sartain looks like a heap. But the wust was when my mewl, the only one I hed, got stuck in the quicksan' down yonder an' we hed to shoot 'im. I war broke up over that, but I've still got my boy up thar in the tree an' my fiddle.'

"At that moment there was a clap of thunder. The old man laid his fiddle tenderly upon the chair he had occupied and started for the house, carrying the chair and its precious burden. The boy in trying to get down from the tree slipped and fell, striking the fiddle and splitting it into several pieces. The old man lifted up the fragments and, with tears in his eyes, said: 'I reckon I'm ruint now.'"

per's Ferry, W. Va., disappeared from Camden Station a few days ago. Though detectives have been at work ever since they were unable to solve the mystery. Miss Stewart went to Baltimore to visit her sister. She had promised her mother to send a message from the station announcing her arrival. She notified her mother by letter from the station that she had just sent a message to her sister. The clerk at the news stand remembered selling the girl the stationery and saw her write two letters. Who got the second is a question. Detective Riordan of Baltimore says he saw her leave with a man and woman. Her father, who is assisting the police, fears that she has been abducted. The girl has never been away from home before. She wore short dresses, and had no male visitors.

Flee from the Ghost of an Indian.

An Osage Indian, named Webster, was killed at the Osage village, near Grey Horse, six weeks ago. His wife and mother-in-law were first charged with murdering him, but at the investigation of the matter it was decided that Webster came to his death by falling upon a butcher knife in his own hand while running after his wife and threatening to kill her. The Indians accepted this verdict at the time. Now they say there is something wrong, as the spirit of the dead man returns among them every night, weeping and wailing and demanding justice. Every night at the very hour Webster died a strange wailing sound is heard where his old wigwam stood and a luminous object moves about for a time. Many white people have seen it and cannot explain it, while the Indians all declare they recognize Webster's voice and that he is demanding to be avenged. So agitated have they become over the matter that they are abandoning the village and moving to other parts of the reservation.

An Important Item.

Dingle—I hear you are going to get married next month?

Wingle—Yes; I hope to.

Dingle—Well, I suppose you are pretty busy. Have you selected a place to live in yet?

Wingle—Not yet.

Dingle—Haven't got around to it, I suppose. What are you going to give your bride for a wedding present?

Wingle—I don't know.

Dingle—That so? Decided on the ushers' presents yet?

Wingle—Not yet.

Dingle—Well, well! Going to keep house or board?

Wingle—Can't tell.

Dingle—You are a strange fellow. On the eve of your wedding and nothing done. What are you waiting for, anyway?

Wingle—I am waiting, old man, to learn the size of her father's check.

A Way of Accounting For It.

"How do you account for the rapid changes of the weather?" said Kilduff to Skidmore.

"I attribute them to the presence of quicksilver in the thermometers."

ROASTED WILLIAM II.

THE MAN WHO IS BRAVING THE KAISER'S FURY.

Herr Bebel, Leader of the Social Democrats in the German Reichstag, Has No Use for Empire or Emperor—Threatened Revolution.

FERDINAND August Bebel, whose fierce attack in the German parliament upon Emperor William II. on the occasion of the debate relating to the curtailment of the right of free assemblage has caused so much commotion in Germany, shares the leadership of the social-democratic party in that country with Herr Liebknecht. The latter is considered the more academic, but Bebel—in every sense a self-made man—undoubtedly has more force with the masses. He was born Feb. 22, 1840, in Cologne, and received his early education in a village school near that city. Later on he attended grammar school in Wetzlar, and in 1860 he removed to Leipsic, where he established his own business, that of wood-turner and carver, in 1864. Two years prior to that date he had joined in the workingmen's movement in Germany, and soon became one of the most aggressive leaders in that cause. From 1865 to 1890, when he removed to Berlin, Bebel was president of the Workingmen's Educational club in Leipsic and member of the permanent executive committee of the German Workingmen's association. In 1867 he became identified with the editorial management of the Volkstaat, a socialistic paper in Leipsic, and continued this connection until he became one of the managers of the Vorwaerts, the leading German socialistic daily, published in Berlin. He was elected to the North German parliament in 1867 and to the German parliament in 1871. In the election of June, 1893, he was even elected in two districts, choosing the mandate from the Strasburg district. From the beginning of Bebel's parliamentary career dates his uncompromising attitude against all monarchical institutions. Bebel seems to be in the dark about the policy of his own party, for when he was asked in February, 1893, during a session of parliament, what sort of thing he thought the socialistic state should be he remained silent despite repeated taunts. Bebel is at present treasurer of the socialist party in Germany, to which office he was elected in 1892. During the re-organization of the party in 1890, Bebel advocated parliamentarianism as the chief means of agitation, but in this he was opposed by the extremists of the party. He served as a delegate to the international socialist congresses in Paris, 1889; Brussels, 1891; Zurich, 1893, and Breslau during the present year. On the latter occasion he made his famous speech, in which he said that socialism would finally crush imperialism, for which he has just been sentenced to six months' imprisonment. In 1872 Bebel and Liebknecht together were tried on a charge of attempted high treason against the German empire and the kingdom of Saxony. Each was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, which they served, and Bebel had to serve an additional nine months for lese majeste. Bebel is the author of a number of books on socialism, chief among them "Woman and Socialism," 1893, six editions; "Christianity and Socialism," 1883, nineteen editions, and "Our Aims," 1884, six editions. He has on several occasions come out unequivocally in favor of the Paris commune and the internationalists.

HERR BEBEL.
(German Socialist.)

How to Prepare Spaghetti Timbale.

Spaghetti timbale makes a pretty dish. Cook long pieces of spaghetti in salted water until they are tender. Lay the pieces on a napkin to cool, being careful not to break them. Butter a dome-shaped mold. Wind the spaghetti around the mold, holding it in place with a layer of force meat. Fill the mold with boiled macaroni and cheese. Make a layer of force meat thick enough to give the timbale stability. Cover with greased paper, stand in a pan of hot water and poach in a slow oven for thirty minutes.

To Colonize Guatemala.

Albert A. Whitman, the octoroon poet and evangelist, is the author of a scheme to colonize Guatemala with quadroons and octoroons, and to establish an independent government. It has been the dream of Whitman's life to found a nation which shall be composed exclusively of the quadroons and octoroons of the United States, whom he denominates the "new race."

Prepared.

Mrs. Hobb—"My husband came home last night and told me he was ruined. Do you know, I think I must have had a premonition of it?"

Mrs. Nobb—"Why?"

Mrs. Hobb—"It was only last week that I ordered a complete new wardrobe."

A Slight Difference.

She—"Is it true that you wouldn't stop playing poker to eat?"

He—"Not exactly. But frequently after playing poker I stop eating."

WOMAN AND HOME.

UP-TO-DATE READING FOR WOMEN AN GIRLS.

Some Current Notes of the Modes—Timely Recipes for the Cookery—Housekeeping Education — Wearing Bloomers Is Only a Fad—Fashion Notes.

THE GIRL who can neither afford a sealskin coat nor a chinchilla cape because of their tremendous cost consoles herself very well indeed with one of the lovely velvet coats, of which there are such a variety. A very girlish jacket of black velvet is cut in the Norfolk style and falls below the waist to a depth of several inches. It fits the graceful form easily, without being at all snug, and has broad box plaits down both back and front. The front of the coat is cut away to display a smoothly fitted vest of heavy white satin, fastened under the left side with invisible hooks and eyes. A broad sailor collar of white satin, overlaid with costly point de Venise lace, finishes the shoulders prettily. A belt of stiffened velvet encircles the waist, following the slight fullness in gracefully to the form. The cost of a velvet coat is more than one would imagine at first thought until one goes on a hunting expedition through the shops in search of one and finds the prices ranging from $50 to $75 for the cheapest.

Some very fetching cloth coats are being put up for sale in a few of the most exclusive shops, mostly of light, pale tan, in heavy melton, with trimmings of Russian sable, silver fox or beaver. They are in the reefer form and are extremely short, with cute little ripples at the back, made so stiff that flattening is impossible. There is a broad collar of the sable and a narrow facing of the same all down the front, giving it the effect of being fur lined. A coat of this sort cannot be had for less than $40, but they are well worth the price, because they do look very easy and so very becoming.—Chicago Chronicle.

Robed Like a Queen of Old.

The fashionable woman fairly revels in luxury this season, for all the modes are decidedly luxurious, and very poorly suited to slim purses. Velvets and furs, furs and velvets seem to be the beginning and end of fashion's dictums, and, oh, such costly furs! Ermine never was cheap, possibly because it is the fur of royalty, possibly because of its own worth—but it was always beautiful, and is so now, a fact most women realize and utilize to the best of their ability, says a Chicago paper.

An altogether charming cape, with long stole ends, is among the fur wraps of one of Chicago's beauties, and a regal appearance she makes in its snowy beauty. The body of the cape is of rich olive green velvet, extremely full, and edged broadly with a rich embroidery placed flatly on it. Over this flutters a deep butterfly cape of ermine, with a jaunty collar standing up about the face. One end of the cape is drawn over the bust, surplice fashion, or, rather, in the style of the favorite fichus, and from the waist fall two long tails of the fur, finished with a row of tails. A dainty ermine muff completes the set. Richly brocaded satin, with a peachy pink groundwork, lines the garment throughout, while the same shade of pink is seen in the smart head-dress of roses, topped off by a single black plume. So many fetching affairs are made for theater wear, in which ermine is combined. One very pretty one, and one easily copied, has for a foundation an ermine collarette with a small head and tail. Full jabots of webby lace were arranged softly at the front; in the folds were nestled snugly bunches of pale pink roses with foliage. The muff was a bewilderment of lace, chiffon, ermine and posies, but all so artistically arranged as to call forth small shrieks and exclamations of highest approval from feminine friends. The groundwork of white silk has soft folds of white chiffon, seemingly thrown on, and held in place at the ends by bands of ermine and tufts of roses. A frill of lace bordered each side, and a huge silver chain held the dainty thing about the shoulders.

Housekeeping Education.

Anna Bell asks if it is better for a young woman to take up a business career rather than to learn housekeeping and sewing. She wonders if the future woman will be more independent and self-reliant than the woman of the past, and if with all the modern inventions woman's work will not be easier and more pleasant. Answer—Anna Bell is evidently infected by the new woman craze, and is going entirely astray on the subject of the future woman. Now Anna, dear, just stop right off short, and open your eyes, and you will see that there isn't any new woman. She is a will-o'-the-wisp, and no one can find her, and, indeed, as far as the writer can find out, nobody wants to. Just as long as there are homes in this beautiful and lovable world of ours, just so long there will be need of housekeepers and housekeeping. And this is a good business for women to learn. In fact, a woman is of very little account if she has not the ability to direct a household. As long as there are lovers and marriages and homes and babies and little children, and big boys that need counsel and comfort, and big girls that must have a haven of rest, and—whisper it low—old boys and girls that are just as much in need of loving and looking after as ever the little ones were or could be, just that length of time home-making and homekeeping will be the best and brightest and sweetest of all things for a woman to learn and practice. Knowing this, she may add to her information what she will, but the feminine character is not complete, nor can it be, without the development of the housekeeping instinct that is latent in every woman's heart.

Deep Vandyke Points.

The great majority of dress skirts are perfectly plain, but occasionally the designers sent out a decorated skirt which calls forth honest admiration, and in spite of the beauty of the plain skirt is positive relief from so much simplicity.

A brand new design is shown, one of the latest productions, a combination of smoky-gray melton, a lovely silvery toned, smooth-finished cloth, and gay plaid in the genuine Tartan shade, scarlet, gold and green, in rich velvet.

The skirt, a full-gored affair, is cut all about the bottom in deep vandyke points, to show the underskirt of plaid velvet. The body of the bodice is of the gray cloth, also cut in deep points, meeting at the shoulder, over an underpiece of plaid velvet. The top of the huge melon sleeves are treated in the same way. The entire gown is a striking model, and yet full of chic.

With it, for street wear, is seen a smart little coat of gray melton, with a saucy rolling collar, and huge puffed sleeves. A broadly rolling hat of gray felt with a narrow edge of chinchilla as a finish has a flat decoration of ostrich plumes on top, with one tall upright one directly in the center.—Chicago Chronicle.

Timely Recipes.

Drop Cakes—Beat half a pound of butter and a pound of sugar together, sift in a quart of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add six beaten eggs and a cupful of milk, stir, and drop off the spoon on buttered paper, and bake in a very hot oven. The batter should be very thick.

Cheese Fingers—Roll out a sheet of puff paste very thin, brush over very lightly with ice water, cut in strips about five inches long and half an inch wide, sprinkle with grated cheese, put one strip over the other, lay on a greased tin sheet, and bake in a quick oven fifteen minutes.

Clara Cole—Clean brass frames with a slice of lemon; rub it over the spots, and when dry apply a little Spanish whitening to brighten the brass.

Elizabeth A.—Finger bowls are set on plates with small doilies under them; they may be white or colored glass, and the doilies any style desired.

Wearing Bloomers.

A bicycle club of girls are anxious to know if bloomers are to be worn next season, and if they are approved by the best authorities. Answer—It is very evident, girls, that you are not regular readers, else you would have been rooted and grounded, as it were, in the latest ideas on bloomers. It is perfectly safe to say that the time is not far distant when women will find their cheeks getting red when they recall the spectacle they have made of themselves by going out wheeling in bloomers. They are merely a craze, and one that is without sense or reason. Thousands of women have never worn them, and for this they will probably be very thankful. As to the authorities that approve of them, that is a matter of opinion. Many very excellent women wear them, but that proves nothing. The bloomer fad is dying out, and a not very lingering death either. Wear moderately short skirts and gaiters, girls, and let bloomers severely alone. One of the best styles is a skirt just to the instep in front and almost touching the ground at the back. When you mount, see that the back seam of the skirt comes exactly over the middle of the saddle. This prevents showing the ankles at the back, and gives a much more graceful and stylish effect than a very short skirt. It is safe and comfortable and becoming, and this cannot be said of all costumes.—New York Ledger.

Scheme to Kill a Family.

At Greensburg an attempt to destroy an entire family was brought to light the other day. The tool house at George's Station, five miles east of Greensburg, was discovered to be on fire. It was situated 25 feet from the dwelling of M. Maloy, the section foreman for the Pennsylvania railroad. An attempt had been made to chloroform Maloy and his wife and little daughter by throwing rags saturated with the drug into their bedroom. Maloy had left a window raised, and the chloroform did not take effect. Maloy was awakened by the flames in the tool house. The flames had communicated to his own house, which was saved with help from neighbors.

Pretty Minnie's Complaint.

Charles Pool and Alonzo Eakins were arrested at Portsmouth, O., for kidnapping Minnie Eakins, 17 years old. Minnie is a sister of one of the men. She had gone to Ironton with the family of John Hatton to escape, as she said, the attentions of Pool, who, it was claimed, was trying to have the girl marry him.

MINNIE EAKINS.

The two found the girl at Mr. Hatton's house, and were trying to make her go with them.

BRODIE

Sir Benjamin Brodie, of England,

States That Pareira Brava, One of the Ingredients of Dr. Hobbs' Kidney Pills,

Is the Most Wonderful Remedy for Kidney, Bladder and Womb Troubles in the World.

All Indianapolis Joins Him.

"If I was limited to but one remedy in all the world for kidney and urinary disorders, I would unhesitatingly select Pareira Brava. It is the best and most satisfactory all-round remedy I have ever seen and is the only one with which I have been able, thus far, to give unfailing relief in Bright's Disease."

Pareira Brava is one of the principal ingredients of Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills that have just been publicly tested by the newspapers and public of Indianapolis. The other ingredients are Asparagus Root and Berries, Buchu Leaves, Juniper Berries, Uva Ursi and Corn Silk.

Is it any wonder that, with such an array of kidney specifics, gathered in their purest and freshest form regardless of expense, and cunningly and scientifically concentrated, refined and combined as they are in this great remedy, that Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills have won signal victory in the great public test at Indianapolis and that it is daily winning golden opinions from the press, the pulpit, the public and the medical profession in every part of this country.

It is a discovery of incalculable value to all mankind, and stamps Dr. Hobbs as one of the greatest discoverers of the age, and we are not surprised that every medical man in the country feels proud to honor his name.

From the Indianapolis Journal Dec 12th.

Saloon Keeper.

Mr. Henry Ostendorf, of 81 North Illinois street, said: "I obtained a sample package of Dr Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills for use in my family, one of whom has had serious kidney trouble for some time past. Since using them I am glad to say there has not been a recurrence of the trouble. I shall always keep them for use in my family."

LESSON III, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 19.

Text of the Lesson, Luke iii, 15-22—Memory Verses, 21, 22—Golden Text, John i, 29—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

15. "And as the people were in expectation and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ or not." John was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel (chapter i, 80). Then in God's appointed time the word of God came unto John in the wilderness, and he went forth to preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (chapter iii, 2, 3). The effect upon many of the people was simply that of suspense and debating as to whether John was the Christ or not. See margin. Some of them asked him if he was the Christ or Elijah or that prophet. They need not have debated the question, nor have remained in suspense, had they been subject to the prophets Isaiah and Malachi, nor would they have reasoned much as to who John was had they been truly expecting Him whom John preached.

16. "John answered, saying unto them all: I indeed baptize you with water, but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose. He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." John said that he was neither Elijah nor Christ nor the prophet, but only a voice—to be heard and not seen—crying, "Make straight the way of the Lord." And so he cried, "Behold the Lamb of God!" (John i, 21, 23, 29, 36.) When afterward they told John that all were following Jesus, he said: "This my joy, therefore, is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease" (John iii, 29, 30). This beautiful spirit of John which seeks nothing for self, but aims only to magnify the Lord, is very much to be desired and is within our reach, for it is the Spirit of Christ Himself, who never sought His own will nor His own glory (John v, 30; vi, 38; viii, 50). He is ready to fill us with His Spirit (Luke xi, 13), and He will when we are ready by His grace to live His life (II Cor. iv, 10, 11).

17. "Whose fan is in His hand, and He will thoroughly purge His floor and will gather the wheat into His garner, but the chaff He will burn with fire unquenchable." The baptism of Israel with the Holy Spirit and with fire will be as the harvest time, the end of this age (Math. xiii, 40-43; Isa. xliv, 3; Mal. iii, 2), but individual believers may and should be filled with the Spirit now, and they may also know somewhat of the experience of fire, for there is much dross in us to be consumed. The unquenchable fire is, however, the same as the Lord Himself referred to in Mark ix, 43-48; Math. xiii, 42. See also Rev. xiv, 9-11.

18. "And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people." In John iii, 26-36, we find that, among the other things, John preached that Jesus is the Son of God (see also chapter i, 34); that He was sent of God; that He spake the words of God; that whosoever receives the Son hath life, but he that receives not the Son hath no life, but abides under the wrath of God; that a man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven, and that it is a great honor to be a friend of the Bridegroom, even of Jesus Christ. Elsewhere He taught that repentance is nothing unless it is proved to be real by works corresponding thereto. We may listen to preaching as sound and Christ honoring as that of John, but we read that even the word of God will not profit those who hear it unless they believe it (Heb. iv, 2).

19. "But Herod, the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done." The particulars of this will be found in Mark vi, 17-20, where it is also written that Herod believed John to be a just and holy man, heard him gladly and did many things. Some would say, therefore, that John might have done more for Herod if he had kept his favor and been gentle with him and not rebuked his sin, but the true servant of God has no thought of pleasing men so as to keep their favor, even though they be as great as Herod (Gal. i, 10). Our one and constant aim must be to please Him who has given us so great a trust as His gospel (II Thess. ii, 4).

20. "Added yet this above all—that he shut up John in prison." This was no new experience for a prophet of the Lord, as a king of Judah put Hanani in prison because of the Lord's message through him. Micaiah was smitten, put in prison and fed on bread and water because he was faithful to God. Jeremiah also was smitten and imprisoned in the dungeon (II Chron. xvi, 10; xviii, 23, 26; Jer. xxxvii, 15). The Lord Jesus told His apostles very plainly that they must not fear tribulation, imprisonment or even death (John xvi, 1, 2, 33; Rev. ii, 10; Math. x, 28). In Jas. v, 10, we read that the prophets are to us an example of suffering, affliction and of patience, and in II Pet. ii, 21-23, our Lord Himself is spoken of as our example in these things.

21. "Now, when all the people were baptized, it came to pass that, Jesus also being baptized and praying, the heaven was opened." Luke is the only one who speaks of Jesus praying at His baptism. He spent much time in prayer. How can we do His works without it? Matthew tells us that John at first objected to baptizing Him on account of his (John's) greater need, but that Jesus replied, saying, "Suffer it to be so now to fulfill all righteousness" (Math. iii, 14, 15). Jesus was and is righteousness itself and becomes our righteousness when we accept Him (Rom. x, 4; II Cor. v, 21). See heaven opened in John i; Acts vii, x; Rev. iv, xix, and Ezek. i.

22. "And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon Him, and a voice came from heaven which said: Thou art My beloved Son. In Thee I am well pleased." He was and is the true ark, where only the dovelike Spirit finds perfect rest. At Pentecost we read of tongues of fire in connection with the Spirit coming upon the disciples, but Christ needed no fire. He was always and in all things well pleasing to God. If we are willing to live His life, He will by His Spirit work in us that which is well pleasing in His sight (II Cor. iv, 11; v, 9; Rom. xii, 1, 2; Heb. xiii, 21). His life had but one aim—to glorify God.

The Queen of Happiness.

The modest virgin, the prudent wife or the careful matron is much more serviceable in life than petticoated philosophers, blustering heroines or virago queens. She who makes her husband and her children happy, who reclaims the one from vice and trains up the other to virtue, is a much greater character than ladies described in romance, whose whole occupation is to murder mankind with shafts from their quiver or their eyes.—Goldsmith.

Didn't Know Human Nature.

"Brown seems to be very excitable. I saw him chase his hat today down a crowded street."

"Well, what of that?"

"If he'd been cool and only waited, somebody would have caught it, brushed it and brought it back to him."—Chicago Record.

His Knowledge.

"You," said the disgusted gambler, "don't know enough to come in when it rains."

"Perhaps not," said the man who had been there with a wan smile, "but I do know enough to stay out on a pat flush."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE LOST PARADISE.

THE room had been very still for a long while; only the even, monotonous splash of the outgoing tide, and now and again a restless, unconscious movement of the dying woman in the bed, disturbed the awe-some stillness of the night.

In the big arm chair by the bed side, in the light of the lamp, sat a gaunt woman, angular and haggard, with thin, compressed lips, yellow skin, light eyes, and dead-straw colored hair drawn tightly back from her forehead and twisted in an uncompromising knot at the nape of her neck.

She had watched for many weary nights now beside the bed, but still her eyes were wide and watchful, and her attitude alert. She counted each fluttering breath of the girlish form beneath the sheet, she noted each quiver of the unconscious eyelids.

The night wore on, and, with the coming of the gray dawn, a wind arose, moaning round the little house, and shaking the fastenings of the sick room window.

The dying woman stirred; she moaned, then slowly opened her eyes. Great sad, blue eyes—like a child's in trouble. She fixed them upon the watcher in the chair with a pathetic look of entreaty.

"Hepzibah!" The pale lips just formed the whispered word.

The gaunt woman rose hastily and bent over her.

"Hepzibah—you have been very good to me——"

A painful pause, breathing was so difficult.

"Am I dying, now?"

The woman bending over her made no response, but tears gathered in her hard eyes, her thin lips quivered.

"No, you need not tell me. I know I am. I can feel it. Hepzibah—you have been so good to me. There is something that—you—must—do—for me—when I am gone——"

Hepzibah bent over her, waiting, watching.

The dying girl raised one feeble hand, pointing toward the old bureau in the corner of the room.

"There—in the third drawer on the left—a packet—letters—will you bring them to me?"

Hepzibah brought over to her a little bundle, tied round with faded pink ribbon.

The dying woman fingered it lovingly, wistfully..

"They are Jack's letters—my Jack, Hepzibah! For when I am gone, I trust you to burn them for me, Tom must never know. Poor Tom—he has been a good husband to me; but I loved Jack first—only he was so wild—I did not know that he cared for me. And—he went away in a temper—and I married Tom. But when Jack came back from sea, last time, I—I found out how much he cared. It was terrible—and I loved him so! Then he was drowned—my poor Jack——"

A weak sob choked her broken whispering.

"Promise you will burn them, Hepzibah, for Tom's sake——"

"Dear, I promise."

"You have been so good to me, so patient with me. When I am gone you will be good to poor Tom."

A dull red flush overspread the woman's face. She turned her head into the shadow.

"I will do what I can, Nelly," she responded, in a smothered voice.

"Call Tom now, I fell I am soon—going. I feel so cold—so numb!"

Hepzibah hastly left the room. She was back in an instant, following by a stout, ruddy-faced man of about 50. He stepped softly to the bed, and took the dying woman's hand in his big grasp.

"Come, Nell, my lass, you must bear a brave heart. We'll have you better soon." There were tears in his cheery voice.

Nellie looked at him with a faint smile; she raised the big red hand in which her own was imprisoned to her lips. Then, exhausted by her recent efforts, she closed her eyes and seemed to sleep. Presently she started violently; her eyes opened in terror.

"The letters! You will burn them, Hepzibah——"

Tom turned to Hepzibah wonderingly. He thought the delirium had returned.

"What letters does she mean?" he asked.

Hepzibah was silent; she averted her eyes. Then——

"She means her dead mother's letters," she replied in a steady voice.

The dying woman looked her gratitude for the saving lie. There was silence again, and a solemn sense of waiting in the room. At last Nellie made a faint movement with her hand.

Hepzibah comprehended instantly; she stepped to the window, drew aside the curtain and opened wide the sash. So Nelly looked for the last time upon her little world.

Nelly's big, sad eyes took in all the beauty of the morning, then they gently closed.

"I am coming, Jack—dear——" she sighed.

So Nelly Thurgood, Tom Thurgood's young wife, died, and was buried in the little churchyard by the sea; and the tide came in, and the tide went out, through the long summer days and nights, and peaceful order reigned in the little cottage, for Hepziban was a notable housekeeper, and Tom was grateful to her in a dull, impersonal way. His heart was buried in the newly made grave on the cliff side, and nothing seemed real to him but that.

Hepzibah watched him from under her white eyelashes and kept silent, but his pipe was all ready for him when he came indoors, and his favorite food simmered on the hob.

Hepzibah's hair grew brighter as the days went on; her cheeks had a comely flush; she began to take thought of her dress. She bought a blue gingham gown in the village, and a muslin handkerchief for her neck. Her voice took a softer note, she began to sing about her work.

But Tom would sit in the churchyard through the long summer twilights, and when he came into supper his feet dragged wearily, and his eyes were dull with misery.

"You should not grieve so," said Hepzibah softly, one night after supper. She was knitting in the firelight; her head was bent over her work.

Tom woke up from a dream; he looked at her with seeing eyes.

"Ah, it's well to say that to a man whose heart is breaking!"

His voice grew husky; he turned his head away to the fire.

"But you shouldn't grieve as one without hope. Time must soften things a bit—you have your life before you."

Tom laughed a short, bitter laugh, not good to hear.

"She was all I had—my Nellie. The apple of my eye. What good's life to me now? Such pretty ways she had, too," he went on, musingly; "such tender, loving ways——"

Hepzibah's needle flashed in the firelight.

"There are other women in the world as fond as Nellie," she said softly, with her eyes on her knitting.

There was a long silence in the room. The fire flickered; a cinder fell on the hearth. Hepzibah could hear her heart throbs; she slowly lifted her eyes to the man's face.

He was not looking at her at all, but at a china shepherdess upon a little table against the wall. His eyes were troubled; he was trying to remember.

"My Nellie did not keep that on there. No, it was on the mantlepiece, here, that she had it."

He brought the ornament over, dusting it with his handkerchief.

"We must keep the things as she left them, Hepzibah," he said. But Hepzibah had slipped out of the door into the summer darkness.

She rested her arms on the little gate, and stood looking far out to sea. Her face shone white and ghostly in the dimness. She shivered in the warm air.

"You dead woman—you Nelly," she whispered tensely, "why will you not give him up to me? You have your Jack, you do not want him—and I—oh, my God!"

A great tearless sob choked her; the shimmering waves mocked her; her face hardened.

"Why should I not tell him? I shall do you no harm. Are you anywhere here to care at all? God, the life beyond—are these anything but words? How can one hurt the dead? You are asleep in the churchyard there; and I love him—and I tell you I love him!"

The man was sitting smoking moodily, gazing into the glowing fire, when Hepzibah glided in, and stood behind his chair.

"Tom, I can't bear that you should grieve so. She wasn't worthy of a love like yours."

"Hepzibah!"

* * * * * * *

"The letters!"

Hepzibah laid the packet on the table and crept up the staircase to her room. She fell on her knees by the bedside, clutching the coverlet tight over her mouth, that her deep-voiced prayer might be stifled. She shook as with the ague. The gates of heaven and hell were open.

The still hours passed by. Night waned, but Hepzibah, wild-eyed and numb, crouched by her bed, straining her ears for any sound from the room below. Anything, anything, but this deadly silence. The hours seemed eternities.

It grew unbearable. Disheveled, wan, fearful, she crept down the stairs and peered in.

Tom Thurgood sat at the table, writing by the dim candle light. He had on his rough pilot's coat; a bundle tied in a red handkerchief rested beside him.

Hepzibah's broken cry aroused him. He rose and came toward her.

"I'm going away—back to sea again," he said gravely. "You're we'come to the cottage and the bits of furniture. There's no home for me now—the place would kill me. Out on the brine I shall be able to forget—perhaps. Good by, my lass. I shall be gone before you are up. Go back to bed, woman. Good by; there, go."

He turned back to his writing, and the room was quiet again. Presently he threw down his pen and passed his inky fingers through his hair.

"The wind moans terribly to-night," he said.

It was Hepzibah above, crying for her lost paradise.—Ex.

EVA M'DONALD-VALEST.

She Is a Brainy Labor Editor and Is to Study the Working Classes Abroad.

EVA M'DONALD-VALEST.

Mrs. Eva McDonald-Valest is a talented labor editor of Minneapolis who can talk as well as she can write. She made a speech before the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor in New York, and, with her husband, soon leaves for Europe to spend six months studying the condition of the working classes. Recently she spoke as follows concerning her career:

"I am a printer by trade. My father was a carpenter, and when I was 15 years of age I began working for my living. Nine years ago I joined the Knights of Labor. There was a strike among the girls in an overall factory at Minneapolis, and I made a speech before them.

"J. P. McGaughy, the labor leader, heard of my speech, which had made something of a 'hit,' and took me about with him, and had me address the meetings he attended. He used to send my addresses to the official organ of the Knights of Labor.

"Later on I decided to go through the experience of the girls who work in big factories for their living. I took positions in various concerns and wrote a series of articles afterward on the condition of the operatives. After that I began to attend labor conventions and became acquainted with most of the prominent labor leaders. This acquaintance convinced me that the Federation of Labor was the most practical organization possible for effecting the purposes of the working classes. My husband was perhaps chiefly instrumental in converting me to my faith in the federation. When the Populist wave swept over Minnesota, I was appointed state lecturer for the Farmers' Alliance, and also assistant national lecturer. Four years ago I made a trip to western New York, lecturing in the company of Mrs. Lease, Jerry Simpson and Senator Peffer.

"My keen interest in the affairs of labor does not prevent my participating, in a measure, in the woman suffrage movement and the dress reform crusade. Some persons have asked me how I manage to keep all these different occupations from conflicting with my home life, but I tell them that it is not by any means an impossibility."

HAWTHORNE'S NOVEL THE BEST.

Career of the Brilliant Novelist Who Recently Captured a $10,000 Prize.

Julian Hawthorne has written almost as many novels as F. Marion Crawford, the literary perpetual motor of the century. A few years ago he displayed wonderful activity with his pen, and novel after novel was published in quick succession. Then he apparently ceased writing, and the numerous admirers of his work have looked in vain for something new from his study. It now appears that Hawthorne was simply emulating the example of Brer Rabbit. He "lay low" for a time and then suddenly flashed into view as winner of the $10,000 prize offered by a New York newspaper for the best novel. The competition was open to the entire world, and Hawthorne's victory against scores of opponents, many of whom were undoubtedly amateurs, is excellent evidence that in literary as well as in other contests trained talent is bound to win on its merits against untrained talent.

Hawthorne's winning novel was entitled "Between Two Fires." It was submitted under a nom de plume, "Judith Hollinshed," and was not accompanied by the real name of the author. Hawthorne has been living in Kingston, Jamaica, for some time past and was there when he received from his agent the very welcome news that he had won first prize and $10,000. What Hawthorne did at this juncture is not of record, but if small cold bottles and large hot birds are indigenous to Jamaica, as well as ginger, he probably celebrated his victory.

Hawthorne was born in Boston June 22, 1846. He attended Harvard, where he made a great reputation as an athlete, but was not conspicuous as a student. He remained at college until his class graduated in 1867, but failed to receive a degree himself. His physique was so remarkable that John C. Heenan seriously advised him to become a prize fighter. He became a civil engineer instead and from civil engineering turned to short story and novel writing, despite the advice of his father, Nathaniel Hawthorne. His first novel, "Bressant," attracted a great deal of attention, and he has since written "Saxon Studies," "Sebastian Strome," "Sinfire," "Mrs. Gainsborough's Diamonds," "Archibald Malmaison," "Fortune's Fool," "Imperial Millions," "Beatrix Randolph" and many others that have been popular and profitable.

In the city of Providence, with a population of 145,472, the women outnumber the men by 5,000.

A terrible and blood curdling secret order is announced as founded and flourishing in the United States. Its dread mysteries, its occult laws, grips and passwords are familiar only to those who have passed its hidden portals and ridden the goat around its secret hiding places to the music of hollow groans which the very walls echo back in affright. This secret order, so 'tis said, is named the "Patriots of America," and its awful purpose is the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1. Are there any "Patriots of America" down your way?

It is a little odd that stock speculators on both sides of the water blame President Cleveland for disturbing the even tenor of their respective gambling schemes. Why do not some of them blame Salisbury, first for refusing to give any reply at all for six months to the American note on the Venezuelan boundary question, then for refusing to arbitrate? Mere patriotism, if they had any, would dictate that the American stock gamblers at least should blame Salisbury for the scare.

Cured of Gallstones.

The Dr. J. H. McLean Medicine Co., ST. LOUIS, MO.

GENTLEMEN: For upwards of ten years I suffered from what the doctors called neuralgia of the stomach, but they could do nothing for me. At one time I was taken with a most excruciating pain and in my agony I prayed for death to relieve me. My husband sent to Lincoln for another doctor, who came, and after examination, pronounced my trouble to be gallstones. The only relief I received was when the doctors injected morphine, and that was only temporary. I was reading in your almanac where

DR. J. H. McLEAN'S LIVER and KIDNEY BALM

Cured a case of gallstones. My husband thought I had better try it, so he bought a bottle. That bottle gave me so much relief I was encouraged to keep on with it. I used seven bottles, and am now, thanks to its great healing power, cured sound and well. I am unable to express my gratitude to you for the benefit I have received from your wonderful medicine. I have recommended it to many people since my recovery, and shall always do so when I have the opportunity. You may make use of this letter in any way you desire.

Yours respectfully,

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Turkish Excesses in Armenia Vividly Portrayed.

Dr. Talmage Tells Why He Did Not Go to Armenia with the Relief Fund—Words of Commendation for Clara Barton.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage told the story of the Armenian massacres to his Washington congregation, predicating his remarks on the text:

They escaped into the land of Armenia.—II Kings, xix., 37.

In Biblical geography this is the first time that Armenia appears, called then by the same name as now. Armenia is chiefly a tableland, 7,000 feet above the level of the sea, and on one of the peaks Noah's ark landed, with its human family and fauna that were to fill the earth. That region was the birthplace of the rivers which fertilized the Garden of Eden when Adam and Eve lived there, their only roof the crystal skies, and their carpet the emerald of rich grass. Its inhabitants, the ethnologists tell us, are a superior type of the Caucasian race. Their religion is founded on the Bible. Their Saviour is our Christ. Their crime is that they will not become followers of Mohammed, that Jupiter of sensuality. To drive them from the face of the earth is the ambition of all Mohammedans. To accomplish this, murder is no crime, and wholesale massacre is a matter of enthusiastic approbation and governmental reward. The prayer sanctioned by highest Mohammedan authority and recited every day throughout Turkey and Egypt, while styling all those not Mohammedans as infidels, is as follows: "O Lord of all creatures! O Allah! Destroy the infidels and Polytheists, thine enemies, the enemies of the religion! O Allah! Make their children orphans and defile their bodies; cause their feet to slip; give them and their families, their households and their women, and their relatives by marriage, their brothers and their friends, their possessions and the race, their wealth and their lands as booty to the Moslems, O Lord of all creatures!"

The life of an Armenian in the presence of those who make that prayer is of no more value than the life of a summer insect. The sultan of Turkey sits on a throne impersonating that brigandage and assassination. At this time all civilized nations are in horror at the attempts of that Mohammedan government to destroy all the Christians of Armenia. I hear somebody talking as though some new thing were happening, and that the Turkish government had taken a new role of tragedy on the stage of nations. No, no! She is at the same old business. Overlooking her diabolism of other centuries, we come down to our century to find that in 1822 the Turkish government slew 50,000 anti-Moslems, and in 1850 she slew 10,000, and in 1860 she slew 11,000, and in 1876 she slew 10,000. Anything short of the slaughter of thousands of human beings does not put enough red wine into her cup of abomination to make it worth quaffing. Nor is this the only time she has promised reform. In the presence of the war ships at the mouth of the Dardanelles, she has promised the civilized nations of the earth that she would stop her butcheries, and the international and hemispheric farce has been enacted of believing what she says, when all the past ought to persuade us that she is only pausing in her atrocities to put nations off the track and then resume the work of death.

In 1820 Turkey, in treaty with Russia, promised to alleviate the condition of Christians, but the promise was broken. In 1839 the then sultan promised protection of life and property without reference to religion, and the promise was broken. In 1844, at the demand of an English minister plenipotentiary, the sultan declared, after the public execution of an Armenian at Constantinople, that no such death penalty should again be inflicted, and the promise was broken. In 1850, at the demand of foreign nations, the Turkish government promised protection to Protestants, but to this day the Protestants at Stamboul are not allowed to build a church, although they have the funds ready, and the Greek Protestants, who have a church, are not permitted to worship in it. In 1856, after the Crimean war, Turkey promised that no one should be hindered in the exercise of the religion he professed, and that promise has been broken. In 1878, at the memorable treaty of Berlin, Turkey promised religious liberty to all her subjects in every part of the Ottoman empire, and the promise was broken. Not once in all the centuries has the Turkish government kept her promise of mercy. So far from any improvement, the condition of the Armenians has become worse and worse year by year, and all the promises the Turkish government now makes are only a gaining of time by which she is making preparation for the complete extermination of Christianity from her borders.

Why, after all the national and continental and hempsheric lying on the part of the Turkish government, do not the warships of Europe ride up as close as is possible to the palaces of Constantinople and blow that accursed government to atoms? In the name of the Eternal God, let the nuisance of the ages be wiped off the face of the earth! Down to the perdition from which it smoked up, sink Mohammedanism! Between these outbreaks of massacre the Armenians suffer in silence wrongs that are seldom if ever reported. They are taxed heavily for the mere privilege of living, and the tax is called "the humiliating tax." They are compelled to give three days' entertainment to any Mohammedan tramp who may be passing that way. They must pay blackmail to the assessor lest he report the value of their property too highly. Their evidence in court is of no worth, and if 50 Armenians saw a wrong committed and one Mohammedan was present, the testimony of the one Mohammedan would be taken and the testimony of the 50 Armenians rejected; in other words, the solemn oath of 1,000 Armenians would not be strong enough to overthrow the perjury of one Mohammedan. A professor was condemned to death for translating the English Book of Common Prayer into Turkish. Seventeen Armenians were sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment for rescuing a Christian bride from the bandits. This is the way the Turkish government amuses itself in times of peace. These are the delights of Turkish civilization. But when the days of massacre come, then deeds are done which may not be unveiled in any refined assemblage, and if one speaks of the horrors, he must do so in well-poised and cautious vocabulary. Hundreds of villages destroyed! Young men put in piles of brushwood, which are then saturated with kerosene and set on fire! Mothers, in the most solemn hour that ever comes in a woman's life, hurled out and bayoneted! Eyes gouged out, and dead and dying hurled into the same pit! The slaughter of Lucknow and Cawnpore, India, in 1857, eclipsed in ghastliness! The worst scenes of the French revolution in Paris made more tolerable in contrast! In many regions of Armenia the only undertakers to-day are the jackals and hyenas.

Many of the chiefs of the massacres were sent straight from Constantinople to do their work, and, having returned, were decorated by the sultan. To four of the worst murderers the sultan sent silk banners, in delicate appreciation of their services. Five hundred thousand Armenians put to death, or dying of starvation! This moment, while I speak, all up and down Armenia sit many people, freezing in the ashes of their destroyed homes, bereft of most of their households, and awaiting the club of assassination to put them out of their misery. No wonder that the physicians of that region declared that among all the men and women that were down with wounds and sickness, and under their care not one wanted to get well. Remember that nearly all the reports that have come to us of the Turkish outrages have been manipulated and modified and softened by the Turks themselves. The story is not half told, or a hundredth part told, or a thousandth part told. None but God and our suffering brothers and sisters in that far-off land know the whole story, and it will not be known until, in the coronations of Heaven, Christ shall lift to a special throne of glory these heroes and heroines, saying: "These are they who came out of great tribulation and had their robes washed, and made white in the blood of the Lamb!" My Lord and my God! Thou didst on the cross suffer for them, but Thou, surely, oh, Christ! wilt not forget how much they have suffered for Thee! I dare not deal in imprecation, but I never so much enjoyed the imprecatory songs of David as since I have heard how those Turks are treating the Armenians. The fact is, Turkey has got to be divided up among other nations. Of course, the European nations must take the chief part, but Turkey ought to be compeled to pay America for the American mission buildings and American school houses she has destroyed, and to support the wives and children of the Americans ruined by this wholesale butchery. When the English lion and the Russian bear put their paws on that Turkey the American eagle ought to put in its bill.

Who are these American and English and Scotch missionaries who are being hounded among the mountains of Armenia by the Mohammedans? The noblest men and women this side of Heaven. Some of them, men who took the highest honors at Yale and Princeton, and Harvard, and Oxford, and Edinburgh. Some of them women, gentlest and most Christ like, who, to save people they never saw, turned their backs on luxurious homes to spend their days in self-expatriation, saying good-by to father and mother, and afterward good-by to their own children, as circumstances compel them to send the little ones to England, Scotland or America. I have seen these foreign missionaries in their homes all around the world, and I stamp with indignation upon the literary blackguardism of foreign correspondents who have deprecated these heroes and heroines who are willing to live and die for Christ's sake. They will have the highest thrones in Heaven, while their defamers will not get near enough to the shining gate to see the faintest glint of any one of the twelve pearls which make up the twelve gates. This defamation of missionaries is augmented by the dissolute English, American and Scotch merchants who go to foreign cities, leaving their families behind them. Those dissolute merchants in foreign cities lead a life of such gross immorals that the pure households of the missionaries are a perpetual rebuke. Buzzards never did believe in doves, and if there is anything that nightshade hates it is the water lily. What the 550 American missionaries have suffered in the Ottoman empire since 1820 I leave the archangel to announce on the day of judgment. You will see it reasonable that I put so much emphasis on Americanism in the Ottoman empire when I tell you that America, notwithstanding all the disadvantages named, has now over twenty-seven thousand students in day schools in that empire, and 35,000 children in her Sabbath schools, and that America has expended in the Turkish empire for its betterment over ten million dollars. Has not America a right to be heard? Aye! it will be heard! I am glad that great indignation meetings are being held all over this country. That poor, weak, cowardly sultan, whom I saw a few years ago ride to mosque for worship, guarded by 7,000 armed men, many of them mounted on prancing chargers, will hear of these sympathetic meetings for the Armenians, if not through American reporters, then through some of his 360 wives. What to do with him? There ought to be some St. Helena to which he could be exiled, while the nations of Europe appoint a ruler of their own to clean out and take possession of the palaces of Constantinople. To-night this august assemblage in the capital of the United States, in the name of the God of Nations, indicts the Turkish government for the wholesale assassination of Armenians, and invokes the interference of Almighty God and the protest of eastern and western hemispheres.

But what is the duty of the hour? Sympathy, deep, wide, tremendous, immediate! A religious paper, "The Christian Herald," of New York, has led the way with munificent contributions collected from its subscribers. But the Turkish government is opposed to any relief of the Armenian sufferers, as I personally know. Last August, before I had any idea of becoming a fellow-citizen with Washington, $50,000 for Armenian relief was offered me if I would personally take that relief to Armenia. My passage was to be engaged on the City of Paris, but a telegram was sent to Constantinople, asking if the Turkish government would grant me protection on such an errand of mercy. A cablegram said the Turkish government wished to know to what points in Armenia I desired to go with that relief. In our reply four cities were named, one of them the scene of what had been the chief massacre. A cablegram came from Constantinople saying that I had better send the money to the Turkish government's mixed commission, and they would distribute it. So a cobweb of spiders proposed a relief committee for unfortunate flies! Well, a man who would start up through the mountains of Armenia with $50,000 and no government protection would be guilty of monumental foolhardiness. The Turkish government has in every possible way hindered Armenian relief.

Now, where is that angel of mercy, Clara Barton, who appeared on the battle-fields of Fredericksburg, Antietam, Falmouth and Cedar Mountain, and under the blaze of French and German guns at Metz and Paris, and in Johnstown floods, and Charleston earthquake, and Michigan fires, and Russian famine? It was comparatively of little importance that the German emperor decorated her with the Iron Cross, for God hath decorated her in the sight of all nations with a glory that neither time nor eternity can dim. Born in a Massachusetts village, she came in her girlhood to this city to serve our government in the patent office, but afterward went forth from the doors of that patent office with a divine patent signed and sealed by God himself, to heal all the wounds she could touch, and make the horrors of the flood, and fire, and plague, and hospital fly her presence. God bless Clara Barton! Just as I expected, she lifts the banner of the Red Cross. Turkey and all nations are pledged to respect and defend that Red Cross, although that color of cross does not, in the opinion of many, stand for Christianity. In my opinion it does stand for Christianity, for was not the cross under which most of us worshiped red with the blood of the Son of God, red with the best blood that was ever shed, red with the blood poured out for the ransom of the world? Then lead on, oh, Red Cross! and let Clara Barton carry it! The Turkish government is bound to protect her, and the chariots of God are 20,000, and their charioteers are angels of deliverance, and they would all ride down at once to roll over and trample under the hoofs of their white horses any of her assailants. May the $500,000 she seeks be laid at her feet! Then may the ships that carry her across Atlantic and Mediterranean seas be guided safely by Him who trod into sapphire pavement bestormed Galilee! Upon soil incardined with martyrdom let the Red Cross be planted, until every demolished village shall be rebuilded, and every pang of hunger be fed, and every wound of cruelty be healed, and Armenia stand with as much liberty to serve God in its own way as in this the best land of all the earth, we, the descendants of the Puritans and Hollanders, and Hugenots, are free to worship the Christ who came to set all nations free!

It has been said that if we go over there to interfere on another continent, that will imply the right for other nations to interfere with affairs on this continent, and so the Monroe doctrine be jeopardized. No, no! President Cleveland expressed the sentiment of every intelligent and patriotic American when he thundered from the White House a warning to all nations, that there is not one acre or one inch more of ground on this continent for any transatlantic government to occupy. And by that doctrine we stand now and shall forever stand. But there is a doctrine as much higher than the Monroe doctrine as the heavens are higher than the earth, and that is the doctrine of humanitarianism and sympathy and Christian helpfulness which one cold December midnight, with loud and multitudinous chant, awakened the shepherds. Wherever there is a wound it is our duty, whether as individuals or as nations, to balsam it. Wherever there is a knife of assassination lifted it is our duty to ward off the blade. Wherever men are persecuted for their religion it is our duty to break that arm of power, whether it be thrust forth from a Protestant church or a Catholic cathedral, or a Jewish synagogue or a mosque of Islam. We all recognize the right on a small scale. If going down the road, we find a ruffian maltreating a child, or a human brute insulting a woman, we take a hand in the contest if we are not cowards, and, though we be slight in personal presence, because of our indignation we come to weigh about 20 tons, and the harder we punish the villain the louder our conscience applauds us. In such case we do not keep our hands in our pockets, arguing that if we interfere with the brute the brute might think he would have a right to interfere with us, and so jeopardize the Monroe doctrine.

The fact is that that persecution of the Armenians by the Turks must be stopped, or God Almighty will curse all Christendom for its damnable indifference and apathy. But the trumpet of resurrection is about to sound for Armenia. Did I say in opening that on one of the peaks of Armenia, this very Armenia of which we speak, in Noah's time the ark landed, according to the myth, as some think, but according to God's "say so," as I know, and that it was after a long storm of 40 days and 40 nights, called the Deluge, and that afterward a dove went forth from that ark and returned with an olive leaf in her beak? Even so now, there is another ark being launched, but this one goes sailing, not over a deluge of water, but a deluge of blood—the ark of American sympathy—and that ark, landing on Ararat, from its window shall fly the dove of kindness and peace, to find the olive leaf of returning prosperity, while all the mountains of Moslem prejudice, oppression and cruelty shall stand 15 cubits under. Meanwhile, we would like to gather all the dying groans of all the 500,000 victims of Mohammedan oppression, and intone them into one prayer that would move the earth and the heavens, hundreds of millions of Christian voices, American and European, crying out: "O, God Most High! Spare Thy children. With mandate from the throne hurl back upon their haunches the horses of the Kurdish cavalry. Stop the rivers of blood. With the earthquakes of Thy wrath shake the foundations of the palaces of the sultan. Move all the nations of Europe to command cessation of cruelty. If need be, let the war ships of civilized nations boom their indignation. Let the crescent go down before the cross, and the Mighty One who hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written 'King of Kings and Lord of Lords,' go forth, conquering and to conquer. Thine, O Lord, is the kingdom! Hallelujah! Amen!"

Aristocracy.

Aristocracy means the rule of the best. The term is Greek in its origin. Greek aristocracy probably was in the beginning the rule of those best equipped. But it soon grew narrow and shallow. Among the aristocracies of the past there have been those of military prowess and hereditary rank. To-day witnesses an aristocracy of wealth. Our worst disease is not cholera, nor small-pox, but mammonism. A higher and nobler aristocracy of wealth is that of mind. Above this, and highest of all, is the coming and crowning aristocracy of goodness.—S. W. Sample, Independent, Jamestown, N. Y.

Personal Beauty.

It is the duty not only of women but of men to make themselves as beautiful and attractive as possible. Many a woman would have more influence over her brothers and sisters and her friends for good, and many a mother would be able more perfectly to hold the admiration and love of her children, and many a wife retain with more enthusiasm more attention to preserving an attractive personality, remembering that it is the little things in toilet, and temper, and habit, as surely as in the garden or orchard or fields that make up a beautiful and charming appearance.—Rev. Dr. Darlington, Brooklyn, N. Y.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

PATHETIC SCENE IN COURT.

Sorrow and Shame of a Husband Caused by His Wife's Uncontrollable Appetite for Liquor.

In a drama in real life that was played in Yorkville court, Bruce Crane, an artist of 339 Eighth avenue, and his wife were the principal actors.

All lovers of fine painting know of Bruce Crane, whose work has been generally admired for years, and society extended a warm welcome to him and his handsome wife until such time as her conduct made it impossible. The woman is a drunkard.

As told in the New York Recorder, she was found in a helpless condition the other evening, lying upon the sidewalk in Eighth avenue, near her home, and, as blood was flowing from a wound over her left eye, a policeman sent her to Roosevelt hospital in an ambulance. The physicians at the hospital soon saw that the woman's injuries were slight, but that she was intoxicated. She was kept over night, however, and next day was arraigned before Magistrate Crane.

She is a middle-aged woman, and in her youth must have been remarkably good-looking. In fact, she is handsome yet, and her face, notwithstanding the marks of dissipation, is very pleasant. Her figure is particularly good and her yellow hair is soft and luxuriant. When her case was called she walked unaided to the "bridge," and there her husband joined her. Little attention was paid to either of them, for, apparently, it was an ordinary police court case and no one was prepared for a pathetic scene.

"PLEASE, PLEASE TAKE ME HOME."

"You are charged with intoxication," said the magistrate, addressing Mrs. Crane. "What have you to say?"

The woman paid no attention to the inquiry of the court. Instead she turned to her husband and in a weak, unsteady voice said:

"Take me away, Bruce, I'm frightened; please take me home to the children."

Her husband, however, never looked at her, but, with his gaze fixed on the face of the magistrate, and while his lips quivered and his eyes filled with tears, exclaimed:

"Your honor, I don't know what to do with my wife, for she is an habitual drunkard. I have done all in my power to bring her to herself, and she and my friends have aided me, but all without avail. She has been in all kinds of institutions and sanitariums; private physicians have treated her and she is no better to-day than she was years ago. I can think of nothing better than that she be placed under restraint—"

"Oh, no, Bruce," Mrs. Crane broke in at this point, at the same time throwing her arms around her husband's neck and beginning to cry. "Don't send me away; don't keep me here another minute. If you do, I'll surely go crazy. Please, please take me home."

"I can't take you home," he said. "You have wrecked our home, you have wrecked my life."

"Don't say that," Mrs. Crane replied. "You ought not to say it after all I've done for you; oh, for the love of God, don't send me to prison; set me free and I'll go right to mother in Troy; or, at least, I'll go just as soon as I've seen the children; but whatever you do, don't send me to prison."

"You have disgraced your children, you have disgraced me," said Mr. Crane.

"No, no, darling; don't say that;" the woman exclaimed, while tears rolled faster down her cheeks; "don't say that, for you know how I love you and how you love me. Take me away at once."

At this Mr. Crane began to relent, and, covering his face with his hands, he sobbed audibly. That made his wife cry more bitterly.

"Try me just once more, Bruce, dear," the woman went on, realizing, evidently, that this was her chance if she had any. "and, as I live, I'll never taste liquor again. Oh, try me just once more—for my sake and the children's sake—for the sake of my unborn child, for—"

But here the magistrate broke in.

"No, Mr. Crane," he said, "you have a duty to perform, and you must face it like a man. It is a strange duty and a harsh one, perhaps, but it is your duty, nevertheless. It is much better for your wife that she should be cared for. You must brace up, both for her sake and your own. I think I'll adopt your suggestion and commit her to prison until to-morrow morning. Then you can consult as to what it will be best to do with her."

At this Mrs. Crane shrieked: "Oh, don't do that; don't let them keep me; take me away; for God's sake take me away."

Mr. Crane could do nothing, however, and court officers stepped forward to lead the woman away, but scarcely had they touched her, when she fell fainting to the floor. Then she was carried from the room. Later a Record reporter saw her in the prison.

"Had it not been for my drinking," she said, "our home would have been without a care. My husband and I are devoted to each other, but liquor has made trouble ever since a year after our marriage. I was the widow of a wholesale jeweler, whose name was Brainerd, when I met Mr. Crane, and I never drank then. But shortly before my first child by Mr. Crane was born a physician advised me to take stimulants, and that started it. Now liquor has got the better of me."

As she talked the woman held a handkerchief to her left eye, which was terribly swollen and discolored. She was very anxious to send a message to her husband, and so the reporter went to the Van Dyke, and there he saw a man completely broken down and overwhelmed with grief.

"No," said Mr. Crane, when he learned the import of the reporter's visit, "I can do nothing; the law must take its course this time. I have tried and tried and tried to reform that woman, and now I am discouraged. Because of her my heart is broken, and I am bankrupt in purse and spirit and courage. I have had her in every cure for dipsomania. I have sent her all over the country hoping to benefit her, and everything has failed.

"She talks about dreading to spend a night in a prison, when she has been in every prison in New York, and, on one occasion, spent five days and five nights at Jefferson Market. I sent her money to-day to buy some delicacies, but I can do nothing more. She has been acting in this way for nearly eight years, and now I am discouraged."

Magistrate Crane said concerning the case:

"It was the only thing to do. She was drunk as she stood at the bar, and it would have been manifestly improper to release her even in the custody of her husband. It is almost certain she would have continued drinking, for it is evident, since she has been arrested so many times, that her husband cannot restrain her. The thing to do was to keep her here until she should become herself, and then she would be the better able to say whether she will stop drinking of her own accord or whether she does not think herself that she would be better off in some institution. I must say I think it is a case for the commissioners of charities and correction."

TOBACCO INSOMNIA.

Drugs Should Not Be Used for Its Alleviation or Cure.

Many brain-workers suffer from inability to sleep. This is frequently met with among those who work late at night. The sufferers complain that they feel most lively just when the time for retiring has come, and that a long period of restlessness precedes a troubled slumber, from which the slightest noise awakens them. This is very often caused almost entirely by over-indulgence in tobacco. They smoke just before going to bed, ignorant of the fact that not only may tobacco prevent sleep temporarily, but that it may render it less deep, and consequently less refreshing. A grave responsibility attaches to those who lightly seek to relieve a symptom which is really a warning by recourse to a dangerous palliative. The inability to sleep is often merely the outcome of an unnatural mode of life, and if this be corrected the disability disappears of itself. Men who work late are commonly addicted to the tobacco habit. To them tobacco is not a relaxation after a day's work, but a nerve stimulation which enables them to accomplish tasks which would otherwise be difficult of accomplishment. When the mouth becomes dry, alcohol in some form or other is resorted to as a fillip to enable the smoker to tolerate still another cigar or two. Under these circumstances tobacco acts as a cerebral irritant and interferes with the vaso-motor centers of the brain to such an extent that the vessels are unable to adjust themselves forthwith to the condition required for healthy and untroubled sleep. Discretion in tobacco use would save many from this distressing condition of chronic insomnia. Smoking early in the day should be discontinued, and it is equally undesirable within an hour or so of retiring to rest. The best remedy for the tobacco habit, short of total abstention, is to take a short walk in the open air after the last pipe. Under no circumstances should drugs be used for this form of nocturnal restlessness.—Pacific Medical Jounral.

WHY A TEETOTALER.

Strong Reasons Given by Edward W. Bok, Editor of Ladies' Home Journal.

Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, gives the following, among other reasons for having never tasted liquor:

"Another thing which led me to make up my mind never to touch liquor was the damage which I saw wrought by it upon some of the finest minds with which it was ever my privilege to come into contact, and I concluded that what had resulted so injuriously to others might prove so to me. I have seen, even in my few years of professional life, some of the smartest, yea, brilliant, literary men dethroned from splendid positions, owing to nothing else but their indulgence in wine. I have known men with salaries of thousands of dollars per year, occupying positions which hundreds would strive a lifetime to obtain, come to beggary from drink. Only recently there applied to me for any position I could offer him, one of the most brilliant editorial writers in the newspaper profession—a man who, two years ago, easily commanded $100 for a single editorial in his special field. That man became so unreliable from drink that the editors are now afraid of his articles, and, although he can to-day write as forcible editorials as at any time during his life, he sits in a cellar in one of our cities writing newspaper wrappers for one dollar per thousand."

Irish Drunkards.

The judicial statistics for Ireland have just been published, and some interesting information is furnished. The return of habitual drunkards, which throws some light upon the causes of town crime, shows that taking the seven town jurisdictions outside Dublin, of Belfast, Cork, Limerick, Waterford, Galway, Drogheda and Carrickfergus, with an aggregate population of 427,000, the habitual drunkards were 712, or 16.7 of 1,000 of the population, while in the rest of Ireland, outside the metropolitan district, the number was only 2,163, or 5.4 in the 1,000.

Action of Cocaine.

Mantel says that cocaine kills by: 1. Dilating the small vessels. 2. Paralyzing the leucocytes; strong doses taken by the stomach act in this way. The toxic effect is proportionate to the number of leucocytes paralyzed. Small doses, hypodermically, or in the veins, may act by paralyzing some cells which then become emboli. Large doses may be injected into the arteries without killing.—Omaha Clinic.

SPIRITUAL AFFAIRS.

MORNING HYMN.

The morn looks forth, the farther cloud
Suffuses in the eastern ray;
Sweet light dispels night's somber shroud,
The birds salute the rising day.
Nature attunes her varied songs
To Him to whom all praise belongs.

Shall I be laggard in my praise
When every note doth joyful move?
His presence brightens all my days,
His care I every moment prove.
Awake, my soul, and catch the theme
And praise Him with the rising beam.

He cares for all: the large, the least,
Are with His liberal bounty fed;
He spreads for me a gracious feast,
He maketh sure my daily bread;
And as I prove Thy love divine
Accept my heart, O Lord, 'tis Thine!

With each returning morn my voice
In thanks shall to His courts ascend;
His goodness shall my heart rejoice
When night shall with her stars descend.
And years, and days, and hours shall bring Love tokens from my Lord and King.

AT HOME.

Not Here, But Yonder Is "My Father's House."

It was He who had not where to lay His head that talked most about His Father and His Father's house of many mansions. It was the homeless apostle that had most to say about being at home with the Lord and longed most there to be present with Him.

Wandering, pilgrimage, sojourning satisfy no right-minded man. One can endure it, if necessary, but only as one looks forward to the home at the end of the journey. Rest, comfort, peace is only at home. When the business is done which compels one to wander, the wealth gathered for which one toiled afar, then he rejoices to turn his steps back to his native land and come again to his own home and make there his rest.

Rest and home go together. Heaven is not only called home, but it is there, in that home, that there remaineth a rest for the people of God. Here the Sabbath is both the home day and the rest day; there the eternal home is the eternal Sabbath.

This past week 10,000 earthly homes, as we call them, have been broken up. From those homes the father has been taken. Out into what unknown, wandering sphere have they passed from the homes of their love?

We ask that question because we see so dimly and from the wrong side of the river. Was this their home? This place, where they tarried only for 30 or 40 or 70 years, and then passed on into the endless abiding of their Father's house? The door of that house is ever open, and as we pass one by one into that other life the multitude of those gone home before come out, company by company, family by family, to greet with warmest welcome each new arrival, a welcome home; home after long wandering, many dangers; but now wandering and dangers over, home at last.

One may make the most of his earthly home, just as a schoolboy decks his room with pictures brought from his faher's house, or as a soldier hangs his trophies about his tent. But it is not home. There is no real home on earth; nothing permanent, nothing we can hold and keep. Be it treasure or be it friend, we must give it up when we go. Call it, then, a tent, a school, a wilderness lodge, an inn of a night, but call it not a home. A home is permanent, where we can stay.

A home is where the household is, where the father lives. The great multitude of our households are not here; they are there. The Father is there. Not Jesus alone could call it "my Father's house;" we can each say the same. He is our Father. Jesus is our elder Brother, and He bids us call the Master of that house in Heaven "our Father." When one of the few members of our homes of a day goes home he goes to the great assembly of his dear ones; he goes to the embrace of his Father; he is welcomed by his Father, and the multitude of other brothers and fathers and mothers that await him in their permanent and most blessed home. Then call it not home here from which so many have gone and from which the others will all go; but call that home where all others are and will be. And say with Paul that it is better to be at home with the Lord, better for you, better for the loved one whom God called home last week. Be content to stay here at school; or here on soldier's duty for a while, if your Father bids it; but remember that all this time you are absent from home. Every day shortens the absence, every night brings you nearer home.

This is the thought which gives the Christian peace. Who is afraid to go home? Who is afraid to die but he whose faith has not seen that home? There is nothing sadder than the old age which must look to the end, and cannot see or hope beyond it. There is infinite peace in the heart of him who sees before him but a narrow stream, and beyond it the home of his thoughts and hopes.

"Here in the body bent,
Absent from Thee I roam!
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home."
—N. Y. Independent.

Avoid "Theatricals" in Well-Doing.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven.—Matt v. 16.

Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them.—Matt. vi. 1.

Cavillers sometimes cite these texts as contradicting one another. Farthest possible from it. The words translated "seen" are different in the two texts. The word in the former text signifies "known." Christians should abound in good works, in order that men may be led, through the knowledge of these works, to glorify the Father in Heaven. In the latter text, the root of the original is the same as that of the word "theater," and the idea is "to be seen as a theatrical show" by men. The contrast is very sharp:

Let your good works abound, that by the knowledge of them men may be led to glorify your Father in Heaven.

Don't make "theatricals" of your well-doing, for your own glory and the praise of men.—Homiletic Review.

Duty of Knowing.

Knowing the best is no less a duty than doing the best one knows. A stranger in a foreign land may not intend to break the laws of that land, yet if he makes no effort to learn what those laws are he has only himself to blame if his ignorance brings him into trouble. How often we try to cover our mistakes and our failures with the excuse: "Well, I did the best I knew how!" If the best we know how is not the best we might know we have so far fallen short of our duty.—S. S. Times.

The Open Door of Prayer.

Prayer is the door forever open between earth and Heaven. Sooner than sound can reach a human ear through this lower atmosphere, the longing desire of the spirit rises to the heart of the eternal Friend. Whether we believe it or not, we are living in an invisible world, where our wishes are understood before our words are spoken.—Lucy Larcom.

FRIENDSHIP.

A Classic Illustration in the Story of David and Jonathan.

The reader of Cicero's immortal treatise on "Friendship," or Plutarch's "Lives," sees at once that they regarded the matter from a somewhat different point of view than we moderns do. To them a man's friends were a part of his resources. They could not conceive of a rich, well-furnished life that was not strengthened and adorned by the personal attachment of a brother man. Female society was held in lower esteem than it is under Christian institutions, and many of the amenities of life which we associate with the family, in their minds were associated with the intercourse of friends. In that great poem of the ancient world, the Iliad of Homer, the action does not turn upon the love of a man and a woman, but upon the devotion of Achilles to his friend Patroclus. We have made enormous gains over the ancients, in making the family the center of affectional life; but it is a fair question whether we prize highly enough those friendships between persons of the same sex which do so much to adorn and strengthen life.

In the story of David and Jonathan we find in the Scriptures a classic illustration of friendship. It throws even a stronger light upon the character of Jonathan than upon that of David, for Jonathan had much to lose and little to gain from association with a man whom his father hated. But this very circumstance gives us an interesting view of the winsomeness of David's character, which bound to him, at such cost, the soul of a man like Jonathan. David was not simply great in his capacity of leadership, in his poetic insight, and in his faith and courage, and all those elements of character which go to make up a man among men, he inspired devotion and trust in noble men. We frequently hear people lament that they have so few friends, that they are not appreciated and are misunderstood. They blame others, but the fault is largely with themselves. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly."

Writers who trace the development of David's character do not, it seems to us, recognize sufficiently the large part this generous friendship must have played in it. It was very easy for a man beset as David was to become cynical, suspicious and morose. That he did not must have been largely due to the circumstance that he had such a friend as Jonathan. In that noble fellowship he saw the better side of human nature, and he learned a lesson that still refreshes us when we read the songs of that world-worn but not world-hating soul. One of the best protections that any man can have against that corroding cynicism which refuses to believe in men is such a generous, devoted fellowship with some brother man as bound David and Jonathan together.

And this friendship must have contributed greatly to stronger features of David's character. Many a man wages a brave fight in the world because his inner life has the conscious joy of some human friendship. There is some soul in whose unselfish devotion he can trust, and whose companionship, as Lord Bacon says, "redoubleth joy and cutteth griefs in halfs." The influence of such a fellowship is not lost when those we love are taken from us. To have enjoyed this experience for a few months or years is a perpetual enrichment and strength.—Watchman.

PRAYER.

The Ram's Horn Makes Some Helpful Suggestions.

The devil fears a praying mother.

When you shut your closet door, lock it with a promise.

Half-heartedness makes no prayers that God can answer.

Prayer is not prayer until it becomes communion with God.

When we ask God to bless others we should also pray that He will do it in His own way.

The prayer of the grateful man will please God, whether it pleases anybody else or not.

Do a great deal of praying before you undertake to tell what a great sinner you used to be.

The devil will fight hard to keep the man who has power with God from getting on his knees.

How inconsistent to ask God to give to us, if we are withholding that which belongs to somebody else.

It was because Daniel kept his windows open toward Jerusalem that he had no fear of the lion's den.

A marked difference between a hypocrite and a child of God is that the hypocrite has no closet for prayer.

The Christian who will take every need to God in prayer will soon have a faith that can move mountains.

When you pray for strength to resist temptation, help answer your prayer by keeping out of bad company.

To pray the Lord's prayer as Jesus taught it will make every man the guardian of his brother's rights.

Our prayers are not always answered according to our expectations, but the prayer of faith is never disappointed.

Many a man fails to have access to God in private because he has been doing too much trumpet-blowing in public.

Before Jesus taught His disciples how to pray He told them of the Father to whom their prayers should be addressed.

Surrendering All Our Care.

The captain of Pharaoh's guard surrendered all that he had to the care of Joseph and then went free. We follow his example, but too often only in part. We profess to cast all our care upon God, but we go on bearing our burdens. By prayer and supplication we make known our request to God, but instead of being anxious for nothing, we are anxious for everything. There is no excuse for us. God offers rest and we refuse to accept it.—United Presbyterian.

Another Summer Is to Come.

Love in this world is like a seed taken from the tropics and planted where the winter comes too soon; and it cannot spread itself in flower-clusters and wide-twining vines, so that the whole air is full of the perfume thereof. But there is to be another summer for it yet. Care for the root now and God will care for the top by and by.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Character and Reputation.

Character is what God thinks you are; reputation is what man thinks you are. Character may, and usually does, make one's reputation, but not always. Circumstances may so control that a good person is thought evil and an evil person good. Character is inward and reputation outward.—Rev. C. A. Hare.

Religion and Business.

A man cannot consecrate his life to a worldly motive and be in sympathy with God. To be a Christian he must be actuated by the divine impulse of God in all the occupations and pursuits of life. He cannot be a man entirely of the world in business and on Sunday be a man of God.—Rev. John H. Strong.

Some Notes About the Bicycle—A Popular Fallacy—Danger from Natural Gas—An Air-Cushion Stamp—Device for Indoor Amusement.

IT is by no means an accurate test of the running powers of a wheel to turn the machine upside down and see how long the wheels will spin without stopping. An expert says that a wheel that will not run any great length of time under these circumstances may prove exceedingly satisfactory on the road. Of course, it is important that the adjustment be accurate, but the mere fact of so many revolutions is not specially significant. A wheel fitted with a very light racing tire will not revolve as long as one fitted with a heavy roadster. Some of the forces which oppose the revolutions of the wheel are increased by the weight of the rider in the saddle, others are not. Of two machines, the back wheel may revolve more freely in one than in the other. One may be retarded by some friction in the hub-bearings, the other may have some of the gearing coming slightly in contact with the spokes. In the latter case the weight of the rider will make very little difference, so little indeed that it will not be noticed in ordinary riding, but any friction in the bearings is obviously greatly increased by the rider's weight. This is a matter of great importance, and is, in fact, one of the principal causes of hard work, and is even more taxing than a machine of much greater weight.

A Popular Fallacy.

There is a widespread impression among medical men and the public at large that there is little or no danger attending the removal of the tonsils, and instruments for this purpose are found in the possession of almost every practitioner in the land. An eminent surgeon declares that removing the tonsils is an operation attended with a great deal of risk. One reason for this seems to be that in cutting there is danger of approaching near the large arteries, or, at all events, tapping small veins that may cause alarming hemorrhage. This physician gives an account of the removal of the tonsils from the throat of a boy, when he was obliged to hold the parts with his fingers for several hours to arrest the hemorrhage that threatened the boy's life. Having no appliances at hand for checking the hemorrhage, which was entirely unlooked-for, he came very near losing his patient. The general practitioner is warned against too free use of these instruments; indeed, it is as well to be very wary in cutting the tonsils at all, and not to operate upon them unless it is absolutely necessary, and then only remove a sufficient surface to relieve the mechanical obstruction caused by their enlargement.

Danger from Natural Gas.

The soil in the coal regions of Indiana and some of the adjacent states is so permeated with gas that it is dangerous to start a fire out of doors, or to throw a lighted match or cigar into any depression in the earth. Recently an excavation was begun for a building, and having been undisturbed for a day or two, some workmen, as they returned to their labor, threw a lighted match into the ditch. An explosion immediately followed, and through a small fissure in the earth came a little jet of natural gas. It is thought by many experts that the supply of natural gas will last but a few years longer; indeed, considering the prodigal waste of it on its own ground, the wonder is that it has lasted so long.

For Indoor Fun.

Here is a simple and easily contrived means of having some indoor fun. The accompanying illustration almost tells the story without a verbal explanation. Put a lighted candle on a table and on the wall opposite tack a sheet of white paper.

Between the candle and the paper place a big book or a piece of cardboard, so that the paper may be dark. The effect will be better if the spectators sit between the table and the wall, or at least so that the table is in the rear, either directly so or on one side. Now, place a mirror at the edge of the table so that it will reflect the light from the candle upon the paper on the wall, and if you hold before the mirror fancy or grotesque figures of any kind, an image of them will be thrown upon the paper. If the figures be of the jumping jack order, their evolutions will prove to be quite amusing.

A Large Tunnel.

The largest tunnel ever built—the under-water section of the Blackwall Tunnel, under the Thames—has just been finished. It is twenty-seven feet in diameter and one mile in length, and connects Poplar on the north side of the river with Greenwich on the south. Nearly four thousand feet of this tunnel had to be driven by compressed air. The accuracy of the survey and the dangers of the work may be imagined from the statement of the engineers that while driving the shield under the river bed there were, at one time, but five feet and two inches of earth between the top of the tunnel and the water. So great was the danger of the water bursting through that large quantities of clay were dumped into the river over the thinnest spots.

The Hot Winds of the Rockies.

Scientists are of the opinion that hot, dry winds that blow over the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains depend upon the presence of slow-moving, low-pressure areas in that region, and these eastward, accompanied by relatively high pressure over the Pacific ocean off the coast of Oregon. It is believed that air is heated in its sudden passage from the summit of the Rockies to the prairies below.

Air-Cushion Stamps.

The illustrations herewith represent an improvement lately introduced whereby the rubber stamp is made more valuable by being better adapted to print plainly on uneven surfaces. It consists of the interposition of an air cushion, as shown in the illustration, the cushion being just elastic enough to insure, with ordinary usage, a good impression on any surface, either uneven or yielding.

The cushions will not lose shape or resiliency, as they are formed by minute cells which do not connect with one another, and the cushion is mounted on handsomely nickeled metal plates. There are no pores to fill up with ink and dirt, or compartments to puncture.

A Speedy Locomotive.

Electric locomotive No. 2, the latest electric giant put on the Baltimore Belt railroad, added new laurels on Monday night to the noteworthy performance of locomotive No. 1. No. 2 hauled twenty-eight loaded cars, two "dead" engines and a caboose, a total weight of about 1,400 tons, through the tunnel at the rate of twenty-three miles an hour. A stop was made in the tunnel, and with all drawbars stretched the start was again made without a slip of the wheel. In doing this and accelerating the train up to the speed of twenty miles an hour a drawbar pull of 58,630 pounds was exerted. With this tremendous strain the engineers say the least jerk would have snapped a coupling pin and broken the train apart. From one of the locomotives on the rear end of the train, where a jerky motion would be felt the greatest, an entire absence of such a jar was noted. During the work an input of 4,100 amperes at a pressure of 600 volts was measured. The test is regarded as the severest yet attempted by such a locomotive.

Electric Bulletin Boards.

Mr. Petry of New York has devised and patented electric-lighted bulletin-boards, which are used with great success. The bulletins are made of ground glass, mounted in frames, in front of which are set parallel glass plates one-eighth of an inch apart. The letters are of metal, enameled black, and are fastened by means of a spring on the back, which is thrust into the one-eighth inch slot between the parallel glass plates. Electric lights behind the white glass project the letters with wonderful clearness at night, and no weather can blur them.

Latest in Photography.

A curious experiment in photography was recently made in England. A man was made to look steadily at a postage stamp on a black card for a minute; the room was then darkened, a sensitive photographic plate put in place of the card, and the man looked at it steadily for twenty minutes. The plate was developed and showed two distinct images of the stamp. Ingles Rogers, one of the three witnesses of this fact, is unable to decide whether the photograph is one of the image projected on the man's retina or whether it is a case of thought transference.

A Novel Fire Escape.

A novel form of fire escape, the invention of M. Berutti, was tried lately in Paris before members of the town council and the fire department. It consists of a hollow tube placed along the cornice of a building or the lower part of a balcony railing, inside which runs a small wheel, which can move from one end of the house front to the other. A light wire ladder or an iron cage attached to a rope passing over the block furnishes the means for descent. The apparatus can also be used for workmen, like painters, employed on the outside of houses,

A Hydraulic Life Boat.

A new hydraulic propelled lifeboat has recently been constructed in England that meets all the requirements of the National Lifeboat institution. Water is admitted by means of a large scoop, and is forced out by a strong pump of very simple design. A speed of 9¼ knots was made on the trial course, and the boat was stopped and reversed in fifteen seconds.

LAW IS IN CONTEMPT.

MENNONITES PREFER TO USE THE HOLY BIBLE.

KEPT THEM IN PEACE AND HAPPINESS UNTIL LATELY.

They Would Not Render Unto Cæsar the Things that Were His and Now Their Little Band Is Being Brought to the Bar of Justice.

BECAUSE of certain religious tenets which are not in accordance with the laws of Indiana a grand jury returned some twenty indictments against members of the peculiar sect known as the Amish. There is a large settlement of these people in Adams county, thrifty, honest and exclusive, but for the years during which they have been in the state they have violated the laws undisturbed.

These violations are due largely to the ignorance of the culprits, if they can be so classified, and not to any desire or intention to get into any conflict with the authorities. Among the laws broken is that regulating marriage. The Amish have not only failed to obey the law regarding license and registry, but have solemnized marriages between couples related to each other within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity. In fact, all of the counts in the indictments are based on offenses repugnant to the spirit of the laws, but not properly designated as crimes in themselves. The marriages between relatives have been limited to cousins german.

These strange people have a history interesting from the origin to the present day. They came to this country to escape the persecution which they suffered. Now, it seems that they have not found the country where they can worship God as they wish, for in doing so they violate the laws which have been passed for the control of the family relations and the good of society. The sect recognizes no law but that of the Deity, and it is certain will make no defense to the charges, believing that their sufferings are ordered of God and must be borne with patience and resignation.

These people belong to the sect known as Mennonites, this particular division being known as the Defenseless Amish. They are one of the twelve branches of Mennonites. The Mennonites are a body of evangelical Christians who, in relation to the constitution of the church, the baptism, the taking of oaths, church discipline and bearing of arms, are either entirely or almost in harmony with Menno Simmons, after whom they are named.

The sect arose, so far as can be ascertained, among the inhabitants of the mountains of Switzerland in the early part of the sixteenth century. Their first leader was Conrad Grebel. They claimed that from the time that Christ was on earth there has been no true religion. The sect spread with great rapidity and in a short time was scattered over the different countries of Europe. As these different countries took up this mode of religion, which was then very simple, they each had some new idea, and hence there are several different classes of Mennonites. The different branches are as follows: Regular Mennonites, Amish, Old Amish, Apostolic Amish, Broederhoef, General Conference, Church of God in Christ, Old Mennonites, Brucder-Gemeinde, Mennonite Brethren in Christ, and Defenseless Amish.

They believe principally in the old testament, and they think that everything in it should be obeyed. They have a reason and a biblical phrase to quote for every act they do. Their answers are always yea and nay. They will not take an oath under any circumstances, because in St. Matthew, which they also believe in, from the thirty-fourth to the thirty-seventh verses, inclusive, is found the following:

"But I say unto you, swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great king. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, Yea, yea, and Nay, nay, for whatever is more than these cometh of evil."

The most peculiar part of their religion and customs is their appearance. They are generally well built, well proportioned and have rather nice looking faces. They never shave from youth up and their hair is kept about six inches long, and when cut is done so by actually placing a milk crock over the head and trimming around it. Another peculiarity is their dress. The boys wear jeans cloth from the time they can walk, with broad felt hats, quaker style. The girls wear blue gingham dresses, made in the old fashioned style, black bonnet and black kerchief around their necks. All ages of each sex dress precisely alike.

They wear no jewelry of any kind, use no ornaments, either on their person or in their houses or in any manner make any worldly shows. In fact, they are distinguished by antique simplicity, combined with antique prejudice, and by indifference to the interests of the greater world. They will not have their pictures taken and the only possible way to get them is by use of a kodak.

Among the many traits of these people is their honesty. They are the most honest class of people in America. They are trained from babyhood and are taught to be more afraid of debt than most people are of death. If, however, any of their brethren get behind and cannot pay their debts, they promptly come to their assistance. If one of their flock turns out to be a rascal and fails to pay his debts, which occurs very seldom, they pay them for him. In fact, it is their rule that no one shall lose on their account.

They will not quarrel nor fight. They will not even try to regain property stolen from them, nor to punish the thief. Some months ago a horse was stolen from the stables of James Mazelon. The thief was tracked to Bluffton and caught with the horse. The owner refused to appear against the man or even to identify the horse. They do not believe in going to court for any reasons, but settle all matters in the church or let them go.

Last spring a split occurred in the church on account of some new customs which part of the congregation wished to support and part did not. The leaders of one faction are Jacob Swartz and his son and Jacob Hawbaker, and of the other is Joseph Swartz. One of the customs which has occasioned a great deal of trouble among them is their burial service.

The old faction always had an ordinary burial service, but the new faction claims that part of their custom is not right and insists that the dead should be buried a few hours after death and wheat planted over their body. David C. Neusbaum died a few weeks ago of consumption, and that same night was thrown into a rough box, scarcely three feet in length, and buried in his own cornfield. A woman of the same faction died shortly afterward and received the same treatment, not even her friends being in attendance.

This so angered some of their neighbors of other denominations that their actions were reported to the grand jury a few weeks ago. That body returned several indictments against them, and there is great interest manifested here as to what will be the effect on this people if a conviction occurs.

The Amish do not believe in paying fines or in dealing in court affairs in any manner. When the examination was going on before the grand jury concerning Neusbaum, Daniel Neusbaum, a brother of the dead man, and a man by the name of Jacob Halfin met Joseph Hendricks, one of the grand jurors, and began explaining the burial part of their religion, whereupon Hendricks became angry and struck both of them.

Outside parties interfered and had Hendricks arrested. He pleaded guilty, paid his fine, and promptly had the two Amish men arrested for provoke. They were found guilty and fined. Halfin, rather than go to jail or have his stock attached, paid his fine and was immediately put out of the church. Neusbaum, however, who is worth at least $10,000, refused to pay and is now in jail. He told the officers that they could take any of his stock to pay it, but he could not give them the money, for it was against the rule of God and of their church.

Another peculiar idea of this people is that the devil's spirit is concentrated in anything that revolves. They therefore will not have any of the improved farming machinery of to-day; no reapers, mowers or threshers. They use the old-fashioned cradles, scythes and rakes and will haul their grain fifty miles to a thresher run by horse power.

They all marry very young. The weddings are announced in their church services about two weeks before the day set for marriage. There is never a license applied for from the county clerk, as they do not think they should have license from anyone other than God. Weddings always take place on Thursday morning and the services last from 9 o'clock to 12. During the services the visitors continually chant an old hymn.

Of late years it has become customary among them to marry cousins or other close relatives. The first wedding of this kind took place about three years ago, the contracting parties being Miss Fanny Eicher and Jacob Halfinstine.

And Now They Don't Speak.

They were seated at the table, she one of the belles of her set, though just a trifle back-numbered, as it were, but still vivacious, charming and winsome as if she were yet in her teens; he one of the gallants of the old school, a Colonel, rich and a great "catch."

"My dear Colonel," she began, as the servant poured a gurgling stream of the nectar of the gods into his fragile glass, "allow me to call the attention of a real connoisseur in wines to the Burgundy before you. I can guarantee that it is not only one of the finest vintages but also not less than forty years of age."

The august Colonel raised his glass, watched its radiant flush against the sunlight, pledged her good health with a fitting toast, smacked his lips, took a gentle whiff of the wine as a teaser to his palate, then drank it off with a dream-like expression on his face as if he wished his neck was as long as a giraffe's and he could taste three running yards of it going down at once. "Ahem!" he said grandly, "it is indeed glorious—so mellow and rich. And forty years of age, too, eh?"

"I guarantee it, Colonel."

"Sublime! I have drank many so-called old wines; but rarely is it my privilege to drink a Burgundy which carries with it the personal guarantee of one who has grown up with the wine, as it were, and perhaps imported it herself"—

"Sir!"

"Oh—ah, that is—ahem! Waiter, fill my glass again, please!" and thus he drowned his sorrow as the tall Labrador iceberg settled down between them then and there.

Warning: Never discuss old maids and old wines in the same breath.

OUR NAVAL HEROES.

MEN WHO COULD DEMOLISH BRITAIN'S NAVY.

Rear Admirals of the White Navy of the United States Have Distinguished Themselves in War and in Peace—Won Their Way to the Front.

REAR Admiral Francis M. Bunce, who succeeded Admiral Meade in command of the North Atlantic squadron, is a native of Connecticut. He was graduated from the Annapolis academy in 1857 and assigned to East Indian service on the sloop Germantown. In 1861 he received his commission as lieutenant on the Penobscot. He subsequently served in the civil war on Pawnee and Catskill and commanded the Dictator and ironclad Monadnock. He was in the skirmishes at Yorktown and Gloucester and in the engagements at Fort Fisher. He distinguished himself at Charleston and particularly in an assault by volunteers on Fort Sumter. Commodore Bunce was last June placed in charge of the North Atlantic squadron with the rank of acting rear admiral. Rear Admiral Francis Vallette McNair was a classmate of Admiral Bunce at Annapolis and also achieved fame for his courage in the war. He was at the bombardments of Fort Jackson and Fort St. Philip, and participated in the capture of New Orleans, the passage both ways of the Vicksburg batteries and the destruction of the ram Arkansas. As an executive officer in the South Atlantic squadron he received special mention for conduct at Fort Fisher. Since the war he has filled the various positions in the navy as commander of vessels on foreign cruises and stations, at Annapolis and at the several navy yards. Rear Admiral Thomas O. Selfridge is the son of another United States admiral of that name, who was on the retired list when his son received the grade. The younger Selfridge was graduated from the Annapolis academy in 1853, and, as he was at the head of the first class ever turned out under the present organization, was the first naval officer to receive a diploma in the service as now constituted. He was recalled from the coast of Africa in 1860 and made lieutenant commander. His career through the rebellion was so brilliant as to dazzle. He escaped drowning when the Cumberland was sunk by leaping through a porthole. On the Monitor, the Osage, the Vindicator and Huron he did gallant fighting, and, after the war, was promoted thirty numbers by the board of admirals. Admiral Selfridge has done much work in coast surveys and had charge of the corps which laid out the route of the canal across the isthmus of Darien. Admiral Selfridge was recently recalled from the foreign squadron on the charge of mixing into French politics. Rear Admiral Lester A. Beardslee was born in 1836 and was appointed acting midshipman in 1850. He was in one or two battles off the Chinese coast before going into the academy, from which he was graduated in 1856. He signalized himself in various ways in the war and was commissioned as commander after its close. After filling various commands he was appointed to the Port Royal station. Admiral Francis M. Ramsey is chief of the bureau of navigation. This is a difficult position and entails personal unpopularity during the incumbency. The detailing for uncongenial service is the duty of the chief. Admiral Walker entered the navy in 1850 from Pennsylvania, although a native of the District of Columbia. He made a record for daring in the war and his advancements have all been for merit. He was commissioned rear admiral in April, 1894. Rear Admiral John Grimes Walker was born in 1835 and has been in the navy since his appointment as midshipman on the Portsmouth, bound for a long Pacific cruise. He made a record for gallantry in the rebellion and after the war was on the Brazilian station. From 1869 to 1871 Admiral Walker was connected with the Burrard road, securing a two years' leave of absence for that purpose. In 1881 he became chief of the bureau of navigation, which place he filled eight years. Many of the improvements in the navy are due to his suggestions. Admiral George Brown was born in Indiana in 1825 and was appointed midshipman on the Cumberland frigate in 1846. Feb. 5 of this year will complete his forty-seventh year of naval service. As lieutenant in command of the Indianola, Admiral Brown surrendered his sinking ship to four gunboats near Upper Palmyra Island Feb. 24, 1863. He subsequently distinguished himself at Mobile. Among other offices he filled before reaching his present grade was that of commander of a Japanese ironclad. This was subsequent to 1867. He was permitted by the government to accept the mikado's commission, as the ship he commanded had been sold by the United States.

REAR ADMIRAL SELFRIDGE.

SPLITTING BANK NOTES.

Clumsy Devices for Counterfeiting Five-Dollar Bills.

Many devices have been resorted to by counterfeiters to raise genuine bank notes as well as to manufacture bogus ones, but one of the most novel has come to light within the last few days at the United States subtreasurer's office in this city, says the Philadelphia Record. It is not known whether the plan was ever tried before, nor how successful it was in this case, as it is not known whether anybody was caught by it. The scheme consisted of splitting a $5 and a $1 note and then pasting the back of the $1 note to the front of the $5 note and the front of the $1 note to the back of the $5 note. The mechanical part of the work was excellently done, but the fraud could be detected the moment the note was turned over.

An effort had been made to change the "one" to "five" on the "one" side of the new combined note, but it was done so clumsily that the fraud would have been seen at a glance, and the only hope of passing the notes as fives would have been to pass them over with the $5 side up and trust to the man receiving it not to turn it over before putting it away. The doctored notes came to the subtreasury through one of the banks, with the request that they be allowed whatever they were worth. The government always redeems notes at the face value, and as the faces in this case were of a $1 and a $5 note $6 was allowed. It is not known whether the bank was caught on the split notes or not.

A cleverly executed counterfeit $5 national-bank note was also detected at the subtreasury the other day. It was on the First National bank of Tamaqua and was burned in several places to give it an old appearance and then pasted on a piece of paper as if to hold it together. The fraud was first detected by turning over one of the corners and detecting a misspelled word on the back.

JOSEPH BENSON FORAKER.

The Possible Successor to United States Senator Brice.

Hon. Joseph Benson Foraker was born near Rainsborough, Highland county, Ohio, Feb. 5, 1846. He worked on a farm in his boyhood, and when sixteen years of age enlisted in the Eighty-ninth Ohio regiment and served in the Army of the Cumberland until the close of the war, having reached the rank of captain, and was aid-de-camp on Gen. H. W. Slocum's staff.

After the war he spent two years at Wesleyan University at Delaware, O., and then entered Cornell, where he graduated with the first class in 1869. He was admitted to the bar in that year, and in 1879-'82 was judge of the Cincinnati superior court, resigning his office on account of ill-health. In 1885 he was elected governor of Ohio. Mr. Foraker is one of the most prominent men in the republican party, and will probably be the successor of Senator Brice in the United States senate.

Defies Edged Instruments.

Regulus is outdone by a man from Ceylon who is now performing at the London Alhambra. Besides climbing with bare feet a ladder whose rungs are sharp sword edges, and lying on a bed of nail points with four men seated upon him, he curls himself up in a barrel through whose inner sides nails project, and is rolled about the stage at a rapid rate. The exhibition is described, however, as being curious rather than interesting to the spectators.

Coal Dust.

Coal dust is successfully used as fuel for boilers by a process invented by a German named Wegener. It is fed to the furnace automatically, and only ordinary chimney draft is needed.

Would Make Bad Blood.

Imp—Among the new arrivals today was a man who was electrocuted.

Satan—We must get rid of him in some way.

Imp—Why?

Satan—My son, there's no passion like jealousy; if we let him stay here he will make everybody discontented who was executed in the old-fashioned way.

MASONIC.

Temple of the Fraternity at Grand Rapids, From Various Quarries.

The Masonic temple recently dedicated at Grand Rapids is in some respects unsurpassed in this country. In furnishings and fittings it is rich and sumptuous, $300,000 having been expended for these particulars. The temple occupies the four upper floors of the building, the fourth and fifth being set apart for the uses of the blue lodge and chapter. On the fifth floor also are the Masonic clubrooms, with parlors, billiard rooms, etc., in front, with a large banquet hall in the rear. The sixth and seventh stories of the temple are devoted to the uses of the consistory, commandery and shrine. The temple is lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

There are 231 lodges, with a membership of 36,000 Masons, in Massachusetts.

The grand master of South Carolina ruled that a motion for adjournment was never in order; that a motion to lay on the table is Masonic; that general parliamentary rules obtain unless they conflict with recognized Masonic law.

The board of trustees of the Texas home report a fund of $92,161. It is generally understood that the board will continue to accumulate funds until the sum of $100,000 is reached and then invite propositions for the location and building of the home.

Bro. George P. Harrison is now grand master of Alabama and H. Clay Armstrong grand secretary. Bro. Harrison is a representative to congress from the Fifth district of Alabama.

Comp. J. Gilman Waite is now grand high priest of Massachusetts and Seranus Bowen grand secretary.

The national grand lodge of Egypt, having been recognized by the grand lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland, was included in the family of European grand lodges in 1878. It rules over 34 constituent lodges, and its grand master is Bro. Idris Rogheb Bey.

While a Mason should never hesitate to use the blackball for defense, yet he should never so lower his manhood and Masonry as to use it for an offense.

UNITED WORKMEN.

Concerning Identification of Deceased Members—Various Notes.

It is essential, among other things, that when a brother dies his remains shall be identified by members of his lodges. Sometimes this is impossible, and then identification by photograph has to be made, and this is often the cause of delay and dissatisfaction. It has been suggested that members might forward the names of several other brothers who could easily identify them in case of death to the recorder of their lodges, and so the officers could readily arrange this part of the proof of death.—Loyal Workman.

The overseer of St. Louis would like to have the grand lodge of Missouri own its own headquarters, instead of paying rent.

The membership of the Degree of Honor is now 40,000 in round numbers.

The bungling manner in which the ritual is sometimes handled in initiations would seem to indicate that the officers had missed their vocations.

Everything seems to be on the move again in Michigan. Applications are coming in from the lodges pretty generally. This gives promise of a good winter campaign.

ROYAL ARCANUM.

Visiting Brothers Should Be Well Treated. Council Jottings.

Every regent should see to it that visiting brothers are received into the council with cordiality. Let them also note that you perform your duties without the aid of a book, and they will not afterward remark that there were visible signs of rust in the council room.

No one but a member in good standing in the Royal Arcanum can become a member of the Loyal Additional Benefit association.

Tell your friend that you ask him to become a member so as to secure to his family in case of his death what he expects to provide for them while he lives. He cannot entirely forget his duty.

Indications point to Danforth lodge of Gardiner, Me., as winner of the banner in that state.

ODD FELLOWS.

Rebekahs Should Make Their Own Laws. Gossip From Many Lodges.

Our sister Rebekahs are as much Odd Fellows as though they belonged to the subordinate lodges. Their pride in the order is our pride in the order. Their desire for its upbuilding and extension is our desire for its upbuilding and extension. Their zeal for its good name is ours, and since they are our colaborers in this great work should they not have the right—in fact, is it not their right—to say how they shall do it?—Western Odd Fellow.

There are several new Rebekah lodges well under way in Massachusetts, but unless some special arrangement is made these petitions cannot be presented to the grand lodge until the annual session, next fall. The grand officers have no power in the matter.

Indiana has 237 Rebekah lodges working. The grand lodge of that state has issued 182 charters, and at its annual session there were 240 representatives present.

Since the Rebekah branch of the order was instituted in New Hampshire not a lodge has been lost. This covers a period of 21 years.

The Rebekah lodges are doing lots of good work and are having very pleasant sociables and spells.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

The Law In Relation to Arrearages of Members—Sword Thrusts.

When a member shall have become in arrears for dues, fines and assessments equal to the amount of one year's dues, the master of finance of his lodge shall forthwith notify him by mail that he is so in arrears, and that if such arrearages are not paid within 30 days after the date of such notice he will be suspended from the lodge and from the order. The master of finance shall receive any payment which may be tendered him in response to such notice at any time prior to action of the lodge thereon, provided the amount so tendered shall equal at least three months' dues.—Supreme Statutes.

Some action should be taken toward restoring suspended members of the order.

Bro. E. H. Hibben, past grand chancellor of Iowa, has been nominated for grand warden of the grand lodge of Odd Fellows of Iowa.

All orders, commands and mandates of the supreme chancellor and grand chancellor made in pursuance of their authority are binding upon all members of the order, and failure to obey such orders is a violation of Pythian duty and the laws of the order.

KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

Expense Assessment to Be Used In Extending the Order—Notes.

The supreme dictator has been authorized by the advisory board to issue an official circular providing that in all lodges of less than 75 members, where five or more shall be initiated between the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July, 1896, a premium of $3 for full rate, $2 for half rate and $1 for quarter rate members shall be paid. In lodges of 75 or more the same rule as to amount of premium will apply, provided there shall not be less than ten members initiated between Jan. 1 and July 1 next.

The order is restricted by its charter to operate in the most carefully selected territory.

Red Men.

The great council of Kentucky was instituted Dec. 27.

Algonquin tribe of St. Johnsbury has adopted 26 palefaces this term. The tribe is having a new wigwam erected.

The great chief of records of Iowa kindled two tribal council fires in hunting moon.

The prospects for several new fires in the Black Hills are very promising.

Three more tribes have joined the corporation of the Pennsylvania Red Men's home, thus adding 1,200 more members to the roll.

American Order of Foresters.

Much interest is manifested in regard to the new executives that have been elected, as the new work which will come in vogue under this administration will be of vital importance. The order has undergone a complete reorganization, and from being known as the Ancient Order of Foresters of America it is changed to the Foresters of America. The written and unwritten work will be entirely changed.

REV. A. C. KENDRICK, D. D., LL. D.,
PROFESSOR OF GREEK, UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER,
Is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as one of the revisers of the New Testament. In writing for the public he is always sincere, direct and forcible, and here is what he says: "Having received from the use of Warner's Safe Cure very marked benefits, I can cordially recommend it to others."

BISHOP EDWARD WILSON, D. D., LL. D.,
Says: "I have taken Warner's Safe Cure with great advantage and derived much benefit from its use, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends."
The fact that a man occupies the high position of bishop and religious teacher in the Church entitles him to unquestioned respect and gives his words and endorsement a special power.

REV. J. E. RANKIN, D. D., LL. D.,
PRESIDENT OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON,
In a most outspoken manner, says: "I have known of several persons who have been permanently cured of diseases of the kidney and urinary organs, by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I have known, too, of its being used in similar cases by physicians of the highest standing. This treatment, I want in the interests of humanity to recommend."

THE LATE DR. J. G. HOLLAND,
EDITOR OF THE "CENTURY" MAGAZINE,
Who was an educated physician, but for many years best known as one of the leading literary men of this country, wrote and published the following in defense of proprietary medicines: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered or used in actual medical practice."

Many persons who favored the Indiana Federation, but held aloof until it was certain a charter would be granted by the American Federation, will now make haste to be enrolled.

RAILWAY ELECTION POSTPONED.

It being evident that the proposed subsidy of $95,000 for the construction of the Indiana Centralrailroad through Huntington township would be defeated at the election, the railway people have withdrawn the petition and filed another, in which the amount asked for is $55,000, one per cent of the assessed property of the township. The election, which was to take place next Tuesday, has been postponed thirty days.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

Machinist John Houlihan Falls and is Injured.

Charles W. Hall Has a Knee Cap Displaced—Railway Election Postponed—Local Gossip.

John Houlihan, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, was standing upon an engine yesterday afternoon tightening a nut, when the large wrench slipped and he fell backwards a distance of four or five feet, striking upon the sharp end of the iron frame which holds the pilot beam in position. His spine was injured and there may be a slight fracture of one of the ribs, so the doctor says, and it will be some time before the unfortunate man will again be at work.

ANOTHER RAILWAY CHANGE.

Wanatah News: "A prominent railway official has confirmed the rumor that the coaling station of the Pennsylvania road will be moved from Valparaiso to Wanatah in the spring. This change is made because the company needs the ground at Valparaiso for switching purposes. It will add considerably to the pay roll at Wanatah."

KNEE CAP DISPLACED.

Charles W. Hall was engaged in setting a locomotive valve in the Pittsburg shops yesterday, when he slipped and fell off the block he was standing upon. His left knee struck the sharp edge of the wood, displacing the knee cap, an injury which sometimes results in making a life cripple out of the person receiving it. Mr. Hall received prompt surgical aid, however, and there is no occasion for alarm in his case, yet it will be some days, and possibly weeks, before he will be able to walk without the aid of crutches. He is a popular young man and is not lacking in sympathy both in and out of shop circles.

A BIG SHIPMENT.

The Electric corporation has commenced the work of installing an electric lighting plant at Canton, Miss., and today shipped to that point one 40 light arc and one 750-light incandescent dynamo, together with wires and all the electrical apparatus necessary for a complete plant. From Salem, Ohio, there was also shipped to the same point, on the order of the Electric corporation, an engine, boilers and pumps for equipping a steam plant. This is a big contract, but it is nothing unusual for this company, whose business has grown to immense proportions.

Both are employed on the Nickel Plate.

Machinist W. S. Wells resumed work this morning. He states that the condition of Mrs. Wells is much the same as it has been for several days, though her temperature is not quite so high, an indication that the fever is abating.

The Logansport Journal is of the opinion that Harry N. May will succeed his brother as trainmaster of the Chicago division of the Panhandle road. Sherman May was recently promoted to superintendent of the Richmond division of the line.

Indianapolis Journal: "It is stated that the position of general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg was offered to E. B. Taylor, general superintendent of transportation, which was declined; then F. L. Loree was selected for the position. A Pittsburg paper says there is some soreness over the recent promotions, two or three persons having been ignored who thought themselves first in the line of promotion."

Monroeville Breeze: "Johnny Finan, a Monroeville boy, who is now filling an important position as telegraph operator in one of the railroad offices at McCalester, Indian territory, writes home to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Finan, that he is about to take unto himself a companion for life, of his choice from among the fair sex of the far southwestern territory. The intended is a sister to the wife of O. W. Argo, and the daughter of a prominent and wealthy citizen of McCalester."

Twenty-three hundred railway stock cars were sold at Chicago Thursday for $630,000. The cars were formerly the property of the Hicks Stock Car company. Last November a judgment was entered against the company for the sum of $1,341,000, under a bill of foreclosure filed by the Railway Equipment company, which furnished the cars. Judge Jenkins, of the federal court, decreed their sale. The cars were purchased in the interests of the foreclosing company by Charles S. Kimball, of New York.

Oregon's Population.

PORTLAND, Ogn., Jan. 18.—The population of Oregon, according to the census just completed by the county assessors 364,762, an increase of about 13 per cent. over the government census of 1890.

A paper on Nathaniel Hawthorne was read by Mrs. George DeWald before the Carroll reading club yesterday. This was followed by a reading by Mrs. P. J. McDonald. The club met at Mrs. DeWald's.

The Fort Wayne Cornet band will give an entertainment at the Saengerbund hall in a short time for the purpose of raising money to help buy new instruments. The entertainment will no doubt be a good one.

Miss Nettie Fry, of 52 John street, was very agreeably surprised by a merry party of young people, who called Wednesday evening to remind her of her eighteenth birthday and to enjoy her genial hospitality for a few hours.

Last Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leykauf entertained a few friends at progressive pedro in honor of Miss Della and Robbie Dehart, of Bloomville, Ohio, who are visiting at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicolaus Leykauf.

A Much-Talked-Of Woman.

Mrs. Dimmick, who, the idle gossips of the social world have it, is to become the wife of ex-President Benjamin Harrison, will be pleasantly remembered by those who were frequent visitors at the White House during its occupancy by Mr. Harrison and his family. Mrs. Dimmick now resides in New York. She is the niece of the late Mrs. Harrison, and her presence added much to the charm of the social life of the last administration. She was extremely popular and scarcely less esteemed than Mrs. Harrison, whose graciousness and sweetness of manner won the friendship of all who met her. Mrs. Harrison died Oct. 25, 1892, and through the long and tedious illness her devoted husband was greatly assisted in his patient vigils at her bedside by Mrs. Dimmick.

MRS. DIMMICK.

Mme. Scarron.

Mme. Scarron, afterward the famous Mme. de Maintenon, wife of Louis XIV, was in her girlhood remarkably beautiful. She was dark, with piercing black eyes and wavy hair. In middle life her gravity of countenance and of department was considered quite extraordinary in that age of gaiety.

A Hero.

She—There is nothing heroic about you. I ordered you to do something brave, before I would consent to love you, and you didn't do it.

He—Pardon, but I did.

"What did you do?"

"I disobeyed you. Don't you think that required courage?"—Truth.

Not If the Moon Was Bright.

Harry—"Is this Miss Wallace that I am going to meet to-night a pretty girl?"

Ned—"Well, that's a matter of opinion. My own idea is that she is much more likely to get engaged on a moonlight buggy ride than at a fashionable ball."—Somerville Journal.

Thought So.

Maid—"The new cook's come, ma'am, and she's made herself comfortable in the parlor."

Mistress—"Goodness! Has the woman her faculties?"

Maid—"I think so, ma'am; she's brought something tied up in a big red handkerchief."—Truth.

NEWS NOTES.

J. Z. Armstrong, of Montpelier, is in the city.

Mrs. William Fleming left for Pittsburg last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Rich entertained friends last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Safford have returned from their wedding trip.

Miss Julia Manuel will spend Sunday with her parents in Van Wert, Ohio.

Ethan Allen, of Washington boule vard, has returned from Saginaw, Mich.

Miss Ethel Ninde will accompany Miss Demmon on her return to Ann Arbor.

Miss Maud Gardiner will leave for Ohio the first of next week to visit friends.

Ed. Dalman, formerly of this city, will soon locate permanently at Richmond, Va.

E. K. Dorr arrived home from Indianapolis last night to recuperate after a siege of illness.

Mrs. J. B. Olinger left today for Grand Rapids to pay a brief visit to her relatives there.

Mr. and Mrs. George Parrot are at home to their friends at the corner of Clay and Madison streets.

Mrs. Thomas Hall and daughter, Ethel, of Hendricks street, left today for a visit to Crestline, Ohio.

The Wayne Cadet band is working up a skating carnival to be be held on Reservoir lake in a short time.

H. G. Robertson, the obliging young floor walker at the People's store, has resumed his duties after a tussle with the grip.

Mrs. Grace Devine, of 380 South Lafayette street, is seriously ill. She is the daughter of the well known Pittsburg shopman, Al. Throckmorton.

Bert Neufer, of the United States army, who has been visiting his brother, J. M. Neufer, the South Calhoun street druggist, has gone to Indianapolis.

While attending the opera of "Princess Bonnie" at the Temple last night Mrs. J. C. Peltier was taken suddenly and seriously ill. She was removed to her home and this morning was reported improved.

Charles Essinger, night clerk at the Crescent restaurant, was held up on East DeWald street about 7 o'clock last evening by two men, who pulled a gun and demanded his money. Fortunately Essinger was "broke" and the footpads got nothing.

Rev. J. L. Leeper will give at Westminster church at 7:30 p. m., a discourse on "The First Disciples of the Gospel Call," illustrated by many fine stereopticon views, among which will be a number of Frank Beard's recent caricatures, which are sermons in themselves.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. A. M. McCaffery, of Holton avenue, was pleasantly surprised by a large number of her friends, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. Supper was served at 5 o'clock and the afternoon and evening was spent in games and social chat.

Engineer and Mrs. James Craig, of South Clinton street, entertained about twenty-five of their friends at progressive pedro last evening. The first prizes were awarded to Mrs. W. F. Graeter and Mr. Albert L. Bond, and the boobies were awarded to Mrs. A. T. Heit and Mr. George Durfee.

At a primary election held by the republican voters of the township in which Monroeville is located, W. J. Cowan was elected over J. W. Meeks as a delegate to the district republican convention to be held in Fort Wayne, to elect a delegate to the national convention to be held at St. Louis, Mo.

Last evening, at her home, on Union street, Miss Maud Sponhauer very pleasantly entertained at cards and dancing. At 11 o'clock a dainty repast was served. Those who took part were Misses Grace and Gusta Hauck, Myrtle Haines, Bertha Brown, Carrie Hauck, Messrs. Julius Simon, John Wolfrum, William Bernhardt, Henry Meyer, George Brown, Edward Bittler.

Miss Eva Doolittle, supreme mistress at arms, from South Bend, Ind., who is on her way to Wolcottville, Ind., to organize a Lady Maccabee Hive, stopped over and visited with Fort Wayne Hive No. 6, at their regular review last evening. To know Mrs. Doolittle is to admire and respect her. She shows the true Maccabee spirit, and commands the confidence of all with whom she comes in contact.

Mrs. James Wilding entertained the Missionary society of the Wayne street M. E. church yesterday afternoon at her home, 260 West Wayne street, in a delightful manner. There were fifty-six ladies present. Interesting papers were delivered by Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Dr. R D. Stellman and a reading by Mrs. G. W. Lahr. After the literary exercises a business session was held. Music, refreshments and social features made the meeting a very enjoyable one.

The Brookside Curling club played a game at that beautiful lake this afternoon.

The many friends of Miss Grace Devine will be sorry to learn of her serious illness.

Mrs. A. G. Wood, of Warsaw, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. O. P. Eversole, in this city.

The regular meeting of the Ministerial association will be held Monday morning, at 10 o'clock.

Jacob Kern leaves tomorrow evening for New York state in the interests of the Indiana Machine works.

Miss Luella Martin, daughter of Louis Martin, of the Boston store, has somewhat recovered after a two weeks' sickness.

Rev. H. L. Shively, of Albion, a well known minister in this state, has accepted a call from the First Presbyterian church at Columbia City.

The revival services of the Berry street M. E. church have proved so interesting that they will be continued into next week. Services Monday night at 7:30.

Dr. J. W. Younge will lecture in the Presbyterian church at Noblesville next Monday evening, on "The Origin, Mission and Destiny of Man; or, the Physical Basis of Life."

Monroeville Breeze: "Frank Belot, the accommodating and friendly clerk of the Allen circuit court, was in our city last Monday evening, attending the public installation and banquet held by the K. of P. order."

Monroeville Breeze: "The Misses Katie and Maggie Haley, who are making their home in Fort Wayne for sometime past are here visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Haley, and at the bedside of their sister, Ella, who has been seriously ill for several weeks past.—Eli Magner and family, formerly of this city, now residing in Fort Wayne, were in our city last Saturday attending the funeral of their old friend and neighbor, Mrs. James McArdle."

At the regular meeting of Summit City lodge No. 36, A. O. W., held last Thursday evening, it was decided to give an entertainment and social in their hall, No. 7 Calhoun street, on Wednesday evening, January 29, the proceeds to be used for the purchase of uniforms and necessary paraphernalia for carrying out the team work as prescribed in the new ritual. A committee was appointed, with power to act, and the tickets can now be had upon application to members of the lodge. Five applications for membership were also received and referred to investigating committees.

Dora Davis is a young woman who has been in the police court many a time before, and she was there again this morning. She was found by Officer Knock last night on the street in an intoxicated condition. In court this morning she gave the name of Smith. The girl's parents live near Marseilles, Ohio. She has been in the city for a few years, and has been an inmate of various low resorts, her last appearance in police court being a few weeks ago when she was arrested together with Mrs. Barnum and Fanny Lovejoy at the Barnum house, near the driving park. She served a term in jail and was released only a few days ago. She went to jail again this morning.

A new lodge of the Knights of the Maccabees was instituted at Ossian last evening under the direction of Past Great Commander E. P. Thomas, of this city, assisted by about twenty-five members, including the initiatory team of Wayne tent No. 54. The new lodge is composed of prominent business men of that town. After the formal institution of the tent by Sir Knight Thomas and a candidate had been conducted through the initiatory work by Wayne Tent's team, the new lodge proceeded to the election of officers, choosing Jos. B. Haifley past commander and Jas. C. Hatfield commander. Deputy Great Commander D. S. Bechtel, of Columbia City, organized the new lodge.

Last Monday night was the occasion of the public installation of the newly elected officers of Monroeville lodge, Knights of Pythias, at that place. Mr. E. V. Emrick, of this city, delivered the principal address, and in speaking of it the Monroeville Breeze says: "At the close of the installation the choir rendered another selection and Bro. E. V. Emrick, of Fort Wayne, was introduced and proceeded to address the assemblage. Mr. Emrick is too well known here for us to enter into details concerning his address. It contained a glowing tribute to this, the order so affected by young men; praised its work for good, its effort for the advancement of truth and morality, and was delivered in his usual interesting style."

A brilliant event was the reception given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Rich, at their pretty home on West Lewis street. Music was the feature of the evening and at midnight a three course luncheon was served. The table was beautifully decorated with smilax and carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Rich have lately returned from California and the gathering last night will be a long remembered one by all who participated therein. Those present were Misses Florence Dalman, Josie Carter, Mabel Davies, Anna Davies, Minnie Adams, Lula Adams, May Hoadley, Anna Hoadley, Maude McBride, Lota Rich, Della Rich, Bessie Rich, Cora Moore, May Fisk, Hattie Jones, Lillian Fisk, Bessie Dille, Olive Brosius, Messrs Charles Yagerlehner, John Wagner, Ormonde Davies, David Greenawald, Eugene Fitch, Del Fitch, Don Smith, Carl Dameuth, Norman Robbins, James Swayne, Frank Rich, Noble Hunter.

OLD SUPERSTITION.

What the Curfew Bell Meant in Olden Time.

And What It Should Mean Today to Millions of People.

To Persons of Sense This Has Great Weight.

The curfew bell was no myth. It was a summons to the people to put out the fires, stop all labor and retire to sleep. It was a summons also, which none dare disobey, for heavy penalties followed disobedience.

O, for a curfew bell at the present day!

A bell whose ringing tones should summons us to rest from work! To rest from the intense, mad rush which hurries us on in the weakening, wearying, nerve-tearing, brain-destroying struggle of life.

Do you know what this means?

You professional and business men, how severe is the strain of thought and mind is plainly evidenced in your weakened nerves, your trembling on excitement, your sleepless, restless nights, your utterly relaxed nervous condition after mental work.

You clerks and mechanics, who work all day, how weak you grow, how pale, lifeless, spiritless you become, how dull and tired-headed.

You women, sales-girls, and those confined in mills and factories, how heavy is your drudgery, how wearing upon your life, how enervating to your feelings, how exhausting to your strength, how blighting to your beauty. You are often nervous, generally weak, and always tired.

Alas, no curfew bell can call a halt in the world's work, but a warning voice can direct you how best to overcome the nervous and physical weakness which such work entails. You who would be strong in nerve and brain, who would gain physical and mental strength to continue your work successfully, use as the vital restorative, the strengthener of brain and nerve, the giver of renewed life and vigor, that greatest of all medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Nothing on earth will so quickly and surely restore your strength.

Just see what it did for Mr. John Connors, of 323 Rivington street, New York city, who says:

"I cheerfully recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It has acted like a charm. Six months ago I became restless, weak and all broken up from unrefreshing sleep. My rest did me no good—I thought more harm than good. I had lost my appetite day by day.

"I saw my doctor and I tried different remedies recommended by the people I came in contact with as keeper in the Tombs, but of no avail, until one morning my wife got me a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried that bottle and it did me a world of good. I took five bottles in all, but could have dropped off at three.

"My sleep is now of the most refreshing kind. I never remembered in thirty-six years feeling as well as I do today. My wife and two boys, five and three years old, are taking their first bottle, and they already show the benefit of it.

"I hope this will reach those unfortunates who are suffering as I suffered from loss of appetite, loss of sleep unstrung nerves, melancholy feeling and general weakness, all of which suffered from six months ago, and from which that valuable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy relieved me forever, I hope and believe."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to conquer your weakness and debility. Use it and get yourself strong, vigorous and well.

This remarkable discovery should not be classed with the ordinary patent medicines. It is the prescription of the most successful specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, and he can be consulted by all without charge, personally or by letter.

BRITISH SQUADRON.

It is Not Bound for American Waters.

The Venezuela News is More Pacific and There is a Belief That the Trouble is at an End.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The admiralty department informs the Associated Press that the destination of the flying squadron of British war ships now off Spithead has not been determined upon, even by the admiralty, and that certainly the war ships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere else in American waters at present.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The statement from London that the British flying squadron was not intended for American waters was received with visible relief in naval circles, but in the state department it was evident that it had been anticipated, and it is surmised that Ambassador Bayard had already communicated directly with the department on the subject and given satisfactory assurances as to the intentions of the British government. The impression is strengthening that the Venezuelan matter is soon to be settled, or rather put in the way of settlement (for the execution of the details of the project will occupy much time) in the course of a few weeks at furthest, and that upon lines indicated in the recent Associated Press dispatches from Washington. The plan is likely to take the shape of a double arbitration, and in this respect it will parallel the Behring Sea arbitration. First will come an arbitration of the title to lands lying west of the Schomburk line. To an extent this will be a concession to the British position, which has been one of constant readiness to arbitrate this territory, but it will be a concession in part only, for there will be a provision that if it shall appear in the course of the investigation of the arbitrators that there is reason to doubt the sufficiency of the British title to any part of the lands lying to the eastward of the Schomburgk line, then this fact shall be reported to the British and Venezuelan governments and shall constitute a sufficient ground for another arbitration. This would parallel the course of the United States and British governments in the Bering sea arbitration, wherein the original arbitrators passed upon the question of damages sustained by the ships of the power who was found to be in the right, but left to another commission the method of adjusting these claims.

It is pointed out here that by the action of such a course the British government would avoid any direct recognition of the, to it, obnoxious Monroe doctrine, as construed by Secretary Olney, the first precedent would be followed and the United States would still achieve its object, namely, a judicial settlement of the entire boundary question upon its merits.

GUILTY.

Elverton Chapman Must Take His Medicine.

Was Stubborn and Refused to Testify in the Sugar Investigation Last Spring.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The jury in the trial of Elverton R. Chapman, the member of the New York stock broking firm of Moore & Schley, who refused to answer questions put by the senate sugar investigating committee, returned a verdict of guilty at noon today, after being out all night. The case undoubtedly will be appealed to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia and thence to the United States supreme court, which ever way the next highest tribunal decides. The defense took numerous exceptions to the rulings of Judge Cole, in the course of the trial, and these exceptions, including objections on constitutional grounds, will be the basis of the argument on appeals. The Chapman trial was regarded as a test case and will be followed by the trial of Correspondents Edwards and Shriver and Broker John W. McCarthy, of this city.

DEATH OF FRANK LAWYER.

Well-Known Politician Dies Suddenly From Heart Disease.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Alderman Frank Lawler, ex-congressman, and one of the most widely known and best liked politicians in Chicago, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart disease at his home, 424 West Taylor street. Death was absolutely unexpected, the alderman having been apparently in the best of health and spirits the night before, while attending a charity ball which he himself had arranged in West Twelfth Street Turner hall. His death took place in the presence of his wife and five children.

HEALTH BREAKING DOWN.

Convict Redwine, the Bank Embezzler, is Dying.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 18.—Dr. W. T. Rowles, of the Ohio penitentiary, being asked, said today that he believed Redwine, the bank embezzler of Atlanta, would not live three months. His health is very poor. He is breaking down fast. He is becoming bloodless. This statement, Dr. Rowles says, has been made to the president officially, Redwine being an applicant for pardon.

The Shipping Strike.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The great shipping strike is once more announced to have been ended. It is added that the Belfast and Clyde men, as the result of a ballot, have accepted the compromise terms which were proposed in December last.

INSANE ASYLUM.

Provisions for Its Enlargement Now Under Way.

Over 100 Applications for Admission—Dr. Smith Talks on the Situation.

RICHMOND, Ind., Jan. 18.—The completion of extensive improvents at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane, located here, promises to relieve to some extent the deplorable condition of affairs that now exists with regard to the insane. For a long time the management has found it necessary to reject a large number of deserving cases that asked for admission because there was no room for them. In this way a large number of cases collected within the district and at most of the time there were at least 100 applications on file for admission that could only be considered when a patient died or was discharged as cured. With a view to relieving this condition of affairs the last legislature appropriated $50 000 with which to build additions, and these are now approaching completion. The work of equipping the new buildings for occupancy is in progress and it will be but a short time until they can be taken possession of. About 100 more patients can then be admitted, but the medical superintendent, Dr. Samuel E. Smith, says that the condition will soon be as bad as it was before and that it will be necessary to ask the next legislature, which meets next year, for another appropriation of $50,000 with which to make further additions.

In regard to the report that insanity is rapidly increasing, Dr. Smith says that he believes the increase is only relative and that could the cases all be accommodated within the walls of the institutions, where they would escape public notice, this opinion would not prevail. Indiana's rate of increase in the matter of insanity, he says, is small compared with that of the other states, although one or two others run below it.

RIVALS QUARREL.

Both Wanted to Marry the Same Girl.

They Fight in a Saloon and the Vanquished One Takes Revenge on Innocent Parties.

JACKSON, Ky., Jan. 18 — William Smith was mortally and James Frazier seriously wounded at Quicksand, this county, yesterday afternoon by George Smith. Smith is at large, though a posse has gone in search of him.

George Smith and James Frazier, jr., were in love with the same girl, and both were jealous. They met in a saloon near the mouth of Quicksand yesterday, and while under the influence of liquor engaged in a quarrel. Frazier knocked Smith down. Bystanders interfered and Smith left the saloon. He met on the outside the elder Frazier and Wm. Smith, a relative of his rival. Without any warning he leveled his pistol, which he carried in his hand, and, after shooting both men at close range, continued his flight. The two victims had nothing to do with the fight, nor had they any knowledge of it.

PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The National Convention Will be Held July 22.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18.—The hearing of representatives of the different cities which are working to secure the national populist convention that meets on July 22nd next, was continued today, when the national committee reassembled. Chicago was the first to present its claims, the speakers in behalf of that city being B. M. Fulweiler, of Arkansas, Dr. H. Taylor, Eugene Smith and F. J. Schultz.

S. Schieler and H. O. Schneider spoke for Kansas City, Kansas.

Harry Tracey, D E Leidy and Mayor Holland spoke in behalf of Dallas, Texas. When they had finished the committee went into executive session to consider the proposition of the various cities.

MAHER-FITZSIMMONS.

George Siler Referee and James Lawler Stakeholder.

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 18.—Julian and Quinn have agreed on George Siler, of Chicago, for referee of the Maher-Fitzsimmons fight and James Lawler, of Houston, Texas, for final stakeholder.

The City Minister's union, has decided to send a circular letter to all the religious bodies in the United States calling on preachers, Christian Endeavor societies, Epworth league and Young People's societies generally to unite, January 26, in prayer that the prize fights may be prevented and the city of El Paso saved from disgrace.

Diamond Dealers Fail.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Gustave Fox & Co., dealers in diamonds, east Fourth street, assigned today to Gus May. Their liabilities are placed at $35 000, with assets at about $25,000. Preferences for $11,000 were given, the largest being $6,000 to Jennie Fox. They hope soon to resume.

Emanuel B. Heller, of Streator, Ill., and his nephew, Master Sidney Wolferton, are the guests of Mr. Heller's mother and sister.

PREFERRED DEATH

To the Dishonor of Wearing Stripes in Prison.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Jan. 18.—Charles H. Anderson, a sergeant in company E, Twenty-third infantry, of the regular army, stationed at Fort Clark, Texas, attempted suicide on the eastbound Clover Leaf flyer, when near this city.

As the train came to a standstill at the depot, Anderson got up with blood pouring from his neck. A bloody razor lay on the car floor and as he picked it up a panic ensued among the passengers. The man is yet living, but with scarcely a chance of recovery. On his collar, which he had removed and put in his pocket, the following was written:

"I would return for trial, but prefer death to the dishonor of wearing stripes."

Of the crime indicated, nothing can be learned. Papers indicate that he has been in the regular army since 1880 and that his home is in Buffalo, N. Y. He had nearly $400 in his pockets.

WITH PASTOR HICKS.

Indianapolis Christians Say Immersion is Not a Test of Fellowship.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—The departure of Rev. Mr. Hicks, of the South Side Christian church in receiving members without the formality of baptism by immersion has led to open war between his church and other churches in the same denomination. Pastor Lucas, of the Tabernacle Christian church has openly declared from the pulpit that Rev. Mr. Hicks' church is not a Christian church and inviting its members to fellowship with those of the Tabernacle. To this the members of the south side church have made a reply, declaring in an address just issued that whoever believes in Christ is a Christian; that the individual Christian must interpret the Bible for himself and allow everyone else the same privilege, that faith in Christ implies obedience to him according to the measure of the person's knowledge of his will; that baptism should not be made a test of fellowship, but the person should be left to obey as his understanding leads him.

GERMANY'S EMPEROR.

Speech From the Throne on an Anniversary Day.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—Throughout the German empire today the twenty-fifth anniversary of the crowning at Versailles of King William of Prussia, grandfather of the present emperor, as emperor of Germany and the consequent re-establishment of the German empire was celebrated in some form or other. The great event was the gathering in the white hall of the castle, where the emperor, surrounded by ministers of state, admirals of the navy, members of the diplomatic corps, kings and princes, all in glittering uniforms, made a speech from the throne.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Dr. James Harvey Killed in West Virginia.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Jan. 18.—News is just received that Dr. James Harvey, of Wyoming county, was shot from ambush at Guyan Roughs He was riding on horseback when he received the fatal shot and was found by friends on the public highway. James Allan is under arrest charged with the crime. The two men had trouble recently.

Christian Houses Burned.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 18.—In a letter just received, Rev. H. N. Barnum, D. F., of Harpool, Eastern Turkey, where property of the American board was burned, says that the reports have been secured from 176 villages in the vicinity of Harpool. These villages contained 15,400 christian houses. Of this number 7,074 have been burned, and 15,845 persons are reported killed. Dr. Barnum adds: "The loss, I fear, will prove to be much greater."

James Hopkins Dead.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 18.—James M. Hopkins, an old time iron master and politician, who was the last man living who figured conspicuously in the famous Christiania riots, died at his home at Conowingo this county, aged seventy-five years. In 1858 he ran for congress on the democratic ticket against Thaddeus Stevens, and gave the great commoner the hardest fight in the latter's congressional career.

Hudnut Owns the Line.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 18.—Vincennes shareholders have sold their interests in the Citizens' Electric Street railway to B. G. Hudnut, of Terre Haute, who is now sole proprietor and who assumes control of the line. E. F. Tindolph, general manager, has resigned.

Anxious for Dr. Gasser.

HANCOCK, Mich., Jan. 18.—Friends of Dr. Adelin Gasser are greatly worried about his safety. Dr. Gasser left here in October for his old home in Zurich, Switzerland. He wrote from Havre, but has not been heard from since.

Dies of a Broken Heart.

LIMA, O., Jan. 18.—Miss Mary Jones died today from a broken heart caused by her brother's forgeries, which will amount to $50,000, and the death of her father, who brooded over his son's disgrace.

Faster Dead.

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 18.—After twenty one days of voluntary fasting Mrs. Isaac Gephart, of New Carlisle, this county, died yesterday afternoon. On Christmas day she ate her dinner but not another meal in all the rest of the time. Her determination was the result of reading a book on Christian science. Her husband is a substantial farmer.

SENSIBLE MOVE.

The Manufacturers Trust Company Have Gold to Spare.

They Propose to Deposit It in the Government Treasury To Be Used for Purchasing Bonds Later.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Ex Congressman W. J. Coombs, president of the Manufacturers Trust company, of this city, has sent the following letter to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle: "We are subscribers to the popular loan and have accumulated gold to be used in payment for the same. We are willing to deposit this gold in the treasury for the use of the government and receive a receipt therefore, specifying that in case none of the bonds be awarded to us, that the gold shall be returned out of the proceeds of that which is received from successful bidders. We think that many other banking institutions are willing to do the same thing and in that way, with out loss to themselves, assist the treasury in the interim in maintaining its gold reserve."

Mr. Coombs says people all over the country are accumulating gold with which to buy the new issue of bonds. This is being drawn from the treasury and the result may be that the reserve will be reduced to the danger point. "We have no doubt," he said, "that other banking institutions will be as willing as we are to give the government the use of the accumulated gold until February 5."

GAIN A POINT.

Democrats Secure a Victory in the South Bend Muddle.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 18.—The democrats gained a point today in the fight against the republican gerrymander of the city by the resignation of Councilman Frank Gonsiorowski, republican, who gives his reason as having no desire to take part in a scheme that would limit the influence of his people in the government of the city to one ward. Mr. Gonsiorowski has remained away from two council meetings, thus, with the absent democrats, prevented a quorum. He takes this means to relieve himself of any further responsibility to his party in the affair. Mr. Gonsiorowski's resignation complicates city affairs to an unknown extent. Of course democrats will not attend the council meetings and there are no means of compelling them to do so without a quorum present. The republicans cannot fill the vacancy, neither can they transact any business until nearly time for the spring elections. The gas company's franchise has expired and they have applied for another. The waterworks fund is about exhausted and the trustees want more money. In addition to this city bills must be audited and a new hose company is waiting for the council's acceptance of its new building.

SCENE IN AN ANDERSON COURT.

Lawyers Use the Word "Lie" and Come Near Having a Fight.

ANDERSON, Ind., Jan. 18.—There was an exciting scene in the circuit court yesterday that for the time looked as if it would end in a fistic encounter. An effort was being made to disbar Attorney Kittinger in certain of the white cap cases now on trial. He was making his reply and made a very free use of uncomplimentary terms in speaking of the part Prosecutor Campbell and Judge Ellison had taken in the cases from the start, and, as he puts it, without any foundation whatever. He questioned certain official acts. This resulted in a very hot retort and discussion, and as a result the word "lie" was used several times. Judge Ellison appealed to Judge Bundy, who was on the bench, and asked for protection from unjust charges. Prosecutor Campbell was direct in his remarks and matters looked decidedly equally. Friends, however, interfered in the matter and at last induced all to let it drop.

WAS NOT BOYLE.

The Cleveland Man Was E. M. Cameron, a Picture Agent.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion Again Disappointed in the Search for William Boyle.

The sensational story published in a Fort Wayne paper a day or two ago that William Boyle, the man who is said to be defrauding the Catholic Benevolent Legion out of his life insurance policy of $2 000, had been captured in Cleveland, turns out to be a fake.

Fort Wayne people are familiar with the history of the case. Boyle was a member of the legion and carried $2,000 insurance. Some years ago he disappeared and the supposition is that he was drowned in Lake Michigan. His widow sued to recover the insurance and the case has been bitterly fought through all the courts, the legion contending that Boyle is not dead and that he has been seen in various places since his reported death

A. C Gocke and W. H. Gordon, members of the legion in this city, went to Cleveland Thursday to identify the man who was under surveillance, and they have returned with the knowledge that the wrong man had been captured. The Cleveland man proved to be E. M. Cameron, a picture agent.

Cameron displayed a clean right leg, which satisfied the scruples of the Fort Wayne men. However, the examination brought to light one of the most remarkable cases of mistaken identity on record anywhere Boyle's description is tallied by that of Cameron in every particular. Even their occupations were the same and they traveled the same territory. The history of the arrest of Cameron is one of more than ordinary interest

Cameron represents the Hunger Portrait company, of Cleveland, and several months ago he called at the home of J. D. Bresnahan.

Mr. Bresnahan is the Cleveland collector of the society which Boyle defrauded, and the similarity of the appearance of the solicitor and the missing man struck Bresnahan so forcibly that he communicated with the police and a detective was detailed to arrest Cameron. On July 8 Cameron was seen by Detective O'Hara and Mr. Bresnahan and placed in custody. When accused of being Boyle he said he was not guilty, but he acknowledged that his picture adorned the circulars sent out by the supreme secretary of the order. At his request he was taken to several prominent business men, and they said he had lived in Cleveland for fifteen years. He was released, but on last Monday John D. Carroll, the supreme secretary, telegraphed Mr. Bresnahan to hold Boyle until Fort Wayne comrades could arrive and identify him. A. A. Gocke and W. H. Gordon arrived Thursday night and proceeded to Mr. Bresnahan's house and wanted him to cause Cameron's arrest immediately. He refused to do so and explained the outcome of the first arrest of the man, and assured the Fort Wayne men that Cameron was all right. They were not satisfied, and this morning, accompanied by Mr. Bresnahan and two detectives, they called at the real estate office which was frequented by Cameron. The suspected man did not put in an appearance, and it was thought that he had become alarmed at the publications in the newspapers and had flown. Then they went to the office of the Hunger Portrait company and waited an hour, but Cameron did not arrive. As the men stepped out of the elevator to go to the street, Cameron walked in. He was confronted by the Fort Wayne men, and they at once saw that he answered the description of Boyle Upon being questioned, Cameron said he had been in Fort Wayne and had talked with a number of prominent citizens here. He had been in Wabash and Toledo, Ohio, where people made affidavits that they had seen Boyle since he had been reported drowned, and that he had been in Chicago in the summer of 1891, when Boyle was drowned. The circumstances indicated that the right man had been secured, and he was taken to the central police station, and an examination was made for a certain scar on the right leg, which it was said would identify Boyle without a doubt. As the party walked to the prison, Cameron limped with the right leg, as had Boyle, and the Fort Wayne men were congratulating themselves, notwithstanding the statements of the Cleveland men who had identified Cameron as a resident of that city. Cameron submitted to the examination and the detectives and Fort Wayne men were astonished when they found that there was no scar on the leg and the accused was released and the Fort Wayne men left for home. The authorities pronounce the case one of the most remarkable they have ever heard of.

DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN

Begins His Pastorate of Bethany Church at Philadelphia.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, who conducted the series of union revival services in this city in November, began his pastorate of the Bethany Presbyterian church at Philadelphia last Sunday and delivered sermons that day to immense audiences. In its write up of the services the Philadelphia Times says: "He arrived in the city Saturday and will be the guest of John Wanamaker at Lindenhurst for the present. He has cancelled his evangelistic engagements, which extended over the entire year. Since he left Bethany his evangelistic tours have been attended with great blessing and success. Mr. D. L Moody said recently that he considered Dr. Chapman the foremost evangelist of the day, and while the evangelistic field has great charms for him, the earnest and urgent call from the Bethany congregation to be associated with Rev. Dr. Dickey, Rev. J. C. Thompson and Rev. George S Van Deurs in church work along evangelistic lines has drawn him to Philadelphia to enter upon what is believed to be one of the most important movements of the age."

MEMORIAL DAY

Will Be Appropriately Observed by the A. O. U. W.

The Services Will Be Held at Wayne Street M. E. Church—Public Cordially Invited.

Tomorrow will be a day of more than usual interest to members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in this city.

Today is the date set apart by the supreme lodge for the surviving members to congregate and pay due respect to the memory of its deceased, but it was deemed advisable to postpone until Sunday afternoon the services that those members who could not otherwise attend might be present

Since the reorganization of the first A. O U W. lodge in this city, there have been eleven deaths, which means that this order has handed to widows and orphans $22 000 in the short space of eight years The various lodges have also aided sick and disabled members to the extent of several thousand dollars

Through the kindness of the pastor, the services will be held in Wayne street M E church, to begin promptly at 2:30 p m.

Hon. J. M. Robinson, who will deliver the principal address, is a member of No. 19, and a member from each of the three lodges will briefly refer to the memory of the deceased of their respective organizations.

The Degree of Honor will also be represented on the program, a member from Nos. 2 and 11 paying due respect to the memory of their deceased brothers and sisters.

It is urged that every member of the order be present, in company with their friends. A cordial invitation is also extended to the general public.

It is stated upon good authority that the store rooms now occupied by the Dittoe grocery and Peter Certis's saloon, on Calhoun street, have been leased by Samuel Wolf and an eastern gentleman, who will occupy them with a dry goods store in a short time. The two rooms are to be thrown into one and the fronts remodeled It is understood that the annual rental of the place will be $2,500.

NEW COURT HOUSE.

County Commissioners Get Valuable Information by Their Chicago Trip.

The county commissioners have returned from Chicago, where they had been for a few days inspecting material and getting ideas for the new county court house which they will build. They received much valuable information, by an inspection of the buildings there, concerning the best qualities of stone to be used and the construction of the edifice. It is their purpose to erect a building that is absolutely fire proof and not a particle of wood will be used in its construction. The floors will be of the best quality of marble The commissioners intend to have their own water works system, electric lighting and steam heating, and in this respect they will have everything under the entire control of the county. The commissioners purpose putting up a building that will be a model one in every respect, elegant in all its proportions, and at as near rock bottom prices as can be had.

GENERAL MARIN.

Takes Charge of the Spanish Armies.

He Pays a High Tribute to His Predecessor, Whom He Claims Did Not Have a Fair Show.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—General Marin the acting captain general of Cuba, in an interview today, said he thought that politicians here and elsewhere in the island went further in their judgments passed upon the conduct of General Campos than the circumstances warranted. He insisted that Campos was worthy of every consideration and spoke very highly of the ability of his late chief as a military commander.

There is no doubt that General Marin perfectly understands that it is necessary, in order to successfully administer the affairs of the island, to have the support of all political parties, and he will do his utmost by the use of his personal influence and that of his friends to bring all elements to the support of the government. The acting captain general will not go into experiments, military or political, during the period he is in command here. But this does not mean that his policy will be lacking in energy. Indeed, General Marin has already taken steps in the province of Santa Clara towards reorganizing the Spanish forces there, and he is also adopting other measures to oppose the advance of the second insurgent army under Rabi and Jose Maceo.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Once Believed to Be the Only Cure for Piles and Rectal Diseases.

A Better Way Now Discovered, Which Cures Every Form of Piles Without Pain or Inconvenience.

Many people suffer the pain, annoyance and often serious results of Piles for years, and after trying various remedies, salves, ointments and so-called cures, without cure or relief, give up in despair that a final cure, rather than submit to the surgeon's knife and days confined to the bed, a typical operation in such cases.

Happily all this suffering is no longer necessary, since the discovery of the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy which, indorsed by the medical profession, is perfectly safe, free from opium, cocaine, mercury or other dangerous drugs, and may be depended upon to cure in every case, not merely relieve, the most distressing forms of Itching, Blind, Bleeding, Protruding, Internal and External Piles, from the first application. Thousands of cases, some of them of long standing, after resisting the skill of the best physicians, and the use of many so-called cures, have been entirely cured by the use of the Pyramid Pile Cure, as the following will show:

Major Dan. [illegible] Ohio, writes: I wish to add my testimony to the merits of your Pyramid Pile Cure. As to the benefit derived from the Pyramid Pile Cure I am free to say that I have been afflicted with Piles for many years and it is the first thing that has ever relieved me. I have used a box of Pyramid Pile Cure and can truly say I never felt as well in the past twenty years.

James Jeffries, of Peoria, Ind., says: I suffered from Piles for 8 years, have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and am a well man.

Mrs. M. C. Hall, 1101 N. Senate St., Indianapolis, Ind., says: Have had a terrible time with the pain and annoyance of Piles for fifteen years, the Pyramid Pile Cure and Pyramid Pile Salve gave me immediate relief and in a short time a complete cure.

The Pyramid Pile Cure may be found at druggists at 50 cts. to $1.00 per package. A book on cause and cure of Piles will be sent by mail by addressing the Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich.

The Evening Sentinel.

BY E. A. H HACKETT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 18 1896.

How it Can Be Done.

Judging from the large attendance and interest manifested at the democratic mass meeting held last Tuesday evening at the circuit court room, for the purpose of arranging the preliminary details for the coming city election, it is evident that the democracy feel the importance of unity of action and the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder in the municipal campaign which is now so closely upon us.

In view of these facts THE SENTINEL desires at this time to say that, if we, as a party, expect to succeed in the election this spring, we must have good men, from top to bottom, as our candidates for the various offices. There was a time in the history of Fort Wayne, as well as in the history of other cities, when a man who received the nomination of the party in the majority was almost certain of an election, no matter what his qualifications for filling the office were. That time, however, in the history of human events, has gone by, and we say 'peace be to its ashes.'

The people in this day and generation think, and they think for themselves, and they cannot be deceived by any false statements made by newspapers or public speakers respecting the fitness for office of certain candidates. They are not so bound by party ties that they will vote for an unfit or an incompetent man simply because his name is on the democratic or the republican ticket. We again say this day has gone by. We are living in a day of enlightenment, in a day of higher ideas, in a day when right motives and higher aims and thoughts prevail in the minds of the people, when something more is required of a candidate for office than the simple fact that he is a democrat or a republican.

The voter of today cannot be driven to the polls and forced to cast his ballot for unworthy men solely for the reason that they have been nominated by his party. He realizes that in doing so he is not a free man, but a slave. He knows that the government administered by the best men will be the best government, and he, therefore, demands integrity and the highest qualifications in those who are the candidates for office.

There is no doubt but that Mayor Oakley will be renominated by the republicans for that office, and there is no disguising the fact that Mayor Oakley will make a strong candidate. His enforcement of the law has made him many friends among the better element in the city, and, if the democrats do not put forward as his opponent in the mayoralty contest a man whose life will bear evidence to the people that he will enforce the laws, fearlessly and without favor, we do not believe that our party can elect their candidate for mayor.

We have men in the democratic party who would come up to these requirements, not only as a business mayor, but also as one who would have all the best interests of the city at heart, and such a one should be nominated. The SENTINEL has no candidate, nor has it any one in view at this time. We merely sound this as a warning that if the democracy desire to be reinstated to power in this city there is but one way for them to bring it about, and that is to nominate a clean ticket from beginning to end, one which will have weight in itself, and one of which the people of all parties will be proud. Will we do it?

AND now it is authoritatively announced, from the lips of the ex president himself, that General Harrison is going to get married. The lady who is soon to become his bride is Mrs. Dimmick, who, though a widow, is still young and quite pretty. Her father was Russell F. Lord, who was general superintendent and chief engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, at Honesdale, Pa. THE SENTINEL contained the announcement of this marriage some time ago, but Ben, just like all prospective grooms are apt to do, would not admit the truth of the rumor.

In a review of the congressional contests in Indiana, the Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis News mentions the names of Stephen Powers, of Steuben county, and Judge Ballou, of Lagrange county, and James M Robinson, P. A. Randall and Judge S M. Hench, of this city, as the democratic candidates of this congressional district.

Who says that women are not coming to the front in business affairs? At the meeting of the stockholders of the First National bank, of Huntington, on Tuesday, Mrs. Sarah F. Dick was elected a director of that institution and was re elected cashier. So far as known, Mrs. Dick is the only woman bank cashier in the United States

THE assessors in many of the cities are keeping down the valuations of business houses and dwellings on account of the decline in rents, and our assessors should do the same, so that we may not pay a higher rate of taxation than other cities do.

NOW that the political parties have decided on the dates and places of holding their national conventions, presidential candidates will bob up all over, and many a boom will be started only to burst.

EDITORIALLY the Indianapolis News says: "The liquor leagues, both state and national, are said to be opposed to Governor Matthews for the presidency This is something in the nature of a boom."

A THEODORE SHOCKNEY club has been organized at Union City. Its object is to boom Mr. Shockney as a republican candidate for governor.

Capt. Alfred T. Mahan will have a paper in the February number of the Century on "Nelson at Cape St. Vincent." This is the first of four articles which Captain Mahan will write on the naval engagements that gave Admiral Nelson his fame. The combat off Cape St. Vincent was notable because of the disparity in numbers between the Spanish and the English, and by reason of Nelson's quick wit in deciding upon a dashing manouver at a critical moment.

Shot Himself.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Calvin B. Duncan, one of the best known politicians in Rensselaer county, shot himself in the right temple at his home in this city today. He can not recover. The cause is assigned as financial difficulties. Mr. Dunham is about fifty years of age

THE BRITISH ARMY

Obtains Coffee Direct From the Plantation.

The British Government formerly bought the coffee intended for the army direct from the coffee plantations in Java and the term "Old Gov't Java" is familiar to all. Mr. P. M. Hanney now manager of the grocery department of the great house of Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago, was located in Java for about nine years, purchasing coffee for Her Majesty's troops and his ability to judge of the quality and flavor of coffee will hardly be questioned. Experts of Tea, Coffee, Tobacco and Whisky are not always free users of the article they judge so keenly of. Indeed the reverse is frequently true. In Mr. Hanney's family, Postum Cereal is used in place of coffee. The immediate cause being that the wife had trouble in digesting coffee and Mr. H—, knowing that the grain beverage which looks so much like coffee and which fits the coffee drinker's taste, was a pure and nourishing drink, introduced it to his own family with the result that the old ailments which were directly attributable to coffee drinking, have materially disappeared. Proper adjustment of our food and drink means good bodies, clear minds and the ability to push to the front and make a success of life, while those who insist upon using such dietary articles as they know check digestion and impair the health, will lag in the race for prosperity. The law of the survival of the fittest is plainly marked.

Beware of the fradulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Grain coffee. Insist on Postum.

CUBAN NEWS.

The Constitutional Party Demand Campos' Withdrawal.

The Spanish Government Also Losing Confidence in the General and May Release Him.

MADRID, Jan. 18.—Dispatches received here from Havana say that the constitutional contingents and reformists have cabled to the government here demanding the recall of General Campos. The autonomists, it is added, favor his retention in command of the troops in Cuba. A cabinet council will be held tonight in order to discuss the matter. In the meantime the government expects to hear from Campos as to whether he is disposed to change his military policy. General Polavejs, who is mentioned as Campos successor, has suddenly arrived here.

THE SITUATION IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—The situation here today is critical. It is the general opinion that General Campos will either resign today or be recalled to Spain very shortly. The agitation over his conduct of the military operations against the insurgent forces has been steadily growing for some time past, and although the Spaniards have loyally stood by him, the wholesale destruction of property and the failure of the Spanish troops to bring the enemy to a decisive encounter have brought affairs to a climax and there seems to be only one way out of the difficulty.

The newspapers will no longer be controlled by the press censor and print strong editorial articles reflecting upon Campos. Repeated dispatches have been sent to Madrid by some of the most influential party leaders in Cuba, demanded Campos' recall, and a reply has been received saying that the matter will be considered by the cabinet council to be held today. It is believed that the Spanish government has been communicated with by Campos explaining the situation to him and asking him for his views on the matter. It is also said here that the captain general has replied to Madrid saying that in view of the critical situation and not having the entire confidence of the public he leaves the government to decide the question of his relief from further duty in Cuba.

The utmost respect is still shown personally for the veteran general, who has done so much gallant work for Spain, and he is still sustained by the autonomists. But this is not likely to have much influence now upon the decision of the Spanish cabinet, as the tide of public disapproval has set so strongly against the captain general politically and otherwise, that the most graceful way out of it, it is said, would be to promptly accept the situation and resign in favor of General Arderius, his brother-in-law, second in command of the Spanish forces here, pending the arrival from Spain of his successor.

In this connection, the man whose name is most referred to as Martinez Campos' successor is General Polavejs, who was hastily called to Madrid today and who is understood to have been in consultation with the minister of war. The captain general was down town today, accompanied by an aide de camp. He looked a very old man, utterly worn out with anxiety. He was respectfully saluted by everybody; but there was no mistaking the coldness of the manner of the people towards him.

Election Confirmed.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 18.—The standing committee of the West Michigan Episcopal diocese met here last evening, and, after receiving the protest and all the other documents relating to Bishop Mott Williams, voted unanimously to confirm his election. Bishops Satterlee, of New York; Garrett, northern Texas; Johnson, Detroit, and Burton, Louisville, were also confirmed.

Said to be Dying.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—M. Floquent, formerly president of the council of ministers, who has been suffering from congestion of the lungs, is said to be dying. He was born in 1828, and was at one time editor of the Temps, and later, of the Siecle. He was also assistant of the mayor of Paris during the commune and has held the office of president of the chamber of deputies, minister of the interior and other important posts.

Mrs. Charles Koenig, of East Washington street, celebrated her birthday anniversary last night.

A man's life may be saved in many ways. A man may commit suicide in a great many ways. Shooting himself through the head is quicker, but it is no more certain than neglecting his health. If a woman saw her husband with a pistol to his head, she would take prompt and vigorous measures to save him; but the same woman might see her husband on the down-grade to disease and death without seeing the seriousness of it. One-sixth of all the people who die, die of consumption. Consumption doesn't come all at once. It is insidious. The seeds of it are seemingly insignificant. Most people do not know how it starts. Thousands of people are on the road to consumption and don't know it. Whenever there is loss of flesh—paleness—wasting away—look out. Consumption easily finds a foot-hold in a weakened body. Low vitality, impure or poor blood, imperfect digestion, nervousness, sleeplessness—all these lead to consumption.

Taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent the development of the disease. Taken according to directions, it will positively and perfectly cure ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of consumption, whether incipient or fully developed. Consumption is a disease of the blood. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a cure for all blood diseases, no matter in what part or how they manifest themselves.

If you want to know all about it, and what it has done for other people, send twenty-one (21) one-cent stamps to cover the cost of mailing only for a FREE COPY of Dr. Pierce's great 1008 page work, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." WANTS TO MARRY HER

WEALTHY RANCHER'S OFFER TO AN ACTRESS.

MARIE STUDHOLME'S PICTURE CAPTIVATES HAINES WEBSTER.

He Writes Her a Letter and Tells of His Vast Wealth and What She Might Expect as His Wife—Can Have a Fresh Horse Each Day in the Year.

SELDOM has a woman's beauty received substantial recognition more speedily than in the case of Miss Marie Studholme, the English actress who is the theatrical sensation of the hour in New York. Less than six weeks ago she arrived in this country. Her remarkable personal attractiveness was made the subject of many newspaper articles, not a few of which were accompanied by pictures of her lovely face and wavy hair. Apparently the fame of her beauty has traveled to the far northwest, for a couple of days ago Miss Studholme received by mail an offer of marriage from Haines Webster of Fort Casper, Wyo. Mr. Webster explains in his letter that he has frequently seen pictures of Miss Studholme in the papers; that he is an Englishman; that he owns a ranch; that he has 300 horses—she can have a fresh one every day in the year if she wants it, he says—and cattle galore, and that a bank at Green River, Wyo., or the Chemical National Bank in New York city will give information as to his wealth. He wants Miss Studholme to enter into correspondence with him—with matrimony as the ultimate object and he will either send her his "photo," or, better still, if she desires it, he will come on to New York to see her. There is much more than this in the letter, of course, every line breathing ardent devotion and assuring the recipient that the writer, though he has thus suddenly declared his admiration, is not one to change his opinions or falter in his regard.

Miss Studholme was astonished on receipt of this letter, not so much on account of the subject discussed as of her correspondent's evident sincerity. Like most stage beauties, she is familiar with the maudlin sentimentality usually found in such missives, but declares that never before has she received a letter from an admirer who seemed to mean so much. It is understood in New York that Miss Studholme is already married, though so far nothing definitely is known in regard to the matter.

ACCUSED OF ABDUCTION.

Musical Instructor Is Arrested on a Grave Charge.

Professor Harold Land, director of the Ladies' Military Band of Creston, Ia., has been arrested on a charge of abduction. He represented himself as a widower, and has had living with him two young women whom he introduced as his sisters, Mabel and Helena. They were both members of the band. Mayor Scurr of Creston last week received a letter from Mrs. Gilmore Smith, of Wingham, Ont., in which she asserts the two women are daughters of hers, who disappeared from home over a year ago and of whom no trace could be found. She charges that Land is an assumed name and that his real name is Duncan Sumners, and that he has a wife and children living in Canada. Mrs. Smith inclosed a letter she received from [illegible] daughter, Helena, which implores her mother to forgive her and to aid her, representing that she is badly treated by Land and her elder sister. The chief of police at once investigated the matter and the two young women confessed that the facts stated in the letter were true. Land was immediately taken into custody.

Cured by a Schlatter Handkerchief.

Nathan W. Baker, proprietor of the Baker house at Lewisburg, Pa., asserts that he was wholly cured of acute inflammatory rheumatism, from which he was a sufferer for a score of years, through the mysterious power of Francis Schlatter, the Colorado healer. None of the local doctors were able to help Mr. Baker, and it was only by the aid of crutches that he was able to move about when not confined to his home entirely. Miss Fasnaught, a Lewisburg girl who was visiting Denver friends, had Schlatter bless a handkerchief, and then she sent it to Mr. Baker. He placed it over the affected part of his body, and says he was able to walk without pain or trouble in twenty-four hours. Now he claims to be better than he has been for years.

REUNITED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Long Search of Michigan Brothers for Each Other Happily Ended.

B. D. Williamson, a hardware merchant of Morley, Mich., has been in search of two sisters and a brother for many years. His father having died before he was born, and his mother dying when he was only six years old, he went to live with his uncle in Flowerfield township, St. Joseph county, and the members of the family gradually drifted apart. It was recently published that Hiram Williamson, of Pierson, had been granted an increase of pension. B. D. Williamson at once wrote him to learn the name of his father and mother, and received an invitation to visit him. It developed that they were brothers, and recently they held a reunion, it having been forty-five years since their last meeting. The sisters are living in the southern part of the state, and Hiram Williamson has lived seventeen years on a farm near Pierson, only thirteen miles from his brother, and each was in search of the other all this time.

FIRE CHIEF A. H. RUNGE.

His Restored Health Was Due to Paine's Celery Compound.

The position of chief of fire department in a big city like Minneapolis, with its acres of valuable building property, crossed by numerous railroad lines and dotted with factories where the fires are never "banked," is one of the utmost responsibility, and can be entrusted only to a man of unquestioned character and ability.

August H. Runge, who has filled this responsible position for several years with so much credit to himself and to the city, was born in New York in 1852, where he received a common school education.

What such a man as this has to say can scarcely fail to carry weight with it:

"With the hope that what I say may in some way be brought to the attention of others who, like myself, have suffered without any apparent cause, I feel constrained to recite a brief tale regarding an experience which I trust may never be repeated in my case.

"A few months ago, owing doubtless to the exacting nature of my duties as head of the fire department, I began to feel a sort of languor and listlessness, to disguise which I was compelled to bring into play all the strength of will I could command. The feeling grew upon me, however, and in a short time it took such possession of me that it affected my appetite and caused insomnia. I approached my meals with a feeling amounting almost to nausea, and my bed with horror at the restless night which I was almost certain was before me. Matters became so serious with me that I could no longer keep silent about myself, and speaking of it to one of my friends one day, he suggested that I try Paine's celery compound. I purchased a bottle and before I had taken a dozen doses I knew that the suggestion was a good one. I felt an improvement. I continued to use it, and felt restored. My appetite is good, and I sleep well, and instead of an irksome grind my business is again a pleasure to me. I attribute this happy state of affairs to Paine's celery compound."

As in the case of Fire Chief Runge, the beginning of poor health is very apt to rob one of the will power to start immediately about getting out of danger. It is this inertia of poor health that makes an ordinary "run-down" bodily condition so dangerous, and so likely to go on to something worse. Every day it is clearly shown that it won't do to live tired-out, and on the verge of breaking down. The languor and the lack of strength are sure to increase.

Now is the time to throw off disease. As the new year begins there are few-est hindrances o getting back strength and sturdy health. The bracing weather arouses a longing for health. Paine's celery compound, taken now, does its best service toward driving out disease and establishing firm health.

REV. A. C. KENDRICK, D. D., LL. D.,
PROFESSOR OF GREEK, UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER,
Is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as one of the revisers of the New Testament. In writing for the public he is always sincere, direct and forcible, and here is what he says. "Having received from the use of Warner's Safe Cure very marked benefits, I can cordially recommend it to others."

BISHOP EDWARD WILSON, D. D., LL. D.,
Says: "I have taken Warner's Safe Cure with great advantage and derived much benefit from its use, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends."
The fact that a man occupies the high position of bishop and religious teacher in the Clinton entitles him to unquestioned respect and gives his words and endorsement a special power.

REV. J. E. RANKIN, D. D., LL. D.,
PRESIDENT OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON,
In a most outspoken manner, says: "I have known of several persons who have been permanently cured of disease of the kidney and urinary organs, by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I have known, too, of its being used in similar cases by physicians of the highest standing. This treatment, I want in the interests of humanity to recommend."

THE LATE DR. J. G. HOLLAND,
EDITOR OF THE "CENTURY" MAGAZINE,
Who was an educated physician, but for many years best known as one of the leading literary men of this country, wrote and published the following in defense of proprietary medicines: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered or used in actual medical practice."

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Mrs. J. Sparks, 175 W. 95th St., New York City: "I have used Humphreys' Specifics for years. I cannot praise them too highly. "77" has proved a blessing."

Mrs. W. F. Hancock, Marlboro Mass., "I used "77" with great success."

FROM THE WEST.

E. E. Pierce, pastor of Church of Christ, Clarion, Ia., writes: "77" has cured a bad Cold in my wife; she only used one-fourth of a bottle."

FROM THE NORTH.

W. R Stevenson, Hallomet, Ottawa Co, Mich: "I had a very bad Cold; I used three bottles of '77;" it cured me quick."

Mrs. Fred W. Gilbert, Chicago, Ill; 'I have used your Specifics with the best results, especially "77" for Grippe."

FROM THE SOUTH.

F. Stillwell, New Orleans, La: 'I have found "77' very effective."

Mrs. Hugh Mayer, Princeton, Ky.: "I used "77" for Grip and Colds; am so much pleased with the success of it that I want some more."

Small bottles of pleasant pellets—fits your vest pocket; sold by druggists, or sent on receipt of price, 25c; or five for $1.00. Humphreys' Medicine Co., 111 & 113 William St., New York.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

Machinist John Houlihan Falls and is Injured.

Charles W. Hall Has a Knee Cap Displaced—Railway Election Postponed—Local Gossip.

John Houlihan, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, was standing upon an engine yesterday afternoon tightening a nut, when the large wrench slipped and he fell backwards a distance of four or five feet, striking upon the sharp end of the iron frame which holds the pilot beam in position. His spine was injured and there may be a slight fracture of one of the ribs, so the doctor says, and it will be some time before the unfortunate man will again be at work.

ANOTHER RAILWAY CHANGE.

Wanatah News: "A prominent railway official has confirmed the rumor that the coaling station of the Pennsylvania road will be moved from Valparaiso to Wanatah in the spring. This change is made because the company needs the ground at Valparaiso for switching purposes. It will add considerably to the pay roll at Wanatah."

KNEE CAP DISPLACED.

Charles W. Hall was engaged in setting a locomotive valve in the Pittsburg shops yesterday, when he slipped and fell off the block he was standing upon. His left knee struck the sharp edge of the wood, displacing the knee cap, an injury which sometimes results in making a life cripple out of the person receiving it. Mr. Hall received prompt surgical aid, however, and there is no occasion for alarm in his case, yet it will be some days, and possibly weeks, before he will be able to walk without the aid of crutches. He is a popular young man and is not lacking in sympathy both in and out of shop circles.

A BIG SHIPMENT.

The Electric corporation has commenced the work of installing an electric lighting plant at Canton, Miss., and today shipped to that point one 40 light arc and one 750-light incandescent dynamo, together with wires and all the electrical apparatus necessary for a complete plant. From Salem, Ohio, there was also shipped to the same point, on the order of the Electric corporation, an engine, boilers and pumps for equipping a steam plant. This is a big contract, but it is nothing unusual for this company, whose business has grown to immense proportions. An 80-light arc dynamo also left the electric works today for San Francisco, Cal., consigned to the Mutual Electric Light company.

RECEIVES ITS CHARTER.

Peg Miller, of the Indiana Federation of Trades and Labor unions, is in receipt of information from President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, that a charter had been granted and forwarded to the Fort Wayne branch of the union. Therefore the meeting tonight will be held under the new charter and it is expected that there will be a large attendance. Many persons who favored the Indiana Federation, but held aloof until it was certain a charter would be granted by the American Federation, will now make haste to be enrolled.

RAILWAY ELECTION POSTPONED

It being evident that the proposed subsidy of $95,000 for the construction of the Indiana Central railroad through Huntington township would be defeated at the election, the railway people have withdrawn the petition and filed another, in which the amount asked for is $55,600, one per cent. of the assessed property of the township. The election, which was to take place next Tuesday, has been postponed thirty days.

It is stated that by February 1 trains of the Lima Northern, a Brice line, will be running to Napoleon, and to Wauseon by March 1, if the weather is not too severe.

There are now seven passenger coaches in the Fort Wayne shops for repairs. A week ago the shop was empty and the men were taking an enforced vacation.

Henry Dryer, James Doherty, Fred Lenz, A. Rost and Alex Fraine, of the Pittsburg blacksmith shop, are off duty All are sick but Lenz, who is attending to private business.

The Princess Bonnie Opera company left at 8 o'clock this morning, over the Wabash, for Danville, Ill., where it will show tonight There were forty-four people in the party.

Mrs Christ Neimier has rented the house at the east yards, known as the Barbier property, and will again conduct a boarding house as a means of support for herself and five small children.

The Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western is in the midst of a freight traffic boom and turns vast quantities of eastbound freight over to the Pittsburg road at this point. The shipments are chiefly grain.

Daniel Bovelheimer, one of the watchmen at the Broadway crossing of the Pittsburg road, is confined to his house by sickness. He had been ailing for a week, but managed to keep up until yesterday.

Three engines were more or less wrecked in the Chicago and Erie yards at Huntington last Thursday. Two were "double heading" a freight and the third was a "light," which crashed into the freight engines.

Pittsburg engines 241 and 242 were marked for the back shop today and will be thoroughly overhauled as soon as there is room for them in the shop.

The shops of the Lake Shore road at Elkhart have in the last few months turned out some work in the way of rebuilt locomotives which experts say is highly creditable to the master mechanic of those shops.

The Nickel Plate will go after the Johnson Steel company's business at Lorain. A spur track a mile long will be laid from the main line to the plant Five hundred cars for exclusive use of the business have been ordered.

Col. S. H. Church, superintendent of car records of the Pennsylvania company, has been selected to compile the matter concerning the fiftieth anniversary of the Pennsylvania Railroad company so far as it relates to its western lines.

Machinist W. S. Wells resumed work this morning. He states that the condition of Mrs. Wells is much the same as it has been for several days, though her temperature is not quite so high, an indication that the fever is abating.

The Logansport Journal is of the opinion that Harry N. May will succeed his brother as trainmaster of the Chicago division of the Panhandle road. Sherman May was recently promoted to superintendent of the Richmond division of the line.

Indianapolis Journal. "It is stated that the position of general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg was offered to E B. Taylor, general superintendent of transportation, which was declined; then F. D. Loree was selected for the position. A Pittsburg paper says there is some soreness over the recent promotions, two or three persons having been ignored who thought themselves first in the line of promotion."

Monroeville Breezes. "Johnny Finan, a Monroeville boy, who is now filling an important position as telegraph operator in one of the railroad offices at McCalester, Indian territory, writes home to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Finan, that he is about to take unto himself a companion for life, of his choice from among the fair sex of the far southwestern territory. The intended is a sister to the wife of O. W. Argo, and the daughter of a prominent and wealthy citizen of McCalester."

Twenty-three hundred railway stock cars were sold at Chicago Thursday for $630 000. The cars were formerly the property of the Hicks Stock Car company. Last November a judgment was entered against the company for the sum of $1 341 000, under a bill of foreclosure filed by the Railway Equipment company, which furnished the cars. Judge Jenkins, of the federal court, decreed their sale. The cars were purchased in the interests of the foreclosing company by Charles S. Kimball, of New York.

A Much-Talked-Of Woman.

Mrs. Dimmick, who, the idle gossips of the social world have it, is to become the wife of ex-President Benjamin Harrison, will be pleasantly remembered by those who were frequent visitors at the White House during its occupancy by Mr. Harrison and his family. Mrs. Dimmick now resides in New York. She is the niece of the late Mrs. Harrison, and her presence added much to the charm of the social life of the last administration. She was extremely popular and scarcely less esteemed than Mrs. Harrison, whose graciousness and sweetness of manner won the friendship of all who met her. Mrs. Harrison died Oct. 25, 1892, and through the long and tedious illness her devoted husband was greatly assisted in his patient vigils at her bedside by Mrs. Dimmick.

MRS. DIMMICK.

Mme. Scarron.

Mme. Scarron, afterward the famous Mme. de Maintenon, wife of Louis XIV, was in her girlhood remarkably beautiful. She was dark, with piercing black eyes and wavy hair. In middle life her gravity of countenance and of deportment was considered quite extraordinary in that age of galety.

A Hero.

She—There is nothing heroic about you. I ordered you to do something brave, before I would consent to love you, and you didn't do it.

He—Pardon, but I did.

"What did you do?"

"I disobeyed you. Don't you think that required courage?"—Truth.

Not If the Moon Was Bright.

Harry—"Is this Miss Wallace that I am going to meet to-night a pretty girl?"

Ned "Well, that's a matter of opinion. My own idea is that she is much more likely to get engaged on a moonlight buggy ride than at a fashionable ball."- Somerville Journal.

Thought So.

OLD SUPERSTITION.

What the Curfew Bell Meant in Olden Time.

And What it Should Mean Today to Millions of People.

To Persons of Sense This Has Great Weight.

The curfew bell was no myth. It was a summons to the people to put out the fires, stop all labor and retire to sleep. It was a summons also, which none dare disobey, for heavy penalties followed disobedience.

O, for a curfew bell at the present day!

A bell whose ringing tones should summons us to rest from work! To rest from the intense, mad rush which hurries us on in the weakening, wearying, nerve-tearing, brain-destroying struggle of life.

Do you know what this means?

You professional and business men, how severe is the strain of thought and mind is plainly evidenced in your weakened nerves, your trembling on excitement, your sleepless, restless nights, your utterly relaxed nervous condition after mental work.

You clerks and mechanics, who work all day, how weak you grow, how pale, lifeless, spiritless you become, how dull and tired-headed.

You women, sales-girls, and those confined in mills and factories, how heavy is your drudgery, how wearing upon your life, how enervating to your feelings, how exhausting to your strength, how blighting to your beauty. You are often nervous, generally weak, and always tired.

Alas, no curfew bell can call a halt in the world's work, but a warning voice can direct you how best to overcome the nervous and physical weakness which such work entails You who would be strong in nerve and brain, who would gain physical and mental strength to continue your work successfully, use as the vital restorative, the strengthener of brain and nerve, the giver of renewed life and vigor, that greatest of all medicines, Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Nothing on earth will so quickly and surely restore your strength.

Just see what it did for Mr. John Connors, of 323 Rivington street, New York city, who says:

"I cheerfully recommend Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It has acted like a charm. Six months ago I became restless, weak and all broken up from unrefreshing sleep. My rest did me no good—I thought more harm than good. I had lost my appetite day by day.

"I saw my doctor and I tried different remedies recommended by the people I came in contact with as keeper in the Tombs, but of no avail, until one morning my wife got me a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried that bottle and it did me a world of good. I took five bottles in all, but could have dropped off at three.

"My sleep is now of the most refreshing kind. I never remembered in thirty-six years feeling as well as I do today. My wife and two boys, five and three years old, are taking their first bottle, and they already show the benefit of it.

"I hope this will reach those unfortunates who are suffering as I suffered from loss of appetite, loss of sleep, unstrung nerves, melancholy feeling and general weakness, all of which I suffered from six months ago, and from which that valuable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy relieved me forever, I hope and believe."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to conquer your weakness and debility. Use it and get yourself strong, vigorous and well.

This remarkable discovery should not be classed with the ordinary patent medicines. It is the prescription of the most successful specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, and he can be consulted by all without charge, personally or by letter.

BILL NYE'S COMET.

HE BOUGHT IT IN GOOD FAITH, BUT IS DISAPPOINTED.

He Finds That Investing In an Unbranded Comet Is Extremely Hazardous and Not Always to Be Relied Upon—He Wants to Exchange It.

[Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.]

I suppose that I have done a very foolish thing. But my impulse was a good one. Last year an astronomer who was very hard pressed for money came to me and wanted to dispose of a comet that he had just discovered. He needed the money so sadly that he won my young heart after awhile in spite of my better judgment.

Common sense told me not to buy a heavenly body on the hoof, but tenderness and a warm, sympathetic nature overcame my cool business sense. We looked over the property through a telescope, and when my attention was called to its speed and good condition and low taxes I yielded.

The first jolt, as I might say, which was given to my faith was when our gentlemanly, genial and urbane registrar of deeds refused to record the transfer. He said that nobody but a literary man would be such a wild, unfettered ass. He is cynical to a degree. He told me that all I needed was a nursing bottle connected with the Milky Way to do real well.

I consulted an attorney regarding the matter. He also is a local humorist.

He said that buying unbranded comets on the range was hazardous in the extreme, especially in the winter season. He wrote out quite a long opinion on the case, for which he charged me an outrageous price, and in which he stated that a man who would advance money on a high spirited comet, relying on the provisions of the Monroe doctrine for the [illegible] of title, did not allow enough to carry viscera to a bear.

He told me that it would have shown more mentil acumen if I had exchanged my North Minneapolis building lots and Hudson's bay addition to Arctic park for the Big Dipper and gone into the shelf and heavy hardware business, but to put cold cash, or ready John, as he phrased it, into a luminous hole in the sky showed more possibilities as an intellectual disaster than anything he had seen during six years' experience as civil service examiner for vacancies in idiot asylums.

He went so far as to ask me why I didn't catch my own comets by putting salt on their tails. I submitted to almost every indignity from this man, including a bill for $18. He has been told by friends that he is humorous, and it has destroyed his usefulness. His business suffers, and his clients become offended and go elsewhere. Among other things he asked me why I did not organize an International Lighting and Heating company and pipe the surplus heat from the burned district of a future state.

The astronomer told me that my comet would come up every night, and then he rolled up the money I gave him and went abroad for much needed rest and change of scene. He told me that he would have the astronomical record changed so that it would hereafter be referred to as Nye's comet, but he did not do so. There has been nothing published connecting my name with the affair, and a week after I bought it I mislaid it one night and have not seen it since.

I am told also that these comets have a way of changing their appearance and then retiring to their former haunts. The astronomer to whom I allude and who chiseled me out of my means had a long brass telescope on Broadway, and he not only cracked up this comet to the very top notch, but he assured me on his honor as a gentleman that it would become a parent in the spring. Of course, he said, I ought to reap some dividend after a long, hard winter with a comet eating its head off, but June would find me away ahead of the game. Sometimes these comets have twins, he said, and there you are, maybe with a whole sky full of heavenly bodies at the cost of one only.

I am almost ashamed to tell this now, for it shows how my faith in my fellow worm of the dust causes me to be reviled by practical and cynical business men in this commercial age.

But this has been a lesson to me. Some have been coarse and rude to me when I have tried to sell, while others have treated me with well bred contempt. One man, who is said to literally have "money to burn," refused my comet because the astronomer who sold it to me had not secured the acknowledgment of his wife. I regard that as a mere technicality, and so informed him; but, no, he would not put his money in a comet, he said, and then in future years, after I had passed beyond, find himself confronted by heirs claiming a dower interest in his comet because my conveyance did not show that the wife of the conveyor had been taken apart and examined by the notary as required by law.

This proves that we live in a cold, selfish world, and also that most literary men are not practical. I am not. Neither was Milton. Still I am a little more businesslike than Milton. He got $45 for "Paradise Lost," however, and that shows that he was pretty keen on a trade, I think, for I had to analyze it in my school days, and when I heard that John got $45 for it the idea came to my childish mind that literature was a cinch. Of course I do not use slang now nor even think slang, but that was the way the matter struck me in my callow days. But the practical poet of today is careful to write in such a way as to fill out columns that need one or two stanzas only. Milton today would be unpopular, and if he sent "Paradise Lost" to one of our old season cracked editors he would send the poem down the dumb waiter to the room of a pale girlish youth, with orders to boil it down to 16 lines to "justify" with the Holmes murder.

But since my real estate deal in the comet line I have been reading up more in regard to these erratic bodies. I am surprised to find that they are irregular in their habits and move in a parabola, like a presidential candidate.

I had made some calculations covering both sides of the barn and was sure that I was coming at the date of my comet's return when I ran across this caution: "It has been remarked that when an ephemeris of geocentric positions (right ascension and declination) for any length of time is required it is convenient to calculate with rectangular equitorial coordinates instead of by the process we have followed in comparing the orbit with the middle observation."

So then I had to buy a new barn and begin all over again.

At one time I had the whole back yard full of logarithms, and a person going out after coal in the gloaming would fall over and skin his nose on an equation almost invariably.

After I had worked my multiplier till I had to build on a lean to for my multiplicand I ran upon this little paragraph of instructions:

"We may now refer to the calculation of ephemerides of the geocentric places of a comet from the parabolic elements which are required during its visibility to facilitate observations."

Now, what sort of reading matter is that to place before a family?

The general respect and esteem shown by comets toward the sun have endeared them to the thinking mind. I have read of every comet since the savant was enabled first to ramble through the sky, and no comet has ever been known to turn its tail toward the sun during that time. Comets for many years were regarded with disfavor and were unpopular among the masses, the general opinion being that they preceded pestilence and congressional legislation. In the fifteenth century to the "Ave Maria" was added "Lord, save us from the devil, the Turk and the comet."

The chemical construction of comets has for many years occupied the attention of our greatest scholars and atmospheric explorers. Generally they are thought to contain nothing but carboniferous gases and scenery. As one may comfortably observe the stars through the tail of a comet, says the astronomer, we are led to believe that the whole substance of the comet is merely a nebulous gas illuminated by other bodies, such as the sun or moon.

If I had known that in April, it would have been worth something to me, but I was so apt to purchase things and then read about them afterward.

Donati's comet, I think, gave the most general satisfaction. It was here in 1858 and returns regularly every 1,950 years, rain or shine. It would come oftener, but has an aphelion of 15,000,000,000 of miles and therefore has to be very active in order to make the trip.

SOME CALCULATIONS.

Donati was very proud of his comet, but it has never paid him at all. Since getting mixed up in the matter I have had a good deal of correspondence with other discoverers, owners or assignees of comets, and many of them are actually suffering from want.

A general movement toward the relief of these people is now on foot, and a Christmas tree is talked of at least for next year.

Any one visiting the Holy Land this year who may notice an unscrupulous astronomer over there carrying a good gold watch with my initials on it and inclosed in a chamois bag will do well to communicate particulars to me at an early date. I will drop everything and go at once.

I would exchange my comet with a steady, industrious man for a revolving bookcase with a much smaller orbit, if in good condition.

MEN ONCE PROMINENT WHO HAVE DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

Oldest Living Ex-Senators—Oldest Railroad Builder—Railroad Tie Inventor. Many Has Been Now Living In New York and Engaged In Business There.

It would be an interesting thing if it were possible to find out and set down on paper the facts regarding some scores of men who once were prominent in the great world of national affairs, but who are now heard of but seldom. So seldom indeed are the names of some of those once giants in the public's eye seen in the newspapers that their appearance excites surprise and occasionally the comment, "Why, I thought that man was dead."

These men are sometimes termed "has beens," and so they are in a sense, but many of them are still in active life, though not in public life, and no doubt the intimate friends of many such would be surprised to know how completely they have dropped out of public knowledge.

Among the most interesting of all the present has been are Joseph Bradbury of Maine, George W. Jones of Dubuque, Ia., and Alpheus Felch of Ann Arbor, Mich. These men are the oldest living ex-United States senators; they were all members of that body at the same time, but they retired so long ago that they have been forgotten by the great mass of their fellow citizens, although during the years of their public activity they were all personages of prominence. The oldest of the three is Joseph Bradbury. As he was born in 1802, he is now 93 years old. His six years' term in the senate began with 1847 and closed with 1853. Mr. Jones is nearly two years younger, his birth having occurred on April 12, 1804. His term of service in the senate began in 1848 and ended in 1859. Mr. Felch is a little younger than Mr. Jones, his birth was on Sept. 9, 1804, and he served exactly the same time as Mr. Bradbury.

All three were members of the Thirtieth and Thirty-first congresses. They are the sole survivors of the senates of those congresses. They were the colleagues of John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, Sam Houston of Texas, Robert M. T. Hunter of Virginia, Tom Corwin of Ohio, William H. Seward of New York and John A. Dix of the same state, Thomas H. Benton of Missouri, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi, Daniel Webster of Massachusetts, Lewis Cass of Michigan, Hannibal Hamlin of Maine, Henry Clay of Kentucky, Herschell V. Johnson of Georgia, John M. Clayton of Delaware and many others of lesser importance, long since called from the scenes of their earthly labors and forgotten by the rushing world of today.

Each of the three oldest ex-senators must have stored up in his memory a series of reminiscences that would prove a veritable mine to the inquiring writer. What they could tell of the politics of past years would no doubt be vastly entertaining and valuable. They could talk about other things than politics most interestingly also. Mr. Bradbury was a member of the famous class of 1825, at Bowdoin, and among his associates there were Longfellow, the poet; Nathaniel Hawthorne, the writer of eerie romances; John S. C. Abbot, whose "Tales of Franconia" delighted the young several decades ago and whose life of Napoleon found thousands and thousands of readers, and Jonathan Cilley, the Maine congressman who was killed in a duel by Graves of Kentucky in 1838. Mr. Bradbury was a practicing lawyer for many years and when a young man was also a journalist, being editor of the Maine Patriot for a number of years. He is extremely well preserved and attended the World's fair in 1893.

Mr. Felch, who served as senator from Michigan, was the recipient of many political honors in his young manhood and middle life, having been a member of the state legislature, and serving a part of a term just before his election to the senate as governor of Michigan. After the expiration of his senatorial term, he was sent by President Pierce to California as a member of the commission appointed to settle the land claims there.

Mr. Jones served also in several other public places besides being a senator. President Buchanan sent him to New Granada (now Colombia), South America, as United States minister. Upon his recall from that place in 1861 he was accused of disloyalty and imprisoned at Fort Warren, but he was soon released. He was a warm friend of Jefferson Davis, and it was partly owing to the intimacy of the two men that Mr. Jones was charged with disloyalty. Like both the other venerable ex-senators here spoken of, Mr. Jones is in excellent health in spite of his advanced age. Three years ago he led the grand march at a charity ball, and he was one of those who, in 1893, escorted the remains of his old friend Davis from New Orleans to Richmond.

So much for these three of the oldest has beens. There are not many who have attained to their great age. John I. Blair, the venerable pioneer in railroad building, is one of those who have. Perhaps he should not be termed a has been, yet he is one who has been obliged to retire from the stress and anxiety of active life and whose name is seldom seen in print, excepting when a searcher after reminiscences seeks him out at his home in Blairstown, N. J. Mr. Blair is possibly not so active as the oldest ex-senators. It is true that he is still president of the Belvidere (N. J.) bank, which he founded 50 or 60 years ago, but he is not now very active in its management and he passes most of his time in the warm weather sitting upon the upper veranda of the fine old house which has been his home since very early manhood. He likes to sit in the sun, and a part of the veranda has been inclosed with glass, so that even in cold weather he may enjoy his much loved sun bath every day that the solar luminary deigns to show its face.

General James S. Greene, the oldest living graduate of West Point, is another venerable has been. He lives in Morristown, N. J., in the winter, but he spends the summer, like the sprightly old man that he is, at Newport, the summer capital of America's fashionable folk, while his autumns are put in at Schenectady, N. Y. General Greene has other distinctions besides that of being the oldest graduate of Uncle Sam's military academy. It was he who when the iron horse began to run his course on roads of iron in America, nearly 60 years ago, devised the railroad tie or sleeper. During the civil war he was a member of the northern army and he distinguished himself at Gettysburg.

The city of New York is the home of many has beens, several of whom are ex-governors. Ex-Governor Hoadly of

JOHN S. WISE.

Ohio, who during his term in that post was one of the best known men in the United States, is one of these. In a certain way, Mr. Hoadly is not a has been. His law firm enjoys one of the largest practices of any concern in New York. Mr. Lauterbach, who is now so prominent in New York city politics, is one of his partners. Mr. Hoadly was born in New Haven and comes of what might be termed "official stock," since his father, when a young man, served a term as mayor of New Haven, and then of Cleveland, while his grandfather, who was a captain in the Revolution, was elected to the Connecticut legislature 26 times consecutively, a record which has not been broken or equaled, so far as I know, in the land of steady habits. Mr. Hoadly was a partner of Salmon P. Chase in the law business at Cincinnati, and also served on the bench in that city. But from a money point of view, at least, he has scored his greatest success in New York.

Two of the other ex-governors now living in New York are named Chamberlain — Joshua L., ex-governor of Maine, and Daniel H., ex-governor of South Carolina. Joshua L. is an ex-college president as well as an ex-governor. For years he was the chief executive of Bowdoin, and he served as professor of mental and moral philosophy for a number of years after 1874. He was an officer in the Federal army during the civil war and served in 24 pitched battles, a record that has been equaled by few. In his early days he was licensed to preach, and was government commissioner to the Paris exposition.

Ex-Governor Lounsberry of Connecticut, still a resident of that state, is now a bank president in New York, and although he is a has been so far as the entire country is concerned, he is still an important factor in the business life of the metropolis of the Atlantic seaboard.

John S. Wise, sometimes called colonel and sometimes ex-governor, who was once much more prominent than he is now, is also living in New York at present. He was a soldier on the Confederate side, but he was neither a colonel nor a captain nor was he ever a governor. It was his father who was governor of Virginia, and who ordered the execution of John Brown. Like some of the others mentioned in this article, although Mr. Wise is less of a public character than in the past, he is making more money during his apparent retirement than he ever was before.

NEW STYLE FARMING

PROJECTED AGRICULTURAL VILLAGE IN THE SACRAMENTO VALLEY.

Irrigation Plays an Important Part In the Plan, Which Is Partly Socialistic—To Make Twenty Acre Farms Profitable. William E. Smythe the Promoter.

A new colonization scheme for Americans has been proposed that appears to be entirely practical, and that is interesting at least. The promulgator is William E. Smythe, who is well and favorably known throughout the west as the editor of The Irrigation Age.

Mr. Smythe's plan is somewhat socialistic and somewhat co-operative, but is not wholly of either nature. He proposes, in brief, to found a farm village somewhat on the order of many that now exist in Europe. He has selected as a site for the proposed colony a ranch of 10,000 acres located in the Sacramento valley in northern California. The property was very valuable in the days when wheat raising was profitable, but since this market has failed the land has depreciated because other crops cannot be raised there on account of lack of irrigation. Mr. Smythe proposes to cut canals through from the Sacramento valley and reclaim this almost arid land.

In the center of this tract 300 acres are to be set aside for a village. The rest is to be cut up into 20 and 10 acre farms. Each purchaser of a farm is to be given a single or half acre lot in the village. The idea is that the farmers shall live in the village and till their adjacent lands. The village is to be surrounded by a broad, circular boulevard on which the houses will face.

Another feature of the plan is to be the system of ownership. The owners of the farms are to constitute a company which shall own the village and conduct various enterprises necessary for the profitable utilization of the crops. Thus there will be a creamery, to use the surplus milk; a cannery for the fruit, a packing house and a starch factory to convert the surplus potatoes into a marketable article.

The most important feature of the plan, and the one on which its life depends, is the irrigation system. This is to be in the hands of the company and the water right goes with the title to every farm. Each colonist is to purchase as many shares of stock as he does acres of land and the capital thus acquired is to be used for the general benefit of the colony. While the Sacramento valley is not actually an arid region, the rainfall is only sufficient for the raising of grain and early vegetables. With sufficient irrigation almost any kind of crops could be raised, as well as such semitropical fruits as oranges, lemons, limes, pomegranates, olives and figs. Good railroad facilities are easy of access and, besides, the Sacramento river furnishes a clear waterway to Sacramento and San Francisco.

It is estimated that a capital of $670 is sufficient to establish a family on a 20 acre farm in the proposed colony and $447 on 10 acres. In return for this it is said that from $50 to $100 an acre can be made over and above living expenses.

Mr. Smythe's idea is to attract a number of thrifty American families to the west, gather them into farm villages like this, where they can rely upon their own efforts to bring them a good living with good prospects for acquiring a modest fortune. A community similar to the one proposed has already been started in Payette Valley, Ida., and in the two years of its existence has prospered greatly.

The plan gives the colonist a great advantage over the individual farmer, for the village company, of which he is a member, furnishes him with water, power, electric light and, what is more, a good market for his products. He gets the benefits of living in a village and is still near to his farm.

Mr. Smythe, the author of this scheme, is neither a wild dreamer nor a selfish land boomer. He is a young, energetic, earnest business man, with lots of practical common sense. He was born in Worcester, Mass., about 34 years ago and comes of Puritan stock. He is a journalist by profession, but has been identified with several successful business enterprises in the west. For two years he was president of the irrigation congress.

His plan is the outcome of a study of various colony schemes that have already been tried, and he claims to have embraced all the best points and avoided the bad ones. The idea is primarily that a hundred such communities would reclaim by irrigation the so called arid lands and secondarily the establishment of combined agricultural and manufacturing communities on a sound financial basis. These colonies would consist of men who owned their own farms and at the same time had an active interest in the community in which they lived. Their interest would not depend on a mere theory. It would be a financial interest and consequently a lasting one. Social economists will watch with great interest the new colony which Mr. Smythe is to establish.

OLIVER BELMONT'S SECOND BRIDE.

She Will Be Alva Vanderbilt, Who Not Long Ago Divorced William K. Vanderbilt.

New York society was not at all surprised when it was recently announced that Mrs. Alva S. Vanderbilt would soon wed Oliver H. P. Belmont. He was one of the guests on the Vanderbilt yacht Valiant in 1893 when Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt disagreed for some reason and the cruise around the world was abandoned. Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Consuelo, went to England, Mr. Vanderbilt went to Paris and Mr. Belmont returned to his home in New York. Then followed Mr. Vanderbilt's escapades in Paris and Mrs. Vanderbilt's suit for divorce in New York. At the time of the divorce it was rumored that Mrs. Vanderbilt would marry Mr. Belmont.

Oliver H. P. Belmont is one of fortune's favorites. He is a son of August Belmont, the world famous banker, who died a few years ago, and a direct descendant on his mother's side of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, who at the age of 27 whipped an entire British squadron of six ships on Lake Erie in 1813 and sent his famous message, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," to General William Henry Harrison. Oliver Belmont as a boy adopted the sea as a profession and with a commendable desire to become a hero like his illustrious ancestor was educated at the Annapolis Naval academy and served long enough to learn that he would probably be old and gray before he rose to the command of a ship.

Resigning from the navy, Belmont married Miss Susan Whiting, who later divorced him, and devoted himself to travel. His father left him a fortune, and his wealth has made it possible for him to visit about every part of the habitable globe. He has also devoted himself to the acquisition of a great racing stud and possesses one of the finest stables of carriage horses in the world. He owns a palatial mansion called Belcourt at Newport and entertains there in princely style. His grand bachelor ball at Belcourt last summer was one of the social sensations of the season.

A WOMAN AT THE WHEEL.

Mrs. Thorrold Steers a Tug and Will Soon Be a Full Fledged Captain.

Mrs. E. Thorrold probably does not know it, but she is a new woman of the thirty-third degree. She is the pioneer tugboat captain of her sex and not only owns, but steers the tug Ethel and Marion in San Francisco harbor. She did not make this departure because it was the fad to do so, but because five children were dependent upon her, and personally conducting a tugboat seemed the best paying thing she could do. Her husband owned the tug, and it gave him a good revenue until one day, during a birthday romp with his little daughter, he was pricked by a pin, blood poisoning set in and he died.

For a time Mrs. Thorrold endeavored to continue his business with the aid of hired help, but the tug's net earnings were insufficient for her needs, and she concluded to learn the business herself. With an engineer at her elbow she took her first lessons and ere long was able to steer the tug as well as a veteran.

This does not mean that she can yet be officially addressed as captain, for she lacks the "papers," without which no one is allowed to engineer a tug on San Francisco's bay, but she is competent to pass the statutory examination and intends soon doing so. Then she will be the titular captain of the Ethel and Marion, as she is now really captain in fact.

The engineer is still with her when she grasps the wheel and the tug goes puffing about among the ships, but Mrs. Thorrold does not need his services in the least. With a brisk business air she rings the bell. Her soft, white hands clutch the wheel firmly; her bright eyes watch the course ahead with unremitting vigilance. The screw begins to turn and the tug is off on a mission that means bread for a family of six. Mrs. Thorrold is not particularly anxious to vote, but she is proud of the fact that she is the only woman skipper of a tugboat in the United States.

AVENGED BY HIS DOG

MURDERER OF TOMAS MARTINEZ BROUGHT TO JUSTICE.

AN AFFECTING STORY THAT COMES FROM SANTA FE.

The Faithful Canine, Seriously Wounded, Leads the Way to the Scene of the Crime and Uncovers the Body of the Victim.

DON CARLOS is a dog of hardy, mongrel breed, the property of the wealthy Martinez family, of Santa Fe, N. M. He is not beautiful, but he is the hero of the countryside. Up to the time of the recent tragedy that made him famous his name was simply Carlos. The "Don" was prefixed in a feeble but praiseworthy attempt to recognize the brute's claim to distinction. That a Mexican should so honor a dog signifies a great deal.

The story of Don Carlos' leap to fame is the story of a foul crime. Don Lorenzo Martinez, of Santa Fe, owns and operates an extensive cattle and horse ranch at Ojo de la Baca (Cow Springs), in the southeastern part of the county. Last January his sons, Tomas and Maximilliano, were there looking after their father's interests. On Thursday morning, Jan. 17, Tomas, the elder of the young men, started away from the ranch on horseback in quest of missing cattle. He was mounted on a good horse, had a first-class saddle and bridle; was well armed and had an excellent equipment of blankets and warm clothing. Carlos, who was accustomed to such trips, eagerly followed his master. As the young man rode away he told Maximiliano that he would be back on Sunday afternoon.

Tomas Martinez never returned.

On Tuesday morning, when Maximiliano was becoming anxious about his missing brother, Carlos limped back to the homestead and fell exhausted on the threshold. There was a ghastly wound in his head, and his limbs were quivering with weakness produced by loss of blood, hunger and exposure. Water was brought to the dog, and he drank greedily. It seemed to restore his strength, for he barked, ran out of the house again, looked around at the younger Martinez, and barked again more loudly.

"Yes! yes! I will come with you, my brave Carlito," replied Maximiliano, whose fears, were now thoroughly aroused. "Only you must eat first."

He threw the animal a piece of meat, which Carlos devoured in two gulps, and quickly saddled a horse. Tomas had ridden south, and Maximiliano started in the same direction. But Carlos barked distressfully, and ran almost due east, turning round every few yards with such manifest tokens of intelligence and purpose that Maximiliano spurred on his horse and blindly followed the dog.

With his nose to the ground, and pausing only to drink at the brink of a creek, Carlos led the horseman nine miles across country to Don Lorenzo Martinez's round-up corral at La Muralla. As Maximiliano dismounted, Carlos, yelping as if with pain, rushed to the remains of what had evidently been an unusually large camp fire and began digging furiously in the ashes.

And then, amid the black and gray ashes disturbed by the dog, young Martinez found a curious thing. It was a foot, his brother's foot. Although it was charred he had no difficulty in recognizing Tomas' heavy shoe and overshoe. A moment later he discovered the large bone of a human pelvis, burned to a dead flaky white. All around, as his eyes grew accustomed to the sight, appeared smaller bones, but they crumbled at a touch.

The riddle of the gruesome heap was solved.

Jesus Vialpando and Feliciano Chavez were arrested, tried and hanged the other day in the presence of 2,000 people. Pablo Martinez, a brother of murdered Tomas, followed them to the scaffold. Don Carlos was at his heels. The crowd cheered the dog. Jesus Vialpando turned his lean, dark face in time to catch a glimpse of the brute's scarred and ferocious head, and a great shudder passed over him just as Sheriff Cunningham pulled the lever. Don Carlos' work was done.

VICTIM TO MISFORTUNE.

Did Not Complain Until His Favorite Fiddle Was Broken.

From the Washington Star: John Stratton has just returned from Wise county, Virginia, where he went to survey some coal lands. "While down there I saw a modern Job," he said to a Star writer. "I was about twenty miles from Gladeville, the county seat, when a storm threatened. Not wanting to be out in the mountains during a storm I hastened to a log cabin. Under a tree in front sat a ragged, unkempt looking man playing a fiddle. In the tree was a half-grown boy.

"'Come right in, mister,' was his answer to my request for shelter. 'I don't reckon it'll rain much no how. Kin' o' quit rainin' hyar. Didn' rain all summer, an' all the craps I got was one leetle bunch o' 'barcer.'

"'Pretty hard luck,' I said.

"'Yaas, middlin.' But I didn't keer so much as when the ole 'oman tried ter get water outen the well. It war mos' dry an' it kin' o' took a knack ter git it. So she leaned over too far an' fell in. She's thar yit. I hain't got no way to git her out, an' as she didn't never know what hurt her I reckon I'll jest fill up the well an' put a board up ter mark her grave.'

"'Well, you seem to have had a great deal of trouble,' I remarked.

"'Yaas, it surtain looks like a heap. But the wust was when my mewl, the only one I had, got stuck in the quicksan' down yonder an' we had to shoot 'im. I war broke up over that, but I've still got my boy up thar in the tree an' my fiddle.'

"At that moment there was a clap of thunder. The old man laid his fiddle tenderly upon the chair he had occupied and started for the house, carrying the chair and its precious burden. The boy in trying to get down from the tree slipped and fell, striking the fiddle and splitting it into several pieces. The old man lifted up the fragments and, with tears in his eyes, said: 'I reckon I'm ruint now.'"

per's Ferry, W. Va., disappeared from Camden Station a few days ago. Though detectives have been at work ever since they were unable to solve the mystery. Miss Stewart went to Baltimore to visit her sister. She had promised her mother to send a message from the station announcing her arrival. She notified her mother by letter from the station that she had just sent a message to her sister. The clerk at the news stand remembered selling the girl the stationery and saw her write two letters. Who got the second is a question. Detective Riordan of Baltimore says he saw her leave with a man and woman. Her father, who is assisting the police, fears that she has been abducted. The girl has never been away from home before. She wore short dresses, and had no male visitors.

Flee from the Ghost of an Indian.

An Osage Indian, named Webster, was killed at the Osage village, near Grey Horse, six weeks ago. His wife and mother-in-law were first charged with murdering him, but at the investigation of the matter it was decided that Webster came to his death by falling upon a butcher knife in his own hand while running after his wife and threatening to kill her. The Indians accepted this verdict at the time. Now they say there is something wrong, as the spirit of the dead man returns among them every night, weeping and wailing and demanding justice. Every night at the very hour Webster died a strange wailing sound is heard where his old wigwam stood and a luminous object moves about for a time. Many white people have seen it and cannot explain it, while the Indians all declare they recognize Webster's voice and that he is demanding to be avenged. So agitated have they become over the matter that they are abandoning the village and moving to other parts of the reservation.

An Important Item.

Dingle—I hear you are going to get married next month?

Wingle—Yes; I hope to.

Dingle—Well, I suppose you are pretty busy. Have you selected a place to live in yet?

Wingle—Not yet.

Dingle—Haven't got around to it, I suppose. What are you going to give your bride for a wedding present?

Wingle—I don't know.

Dingle—That so? Decided on the ushers' presents yet?

Wingle—Not yet.

Dingle—Well, well! Going to keep house or board?

Wingle—Can't tell.

Dingle—You are a strange fellow. On the eve of your wedding and nothing done. What are you waiting for, anyway?

Wingle—I am waiting, old man, to learn the size of her father's check.

A Way of Accounting For It.

"How do you account for the rapid changes of the weather?" said Kidduff to Skidmore.

"I attribute them to the presence of quicksilver in the thermometers."

ROASTED WILLIAM II.

THE MAN WHO IS BRAVING THE KAISER'S FURY.

Herr Bebel, Leader of the Social Democrats in the German Reichstag, Has No Use for Empire or Emperor—Threatened Revolution.

FERDINAND AUGUST Bebel, whose fierce attack in the German parliament upon Emperor William II. on the occasion of the debate relating to the curtailment of the right of free assemblage has caused so much commotion in Germany, shares the leadership of the social-democratic party in the country with Herr Liebknecht. The latter is considered the more academic, but Bebel in every sense a self-made man undoubtedly has more force with the masses. He was born Feb. 22, 1840, in Cologne, and received his early education in a village school near that city. Later on he attended grammar school in Wetzlar, and in 1860 he removed to Leipsic, where he established his own business, that of wood-turner and carver, in 1864. Two years prior to that date he had joined in the workingmen's movement in Germany, and soon became one of the most aggressive leaders in that cause. From 1865 to 1890, when he removed to Berlin, Bebel was president of the Workingmen's Educational club in Leipsic and member of the permanent executive committee of the German Workingmen's association. In 1867 he became identified with the editorial management of the Volksstaat, a socialistic paper in Leipsic, and continued this connection until he became one of the managers of the Vorwaerts, the leading German socialistic daily, published in Berlin. He was elected to the North German parliament in 1867 and to the German parliament in 1871. In the election of June, 1893, he was even elected in two districts, choosing the mandate from the Strasburg district. From the beginning of Bebel's parliamentary career dates his uncompromising attitude against all monarchical institutions. Bebel seems to be in the dark about the policy of his own party, for when he was asked in February, 1893, during a session of parliament, what sort of thing he thought the socialistic state should be he remained silent despite repeated taunts. Bebel is at present treasurer of the socialist party in Germany, to which office he was elected in 1892. During the reorganization of the party in 1890, Bebel advocated parliamentarianism as the chief means of agitation, but in this he was opposed by the extremists of the party. He served as a delegate to the international socialist congresses in Paris, 1889; Brussels, 1891; Zurich, 1893, and Breslau during the present year. On the latter occasion he made his famous speech, in which he said that socialism would finally crush imperialism, for which he has just been sentenced to six months' imprisonment. In 1872 Bebel and Liebknecht together were tried on a charge of attempted high treason against the German empire and the kingdom of Saxony. Each was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, which they served, and Bebel had to serve an additional nine months for lese majeste. Bebel is the author of a number of books on socialism, chief among them "Woman and Socialism," 1892, six editions; "Christianity and Socialism," 1883, nineteen editions, and "Our Aims," 1884, six editions. He has on several occasions come out unequivocally in favor of the Paris commune and the internationalists.

How to Prepare Spaghetti Timbale.

Spaghetti timbale makes a pretty dish. Cook long pieces of spaghetti in salted water until they are tender. Lay the pieces on a napkin to cool, being careful not to break them. Butter a dome-shaped mold. Wind the spaghetti around the mold, holding it in place with a layer of force meat. Fill the mold with boiled macaroni and cheese. Make a layer of force meat thick enough to give the timbale stability. Cover with greased paper, stand in a pan of hot water and poach in a slow oven for thirty minutes.

To Colonize Guatemala.

Albert A. Whitman, the octoroon poet and evangelist, is the author of a scheme to colonize Guatemala with quadroons and octoroons, and to establish an independent government. It has been the dream of Whitman's life to found a nation which shall be composed exclusively of the quadroons and octoroons of the United States, whom he denominates the "new race."

Prepared.

Mrs. Hobb—My husband came home last night and told me he was ruined. Do you know, I think I must have had a premonition of it?

Mrs. Nobb—Why?

Mrs. Hobb—It was only last week that I ordered a complete new wardrobe."

A Slight Difference.

She—"Is it true that you wouldn't stop playing poker to eat?"

He—"Not exactly. But frequently after playing poker I stop eating."

BRITISH SQUADRON.

It Is Not Bound for American Waters.

The Venezuela News Is More Pacific and There Is a Belief That the Trouble Is at an End.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The admiralty department informs the Associated Press that the destination of the flying squadron of British war ships now off Spithead has not been determined upon, even by the admiralty, and that certainly the war ships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere else in American waters at present.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The statement from London that the British flying squadron was not intended for American waters was received with visible relief in naval circles, but in the state department it was evident that it had been anticipated, and it is surmised that Ambassador Bayard had already communicated directly with the department on the subject and given satisfactory assurances as to the intentions of the British government. The impression is strengthening that the Venezuelan matter is soon to be settled, or rather put in the way of settlement (for the execution of the details of the project will occupy much time) in the course of a few weeks at furthest, and that upon lines indicated in the recent Associated Press dispatches from Washington. The plan is likely to take the shape of a double arbitration, and in this respect it will parallel the Behring Sea arbitration. First will come an arbitration of the title to lands lying west of the Schomburk line. To an extent this will be a concession to the British position, which has been one of constant readiness to arbitrate this territory, but it will be a concession in part only, for there will be a provision that if it shall appear in the course of the investigation of the arbitrators that there is reason to doubt the sufficiency of the British title to any part of the lands lying to the eastward of the Schomburgk line, then this fact shall be reported to the British and Venezuelan governments and shall constitute a sufficient ground for another arbitration. This would parallel the course of the United States and British governments in the Bering sea arbitration, wherein the original arbitrators passed upon the question of damages sustained by the ships of the power who was found to be in the right, but left to another commission the method of adjusting these claims.

It is pointed out here that by the action of such a course the British government would avoid any direct recognition of the, to it, obnoxious Monroe doctrine, as construed by Secretary Olney, the first precedent would be followed and the United States would still achieve its object, namely, a judicial settlement of the entire boundary question upon its merits.

GUILTY.

Elverton Chapman Must Take His Medicine.

Was Stubborn and Refused to Testify in the Sugar Investigation Last Spring.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—The jury in the trial of Elverton R. Chapman, the member of the New York stock broking firm of Moore & Soley, who refused to answer questions put by the senate sugar investigating committee, returned a verdict of guilty at noon today, after being out all night. The case undoubtedly will be appealed to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia and thence to the United States supreme court, which ever way the next highest tribunal decides. The defense took numerous exceptions to the rulings of Judge Cole, in the course of the trial, and these exceptions, including objections on constitutional grounds, will be the basis of the argument on appeals. The Chapman trial was regarded as a test case and will be followed by the trial of Correspondents Edwards and Shrives and Broker John W. McCarthy, of this city.

DEATH OF FRANK LAWYER.

Well-Known Politician Dies Suddenly From Heart Disease.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18—Alderman Frank Lawler, ex-congressman, and one of the most widely known and best liked politicians in Chicago, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart disease at his home, 424 West Taylor street. Death was absolutely unexpected, the alderman having been apparently in the best of health and spirits the night before, while attending a charity ball which he himself had arranged in West Twelfth Street Turner hall. His death took place in the presence of his wife and five children.

HEALTH BREAKING DOWN.

Convict Redwine, the Bank Embezzler, Is Dying.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 18—Dr. W. T. Rowles, of the Ohio penitentiary, being asked, said today that he believed Redwine, the bank embezzler of Atlanta, would not live three months. His health is very poor. He is breaking down fast. He is becoming bloodless. This statement, Dr. Rowles says, has been made to the president officially, Redwine being an applicant for pardon.

The Shipping Strike.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The great shipping strike is once more announced to have been ended. It is added that the Belfast and Clyde men, as the result of a ballot, have accepted the compromise terms which were proposed in December last.

INSANE ASYLUM.

Provisions for Its Enlargement Now Under Way.

Over 100 Applications for Admission—Dr. Smith Talks on the Situation.

RICHMOND, Ind., Jan. 18.—The completion of extensive improvements at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane, located here, promises to relieve to some extent the deplorable condition of affairs that now exists with regard to the insane. For a long time the management has found it necessary to reject a large number of deserving cases that asked for admission because there was no room for them. In this way a large number of cases collected within the district and at most of the time there were at least 100 applications on file for admission that could only be considered when a patient died or was discharged as cured. With a view to relieving this condition of affairs the last legislature appropriated $30 000 with which to build additions, and these are now approaching completion. The work of equipping the new buildings for occupancy is in progress and it will be but a short time until they can be taken possession of. About 100 more patients can then be admitted, but the medical superintendent, Dr. Samuel E. Smith, says that the condition will soon be as bad as it was before and that it will be necessary to ask the next legislature, which meets next year, for another appropriation of $50,000 with which to make further additions.

In regard to the report that insanity is rapidly increasing, Dr. Smith says that he believes the increase is only relative and that could the cases all be accommodated within the walls of the institutions, where they would escape public notice, this opinion would not prevail. Indiana's rate of increase in the matter of insanity, he says, is small compared with that of the other states, although one or two others run below it.

RIVALS QUARREL.

Both Wanted to Marry the Same Girl.

They Fight in a Saloon and the Vanquished One Takes Revenge on Innocent Parties.

JACKSON, Ky., Jan. 18. — William Smith was mortally and James Frazier seriously wounded at Quicksand, this county, yesterday afternoon by George Smith. Smith is at large, though a posse has gone in search of him.

George Smith and James Frazier, jr., were in love with the same girl, and both were jealous. They met in a saloon near the mouth of Quicksand yesterday, and while under the influence of liquor engaged in a quarrel. Frazier knocked Smith down. Bystanders interfered and Smith left the saloon. He met on the outside the elder Frazier and Wm. Smith, a relative of his rival. Without any warning he leveled his pistol, which he carried in his hand, and, after shooting both men at close range, continued his flight. The two victims had nothing to do with the fight, nor had they any knowledge of it.

PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The National Convention Will be Held July 22.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18—The hearing of representatives of the different cities which are working to secure the national populist convention that meets on July 22nd next, was continued today, when the national committee reassembled. Chicago was the first to present its claims, the speakers in behalf of that city being B. M. Fulweiler, of Arkansas, Dr. H. Taylor, Eugene Smith and F. J. Schultz.

S. Schieler and H. O. Schneider spoke for Kansas City, Kansas.

Harry Tracey, D. E Leidy and Mayor Holland spoke in behalf of Dallas, Texas. When they had finished the committee went into executive session to consider the proposition of the various cities.

MAHER-FITZSIMMONS.

George Siler Referee and James Lawler Stakeholder.

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 18.—Julian and Quinn have agreed on George Siler, of Chicago, for referee of the Maher-Fitzsimmons fight and James Lawler, of Houston, Texas, for final stakeholder.

The City Minister's union has decided to send a circular letter to all the religious bodies in the United States calling on preachers, Christian Endeavor societies, Epworth league and Young People's societies generally to unite, January 26, in prayer that the prize fights may be prevented and the city of El Paso saved from disgrace.

Diamond Dealers Fail.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Gustave Fox & Co., dealers in diamonds, east Fourth street, assigned today to Gus May. Their liabilities are placed at $35 000, with assets at about $25,000. Preferences for $11,000 were given, the largest being $6,000 to Jennie Fox. They hope soon to resume.

PREFERRED DEATH

To the Dishonor of Wearing Stripes in Prison.

Charles Anderson Slashes His Throat With a Razor on a Railroad Train.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Jan. 18.—Charles H. Anderson, a sergeant in company E, Twenty-third infantry, of the regular army, stationed at Fort Clark, Texas, attempted suicide on the eastbound Clover Leaf flyer, when near this city.

As the train came to a standstill at the depot, Anderson got up with blood pouring from his neck. A bloody razor lay on the car floor and as he picked it up a panic ensued among the passengers. The man is yet living, but with scarcely a chance of recovery. On his collar, which he had removed and put in his pocket, the following was written:

"I would return for trial, but prefer death to the dishonor of wearing stripes."

Of the crime indicated, nothing can be learned. Papers indicate that he has been in the regular army since 1880 and that his home is in Buffalo, N. Y. He had nearly $400 in his pockets.

WITH PASTOR HICKS.

Indianapolis Christians Say Immersion Is Not a Test of Fellowship.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—The departure of Rev. Mr. Hicks, of the South Side Christian church in receiving members without the formality of baptism by immersion has led to open war between his church and other churches in the same denomination. Pastor Lucas, of the Tabernacle Christian church has openly declared from the pulpit that Rev. Mr. Hicks' church is not a Christian church and inviting its members to fellowship with those of the Tabernacle. To this the members of the south side church have made a reply, declaring in an address just issued that whoever believes in Christ is a Christian; that the individual Christian must interpret the Bible for himself and allow everyone else the same privilege; that faith in Christ implies obedience to him according to the measure of the person's knowledge of his will; that baptism should not be made a test of fellowship, but the person should be left to obey as his understanding leads him.

GERMANY'S EMPEROR.

Speech From the Throne on an Anniversary Day.

BERLIN, Jan. 18—Throughout the German empire today the twenty-fifth anniversary of the crowning at Versailles of King William of Prussia, grandfather of the present emperor, as emperor of Germany and the consequent re-establishment of the German empire was celebrated in some form or other. The great event was the gathering in the white hall of the castle, where the emperor, surrounded by ministers of state, admirals of the navy, members of the diplomatic corps, kings and princes, all in glittering uniforms, made a speech from the throne.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Dr. James Harvey Killed in West Virginia.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Jan. 18.—News is just received that Dr. James Harvey, of Wyoming county, was shot from ambush at Guyan Roughs. He was riding on horseback when he received the fatal shot and was found by friends on the public highway. James Allan is under arrest charged with the crime. The two men had trouble recently.

Christian Houses Burned.

BOSTON, Mass, Jan. 18—In a letter just received, Rev. H. N. Barnum, D. F., of Harpoot, Eastern Turkey, where property of the American board was burned, says that the reports have been secured from 176 villages in the vicinity of Harpoot. These villages contained 15,400 christian houses. Of this number 7,074 have been burned, and 17,845 persons are reported killed. Dr. Barnum adds: "The loss, I fear, will prove to be much greater."

James Hopkins Dead.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 18—James M. Hopkins, an old time iron master and politician, who was the last man living who figured conspicuously in the famous Christiania riots, died at his home at Conowingo this county, aged seventy-five years. In 1858 he ran for congress on the democratic ticket against Thaddeus Stevens, and gave the great commoner the hardest fight in the latter's congressional career.

Hudnut Owns the Line.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 18—Vincennes shareholders have sold their interests in the Citizens' Electric Street railway to B. G. Hudnut, of Terre Haute, who is now sole proprietor and who assumes control of the line. F. F. Tindolph, general manager, has resigned.

Anxious for Dr. Gasser.

HANCOCK, Mich., Jan. 18.—Friends of Dr. Adolin Gasser are greatly worried about his safety. Dr. Gasser left here in October for his old home in Zurich, Switzerland. He wrote from Havre, but has not been heard from since.

Dies of a Broken Heart.

LIMA, O., Jan. 18.—Miss Mary Jones died today from a broken heart caused by her brother's forgeries, which will amount to $50,000, and the death of her father, who brooded over his son's disgrace.

Pastor Dead.

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan 18—After twenty one days of voluntary fasting Mrs. Isaac Gephart, of New Carlisle, this county, died yesterday afternoon. On Christmas day she ate her dinner but not another meal in all the rest of the time. Her determination was the result of reading a book on Christian science. Her husband is a substantial farmer.

SENSIBLE MOVE.

The Manufacturers Trust Company Have Gold to Spare.

They Propose to Deposit It in the Government Treasury To Be Used for Purchasing Bonds Later.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 18—Ex-Congressman W. J. Coombs, president of the Manufacturers Trust company, of this city, has sent the following letter to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle: "We are subscribers to the popular loan and have accumulated gold to be used in payment for the same. We are willing to deposit this gold in the treasury for the use of the government and receive a receipt therefore, specifying that in case none of the bonds be awarded to us, that the gold shall be returned out of the proceeds of that which is received from successful bidders. We think that many other banking institutions are willing to do the same thing and in that way, without loss to themselves, assist the treasury in the interim in maintaining its gold reserve."

Mr. Coombs says people all over the country are accumulating gold with which to buy the new issue of bonds. This is being drawn from the treasury and the result may be that the reserve will be reduced to the danger point. "We have no doubt," he said, "that other banking institutions will be as willing as we are to give the government the use of the accumulated gold until February 5."

GAIN A POINT.

Democrats Secure a Victory in the South Bend Muddle.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 18—The democrats gained a point today in the fight against the republican gerrymander of the city by the resignation of Councilman Frank Gonsiorowski, republican, who gives his reason as having no desire to take part in a scheme that would limit the influence of his people in the government of the city to one ward. Mr. Gonsiorowski has remained away from two council meetings, thus, with the absent democrats, prevented a quorum. He takes this means to relieve himself of any further responsibility to his party in the affair. Mr. Gonsiorowski's resignation complicates city affairs to an unknown extent. Of course democrats will not attend the council meetings and there are no means of compelling them to do so without a quorum present. The republicans cannot fill the vacancy, neither can they transact any business until nearly time for the spring elections. The gas company's franchise has expired and they have applied for another. The waterworks fund is about exhausted and the trustees want more money. In addition to this city bills must be audited and a new hose company is waiting for the council's acceptance of its new building.

SCENE IN AN ANDERSON COURT.

Lawyers Use the Word "Lie" and Come Near Having a Fight.

ANDERSON, Ind., Jan. 18—There was an exciting scene in the circuit court yesterday that for the time looked as if it would end in a fistic encounter. An effort was being made to disbar Attorney Kittinger in certain of the white cap cases now on trial. He was making his reply and made a very free use of uncomplimentary terms in speaking of the part Prosecutor Campbell and Judge Ellison had taken in the cases from the start, and, as he puts it, without any foundation whatever. He questioned certain official acts. This resulted in a very hot retort and discussion, and as a result the word "lie" was used several times. Judge Ellison appealed to Judge Bundy, who was on the bench, and asked for protection from unjust charges. Prosecutor Campbell was direct in his remarks and matters looked decidedly equally. Friends, however, interfered in the matter and at last induced all to let it drop.

Dr. Haygood Dying.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 18.—Dr. Haygood, bishop of the M. E. church, south, a prominent churchman, editor and author, is dying at his home in Oxford, Ga. A telephone message late this afternoon says he will not survive the night.

Abandoned Eleven Years Ago.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 18—The ex-attorney general of Cape Colony, Mr. Schreiner, has expressed the opinion that the British suzerainty over the Transvaal was abandoned in the convention of 1884.

M. Floquet Dead.

PARIS, Jan. 18—M. Floquet, who was at one time president of the council of ministers, and also minister of the interior, is dead.

WAS NOT BOYLE.

The Cleveland Man Was E. M. Cameron, a Picture Agent.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion Again Disappointed in the Search for William Boyle.

The sensational story published in a Fort Wayne paper a day or two ago that William Boyle, the man who is said to be defrauding the Catholic Benevolent Legion out of his life insurance policy of $2,000, had been captured in Cleveland, turns out to be a fake.

Fort Wayne people are familiar with the history of the case. Boyle was a member of the legion and carried $2,000 insurance. Some years ago he disappeared and the supposition is that he was drowned in Lake Michigan. His widow sued to recover the insurance and the case has been bitterly fought through all the courts, the legion contending that Boyle is not dead and that he has been seen in various places since his reported death.

A. C. Gocke and W. H. Gordon, members of the legion in this city, went to Cleveland Thursday to identify the man who was under surveillance, and they have returned with the knowledge that the wrong man had been captured. The Cleveland man proved to be E. M. Cameron, a picture agent.

Cameron displayed a clean right leg, which satisfied the scruples of the Fort Wayne men. However, the examination brought to light one of the most remarkable cases of mistaken identity on record anywhere. Boyle's description is tallied by that of Cameron in every particular. Even their occupations were the same and they traveled the same territory. The history of the arrest of Cameron is one of more than ordinary interest.

Cameron represents the Hunger Portrait company, of Cleveland, and several months ago he called at the home of J. D. Bresnahan.

Mr. Bresnahan is the Cleveland collector of the society which Boyle defrauded, and the similarity of the appearance of the solicitor and the missing man struck Bresnahan so forcibly that he communicated with the police and a detective was detailed to arrest Cameron. On July 8 Cameron was seen by Detective O'Hara and Mr. Bresnahan and placed in custody. When accused of being Boyle he said he was not guilty, but he acknowledged that his picture adorned the circulars sent out by the supreme secretary of the order. At his request he was taken to several prominent business men, and they said he had lived in Cleveland for fifteen years. He was released, but on last Monday John D. Carroll, the supreme secretary, telegraphed Mr. Bresnahan to hold Boyle until Fort Wayne comrades could arrive and identify him. A. A. Gocke and W. H. Gordon arrived Thursday night and proceeded to Mr. Bresnahan's house and wanted him to cause Cameron's arrest immediately. He refused to do so and explained the outcome of the first arrest of the man, and assured the Fort Wayne men that Cameron was all right. They were not satisfied, and this morning, accompanied by Mr. Bresnahan and two detectives, they called at the real estate office which was frequented by Cameron. The suspected man did not put in an appearance, and it was thought that he had become alarmed at the publications in the newspapers and had flown. Then they went to the office of the Hunger Portrait company and waited an hour, but Cameron did not arrive. As the men stepped out of the elevator to go to the street, Cameron walked in. He was confronted by the Fort Wayne men, and they at once saw that he answered the description of Boyle. Upon being questioned Cameron said he had been in Fort Wayne and had talked with a number of prominent citizens here. He had been in Wabash and Toledo, Ohio, where people made affidavits that they had seen Boyle since he had been reported drowned, and that he had been in Chicago in the summer of 1891, when Boyle was drowned. The circumstances indicated that the right man had been secured, and he was taken to the central police station, and an examination was made for a certain scar on the right leg, which it was said would identify Boyle without a doubt. As the party walked to the prison, Cameron limped with the right leg, as had Boyle, and the Fort Wayne men were congratulating themselves, notwithstanding the statements of the Cleveland men who had identified Cameron as a resident of that city. Cameron submitted to the examination and the detectives and Fort Wayne men were astonished when they found that there was no scar on the leg and the accused was released and the Fort Wayne men left for home. The authorities pronounce the case one of the most remarkable they have ever heard of.

DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN

Begins His Pastorate of Bethany Church at Philadelphia.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, who conducted the series of union revival services in this city in November, began his pastorate of the Bethany Presbyterian church at Philadelphia last Sunday and delivered sermons that day to immense audiences. In its write up of the services the Philadelphia Times says: "He arrived in the city Saturday and will be the guest of John Wanamaker at Lindenhurst for the present. He has cancelled his evangelistic engagements, which extended over the entire year. Since he left Bethany his evangelistic tours have been attended with great blessing and success. Mr. D. L. Moody said recently that he considered Dr. Chapman the foremost evangelist of the day, and while the evangelistic field has great charms for him, the earnest and urgent call from the Bethany congregation to be associated with Rev. Dr. Dickey, Rev. J. C. Thompson and Rev. George S. Van Deurs in church work along evangelistic lines has drawn him to Philadelphia to enter upon what is believed to be one of the most important movements of the age."

MEMORIAL DAY

Will Be Appropriately Observed by the A. O. U. W.

The Services Will Be Held at Wayne Street M. E. Church—Public Cordially Invited.

Tomorrow will be a day of more than usual interest to members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in this city.

Today is the date set apart by the supreme lodge for the surviving members to congregate and pay due respect to the memory of its deceased, but it was deemed advisable to postpone until Sunday afternoon the services that those members who could not otherwise attend might be present.

Since the reorganization of the first A. O. U. W. lodge in this city, there have been eleven deaths, which means that this order has handed to widows and orphans $22,000 in the short space of eight years. The various lodges have also aided sick and disabled members to the extent of several thousand dollars.

Through the kindness of the pastor, the services will be held in Wayne street M. E. church, to begin promptly at 2:30 p. m.

Hon. J. M. Robinson, who will deliver the principal address, is a member of No. 12, and a member from each of the three lodges will briefly refer to the memory of the deceased of their respective organizations.

The Degree of Honor will also be represented on the program, a member from Nos. 2 and 11 paying due respect to the memory of their deceased brothers and sisters.

It is urged that every member of the order be present, in company with their friends. A cordial invitation is also extended to the general public.

The following is the War Ended.

ACCRA COLD COAST COLONY, BRITISH WEST AFRICA, Jan. 18—The Ashanti war is ended. Sir Francis Scott, in command of the British expeditionary force, has occupied Coomassie, the capital, without opposition. King Prempeh accepts all the British demands. Prince Henry of Battenburg, and half of the white troops, have returned to the coast for embarkation. There is general rejoicing among the natives at the bloodless British victory and the prospect of a return of trade and prosperity.

No Faith in It.

LONDON, Jan. 18—The officials of the foreign office here say that there is no truth in the despatch received from Pekin today saying that the British minister there has presented an ultimatum to the Chinese government, demanding the opening of the West river.

Newspaper Man Dead.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—M. Henry R. Chancellor, an early resident of Chicago, and one of the foremost owners of the Chicago Times, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Col. Charles S. Diehl, at Yonkers, N. Y., this morning.

Sues the Vandalia for $1,000.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 17—S. N. Warbritton has brought suit against the Vandalia railroad for $1,000. A train took him past his station and the conductor told him to jump off, which he did, and was injured.

Chinese Loan.

HONG KONG, Jan. 18—The Dutch bank has obtained the contract to issue a Chinese loan of 100,000,000 taels, with interest at 5 per cent. to cost 89½ and to be issued at 95.

BROKEN LIMBS

Also Dislocated Joints and a Concussion.

John Parker Badly Hurt—T. J. Cummings Falls on the Sidewalk—Other Accidents.

John Parker, a farmer living about six miles from this city on the Leo road, fell from a load of hay yesterday and suffered a concussion of the brain. His right wrist was also dislocated. Dr. Dinnen was called and attended him. Last evening Parker was in a dangerous condition but he is reported better today.

T. J. CUMMINGS IS CRIPPLED.

This forenoon T. J. Cummings, of the Indiana Furniture company, was walking on High street and fell on a slippery sidewalk. His left shoulder was dislocated. Mr. Cummings was removed to his home, No. 31 Grand street, where Dr. George C. Stemen attended him.

ANKLE BROKEN.

Mr. Hughes, of Decatur fell on the sidewalk as he was leaving a barber shop on West Main street, this forenoon, and broke his ankle. He was removed to M. Frank & Co.'s store, where Dr. M. Rosenthal reduced the fracture. Mr. Hughes is a friend of Mr. Frank and is a wealthy dealer in marble. He is interested in the marble business in several places.

FELL FROM A CHAIR.

Dr. Porter was called this forenoon to the home of F. W. Gronau, near the toll gate on the New Haven road, to reduce a fracture of the right thigh of Mr. Gronau's three-year-old son. The little fellow had fallen from a high chair.

TREE FELL ON HIM.

August Sarrazen, who lives about six miles from this city, in Washington township, was seriously injured yesterday by a tree falling upon him. He and his son had been felling trees all day. Toward evening one large tree fell in the opposite direction from what they had calculated upon and it struck Mr. Sarrazen. He was rolled over under the tremendous weight, and it was thought his legs were broken. This proved untrue, but the injuries he received are so severe that he has been unable to move his limbs. The exact extent of his injuries could not be learned.

BROKE IN ARM.

David Dick, of Webster street, fell on an icy sidewalk in front of his home last evening and broke his right arm.

LOST A FINGER.

A BROKEN LIMB.

INJURED HIS KNEE.

Henry Janzen, of Force street, fell on the ice yesterday and injured his knee very severely.

FELL ON THE ICE.

Mrs. Joseph Chavano, of East Jefferson street, suffered a fracture of the right limb, Thursday evening, by falling upon the ice.

AT EIGHTY-THREE

Hon. A. P. Edgerton Is Active and Glad to Meet With Young Friends.

As has been stated in THE SENTINEL, last Sunday was the eighty-third birthday of Hon. A. P. Edgerton, who is now residing at Hicksville, where he looks after his large property interests at that place. The Hicksville News of Thursday publishes a fine picture of Mr. Edgerton and has this to say about him and the anniversary of his birth: "Last Sunday was the eighty-third anniversary of the birth of our esteemed citizen Hon. A. P. Edgerton. Letters and telegrams of congratulation poured in on the old gentleman from many sources. The News joins in wishing him the prolonging of his useful and upright life. Mr. Edgerton is very active physically for a man of his years. His mind is bright and keen, and he takes an active interest in what is going on. He is the same interesting and engaging character as of yore, and ever ready with words of encouragement for youthful ambition."

NEW DRY GOODS STORE.

Rumors That One Is to Be Opened in the Curtis Block.

It is stated upon good authority that the store rooms now occupied by the Dittoe grocery and Peter Curtis's saloon, on Calhoun street, have been leased by Samuel Wolf and an eastern gentleman, who will occupy them with a dry goods store in a short time. The two rooms are to be thrown into one and the fronts remodeled. It is understood that the annual rental of the place will be $4,500.

NEW COURT HOUSE.

County Commissioners Get Valuable Information by Their Chicago Trip.

The county commissioners have returned from Chicago, where they had been for a few days inspecting material and getting ideas for the new county court house which they will build. They received much valuable information, by an inspection of the buildings there, concerning the best qualities of stone to be used and the construction of the edifice. It is their purpose to erect a building that is absolutely fire proof and not a particle of wood will be used in its construction. The floors will be of the best quality of marble. The commissioners intend to have their own water works system, electric lighting and steam heating, and in this respect they will have everything under the entire control of the county. The commissioners purpose putting up a building that will be a model one in every respect, elegant in all its proportions, and at as near rock bottom prices as can be had.

GENERAL MARIN.

Takes Charge of the Spanish Armies.

He Pays a High Tribute to His Predecessor, Whom He Claims Did Not Have a Fair Show.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—General Marin the acting captain general of Cuba, in an interview today, said he thought that politicians here and elsewhere in the island went further in their judgments passed upon the conduct of General Campos than the circumstances warranted. He insisted that Campos was worthy of every consideration and spoke very highly of the ability of his late chief as a military commander.

There is no doubt that General Marin perfectly understands that it is necessary, in order to successfully administer the affairs of the island, to have the support of all political parties, and he will do his utmost by the use of his personal influence and that of his friends to bring all elements to the support of the government. The acting captain general will not go into experiments, military or political, during the period he is in command here. But this does not mean that his policy will be lacking in energy. Indeed, General Marin has already taken steps in the province of Santa Clara towards reorganizing the Spanish forces there, and he is also adopting other measures to oppose the advance of the second insurgent army under Habi and Jose Maceo.

MORTUARY RECORD.

T. O. Winans Receives Word of the Death of His Mother.

T. O. Winans, of 137 Shawnee avenue, received the sad news today of the death of his mother, Margaret, wife of Rev. E. J. Winans, at Colorado Springs, Col., which occurred on the 8th of January, 1896. She died of old age, being in her seventy-seventh year. Her death was painless and peaceful, she passed away as one falling asleep. She leaves a devoted husband, three sons and one daughter to mourn their loss.

THE WEEK'S DEATHS.

The following are the deaths for the week ending Jan. 18, as reported by the city undertakers:

Georgia Moser, 2 years old, pneumonia.

JOURNALIST DEAD.

Death Overtakes a Brilliant Member in Colorado.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 18.—Finley B. Pfaff, of Noblesville, Ind., died in this city today. Mr. Pfaff was a prominent attorney and journalist. He was in the service of the Indianapolis Journal for twelve years and at intervals in the employ of Chicago and Cincinnati papers.

NOW A LAW.

Mayor Oakley Has Signed the Pole Ordinance.

The pole tax ordinance which was passed by the council at the last meeting has been signed by Mayor Oakley and is now a law. It is said to be the intention of some of the corporations who are affected to test the constitutionality of the new law.

Elected Officers.

Yesterday the Women's Missionary society of the Third Presbyterian church held its semi-annual election of officers, with the following result:

President—Mrs. Joseph Wood.

Vice President—Mrs. J. M. Boggs.

Secretary—Mrs. Frank Wright.

Treasurer—Mrs. William Dillendorfer.

Literary Secretary—Miss Josie Page.

The Evening Sentinel.

BY E. A. M HAUSETT.

SATURDAY, JAN 18 1896

How it Can Be Done.

Judging from the large attendance and interest manifested at the democratic mass meeting held last Tuesday evening in the circuit court room, for the purpose of arranging the preliminary details for the coming city election, it is evident that the democracy feel the importance of unity of action and the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder in the municipal campaign which is now so closely upon us.

In view of these facts THE SENTINEL desires at this time to say that, if we as a party, expect to succeed in the election this spring, we must have good men, from top to bottom, as our candidates for the various offices. There was a time in the history of Fort Wayne as well as in the history of other cities, when a man who received the nomination of the party in the majority was almost certain of an election, no matter what his qualifications for filling the office were. That time, however, in the history of human events, has gone by, and we say "peace be to its ashes."

The people in this day and generation think, and they think for themselves, and they cannot be deceived by any false statements made by newspapers or public speakers respecting the fitness for office of certain candidates. They are not so bound by party ties that they will vote for an unfit or an incompetent man simply because his name is on the democratic or the republican ticket. We again say this day has gone by. We are living in a day of enlightenment, in a day of higher ideas, in a day when right motives and higher aims and thoughts prevail in the minds of the people, when something more is required of a candidate for office than the simple fact that he is a democrat or a republican.

The voter of today cannot be driven to the polls and forced to cast his ballot for unworthy men solely for the reason that they have been nominated by his party. He realizes that in doing so he is not a free man, but a slave. He knows that the government administered by the best men will be the best government, and he, therefore, demands integrity and the highest qualifications in those who are the candidates for office.

There is no doubt but that Mayor Oakley will be renominated by the republicans for that office, and there is no disguising the fact that Mayor Oakley will make a strong candidate. His enforcement of the law has made him many friends among the better element in the city, and if the democrats do not put forward as his opponent in the mayoralty contest a man whose life will bear evidence to the people that he will enforce the laws, fearlessly and without favor, we do not believe that our party can elect their candidate for mayor.

We have men in the democratic party who would come up to these requirements, not only as a business mayor, but also as one who would have all the best interests of the city at heart, and such a one should be nominated. The SENTINEL has no candidate, nor has it any one in view at this time. We merely extend this as a warning that if the democracy desire to be reinstated to power in this city there is but one way for them to bring it about, and that is to nominate a clean ticket from beginning to end, one which will have weight in itself, and one of which the people of all parties will be proud. Will we do it?

And now it is authoritatively announced, from the lips of the ex president himself, that General Harrison is going to get married. The lady who is soon to become his bride is Mrs. Dimmick, who, though a widow, is still young and quite pretty. Her father was Russell F. Lord, who was general superintendent and chief engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, at Honesdale, Pa. THE SENTINEL contained the announcement of this marriage some time ago, but Ben, just like all prospective grooms are apt to do, would not admit the truth of the rumor.

In a review of the congressional contests in Indiana, the Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis News mentions the names of Stephen Powers, of Steuben county, and Judge Ballou, of Lagrange county, and James M Robinson, P. A. Randall and Judge S M. Hench, of this city, as the democratic candidates of this congressional district.

Who says that women are not coming to the front in business affairs? At the meeting of the stockholders of the First National bank, of Huntington, on Tuesday, Mrs. Sarah F. Dick was elected a director of that institution and was re elected cashier. So far as known, Mrs. Dick is the only woman bank cashier in the United States.

The assessors in many of the cities are keeping down the valuations of business houses and dwellings on account of the decline in rents, and our assessors should do the same, so that we may not pay a higher rate of taxation than other cities do.

Now that the political parties have decided on the dates and places of holding their national conventions, presidential candidates will bob up all over, and many a boom will be started only to burst.

EDITORIALLY the Indianapolis News says: "The liquor leagues, both state and national, are said to be opposed to Governor Matthews for the presidency. This is something in the nature of a boom."

A THEODORE SHOCKNEY club has been organized at Union City. Its object is to boom Mr. Shockney as a republican candidate for governor.

Capt. Alfred T. Mahan will have a paper in the February number of the Century on "Nelson at Cape St. Vincent." This is the first of four articles which Captain Mahan will write on the naval engagements that gave Admiral Nelson his fame. The combat off Cape St. Vincent was notable because of the disparity in numbers between the Spanish and the English, and by reason of Nelson's quick wit in deciding upon a dashing manouver at a critical moment.

Shot Himself.

TROY, N. Y., Jan 18.—Calvin B. Duncan, one of the best known politicians in Rensselaer county, shot himself in the right temple at his home in this city today. He can not recover. The cause is assigned as financial difficulties. Mr. Dunham is about fifty years of age.

THE BRITISH ARMY

Obtains Coffee Direct From the Plantation.

The British Government formerly bought the coffee intended for the army direct from the coffee plantations in Java and the term "Old Gov't Java" is familiar to all. Mr. P. M. Hanney now manager of the grocery department of the great house of Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago, was located in Java for about nine years, purchasing coffee for Her Majesty's troops and his ability to judge of the quality and flavor of coffee will hardly be questioned. Experts of Tea, Coffee, Tobacco and Whisky are not always free users of the article they judge so keenly of. Indeed the reverse is frequently true. In Mr. Hanney's family, Postum Cereal is used in place of coffee. The immediate cause being that the wife had trouble in digesting coffee and Mr. H—, knowing that the grain beverage which looks so much like coffee and which fits the coffee drinker's taste, was a pure and nourishing drink, introduced it to his own family with the result that the old ailments which were directly attributable to coffee drinking, have materially disappeared. Proper adjustment of our food and drink means good bodies, clear minds and the ability to push to the front and make a success of life, while those who insist upon using such dietary articles as they know check digestion and impair the health, will lag in the race for prosperity. The law of the survival of the fittest is plainly marked.

Beware of the fradulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Grain coffee. Insist on Postum.

CUBAN NEWS.

The Constitutional Party Demand Campos' Withdrawal.

The Spanish Government Also Losing Confidence in the General and May Release Him.

MADRID, Jan. 18.—Dispatches received here from Havana say that the constitutional contingents and reformists have cabled to the government here demanding the recall of General Campos. The autonomists, it is added favor his retention in command of the troops in Cuba. A cabinet council will be held tonight in order to discuss the matter. In the meantime the government expects to hear from Campos as to whether he is disposed to change his military policy. General Polavejo, who is mentioned as Campos successor, has suddenly arrived here.

THE SITUATION IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—The situation here today is critical. It is the general opinion that General Campos will either resign today or be recalled to Spain very shortly. The agitation over his conduct of the military operations against the insurgent forces has been steadily growing for some time past, and although the Spaniards have loyally stood by him, the wholesale destruction of property and the failure of the Spanish troops to bring the enemy to a decisive encounter have brought affairs to a climax and there seems to be only one way out of the difficulty.

The newspapers will no longer be controlled by the press censor and print strong editorial articles reflecting upon Campos. Repeated dispatches have been sent to Madrid by some of the most influential party leaders in Cuba, demanded Campos' recall, and a reply has been received saying that the matter will be considered by the cabinet council to be held today. It is believed that the Spanish government has been communicated with by Campos explaining the situation to him and asking him for his views on the matter. It is also said here that the captain general has replied to Madrid saying that in view of the critical situation and not having the entire confidence of the public he leaves the government to decide the question of his relief from further duty in Cuba.

The utmost respect is still shown personally for the veteran general, who has done so much gallant work for Spain, and he is still sustained by the autonomists. But this is not likely to have much influence now upon the decision of the Spanish cabinet, as the tide of public disapproval has set so strongly against the captain general politically and otherwise, that the most graceful way out of it, it is said, would be to promptly accept the situation and resign in favor of General Arderius, his brother in law, second in command of the Spanish forces here, pending the arrival from Spain of his successor.

In this connection, the man whose name is most referred to as Martinez Campos' successor is General Polavija, who was hastily called to Madrid today and who is understood to have been in consultation with the minister of war. The captain general was down town today, accompanied by an aide de camp. He looked a very old man, utterly worn out with anxiety. He was respectfully saluted by everybody, but there was no mistaking the coldness of the manner of the people towards him.

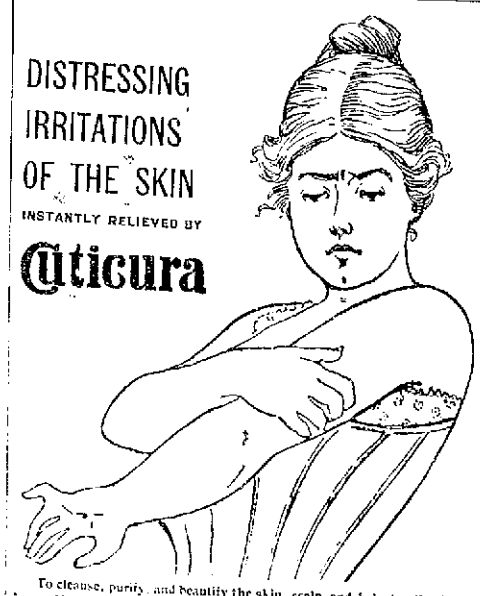
Election Confirmed.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 18.—The standing committee of the West Michigan Episcopal diocese met here last evening, and, after receiving the protest and all the other documents relating to Bishop Mott Williams, voted unanimously to confirm his election. Bishops Satterlee, of New York; Garrett, northern Texas; Johnson, Detroit, and Burton, Louisville, were also confirmed.

Said to be Dying.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—M. Floquent, formerly president of the council of ministers, who has been suffering from congestion of the lungs, is said to be dying. He was born in 1828, and was at one time editor of the Temps, and later, of the Siecle. He was also assistant of the mayor of Paris during the commune and has held the office of president of the chamber of deputies, minister of the interior and other important posts.

Mrs. Charles Koenig, of East Washington street, celebrated her birthday anniversary last night.



DISTRESSING IRRITATIONS OF THE SKIN INSTANTLY RELIEVED BY Cuticura

To cleanse, purify and beautify the skin, scalp and hair, to allay itching and irritation, to heal chafings, excoriations, and ulcerative weaknesses, to speedily cure the first symptoms of torturing, disfiguring skin and scalp humors, nothing so pure, so sweet, so wholesome, so speedily effective as warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, gentle applications of CUTICURA ointment, and mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT.

WANTS TO MARRY HER

WEALTHY RANCHER'S OFFER TO AN ACTRESS.

MARIE STUDHOLME'S PICTURE CAPTIVATES HAINES WEBSTER.

He Writes Her a Letter and Tells of His Vast Wealth and What She Might Expect as His Wife—Can Have a Fresh Horse Each Day in the Year.

RUMOR has a woman's beauty received substantial recognition more speedily than in the case of Miss Marie Studholme, the English actress who is the theatrical sensation of the hour in New York. Less than six weeks ago she arrived in this country. Her remarkable personal attractiveness was made the subject of many newspaper articles, not a few of which were accompanied by pictures of her lovely face and wavy hair. Apparently the fame of her beauty has traveled to the far northwest, for a couple of days ago Miss Studholme received by mail an offer of marriage from Haines Webster of Fort Casper, Wyo. Mr. Webster explains in his letter that he has frequently seen pictures of Miss Studholme in the papers; that he is an Englishman; that he owns a ranch; that he has 300 horses—she can have a fresh one every day in the year if she wants it, he says—and cattle galore, and that a bank at Green River, Wyo., or the Chemical National Bank in New York city will give information as to his wealth. He wants Miss Studholme to enter into correspondence with him—with matrimony as the ultimate object—and he will either send her his "photo," or, better still, if she desires it, he will come on to New York to see her. There is much more than this in the letter, of course, every line breathing ardent devotion and assuring the recipient that the writer, though he has thus suddenly declared his admiration, is not one to change his opinions or falter in his regard.

Miss Studholme was astonished on receipt of this letter, not so much on account of the subject discussed as of her correspondent's evident sincerity. Like most stage beauties, she is familiar with the maudlin sentimentality usually found in such missives, but declares that never before has she received a letter from an admirer who seemed to mean so much. It is understood in New York that Miss Studholme is already married, though so far nothing definitely is known in regard to the matter.

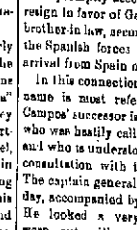
ACCUSED OF ABDUCTION.

Musical Instructor is Arrested on a Grave Charge.

Professor Harold Land, director of the Ladies' Military Band of Creston, Ia., has been arrested on a charge of abduction. He represented himself as a widower, and has had living with him two young women whom he introduced as his sisters, Mabel and Helena. They were both members of the band. Mayor Scurr of Creston last week received a letter from Mrs. Gilmore Smith, of Wingham, Ont., in which she asserts the two women are daughters of hers, who disappeared from home over a year ago and of whom no trace could be found. She charges that Land is an assumed name and that his real name is Duncan Summers, and that he has a wife and children living in Canada. Mrs. Smith inclosed a letter she received from her younger daughter, Helena, which implores her mother to forgive her and to aid her, representing that she is badly treated by Land and her older sister. The chief of police at once investigated the matter and the two young women confessed that the facts stated in the letter were true. Land was immediately taken into custody.



A man's life may be saved in many ways. A man may commit suicide in a great many ways. Shooting himself through the head is quicker, but it is no more certain than neglecting his health. If a woman saw her husband with a pistol to his head, she would take prompt and vigorous measures to save him; but the same woman might see her husband on the down-grade to disease and death without seeing the seriousness of it. One-sixth of all the people who die, die of consumption. Consumption doesn't come all at once. It is insidious. The seeds of it are seemingly insignificant. Most people do not know how it starts. Thousands of people are on the road to consumption and don't know it. Whenever there is loss of flesh—paleness—wasting away—look out. Consumption easily finds a foot-hold in a weakened body. Low vitality, impure or poor blood, imperfect digestion, nervousness, sleeplessness—all these lead to consumption.

Taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent the development of the disease. Taken according to directions, it will positively and perfectly cure ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of consumption, whether incipient or fully developed. Consumption is a disease of the blood. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a cure for all blood diseases, no matter in what part or how they manifest themselves.

If you want to know all about it, and what it has done for other people, send twenty-one 2¢ one-cent stamps to cover the cost of mailing only, for a free copy of Dr. Pierce's great 1008 page work, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." Every family should have a copy of this book for ready reference. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

REUNITED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Long Search of Michigan Brothers for Each Other Happily Ended.

B. D. Williamson, a hardware merchant of Morley, Mich., has been in search of two sisters and a brother for many years. His father having died before he was born, and his mother dying when he was only six years old, he went to live with his uncle in Flowerfield township, St. Joseph county, and the members of the family gradually drifted apart. It was recently published that Hiram Williamson, of Pierson, had been granted an increase of pension. B. D. Williamson at once wrote him to learn the name of his father and mother, and received an invitation to visit him. It developed that they were brothers, and recently they held a reunion, it having been forty-five years since their last meeting. The sisters are living in the southern part of the state, and Hiram Williamson has lived seventeen years on a farm near Pierson, only thirteen miles from his brother, and each was in search of the other all this time.

FIRE CHIEF A. H. RUNGE.

His Restored Health Was Due to Paine's Celery Compound.

The position o' chief of fire department in a big city like Minneapolis, with its acres of valuable building property, crossed by numerous railroad lines and dotted with factories where the fires are never "banked," is one of the utmost responsibility, and can be entrusted only to a man of unquestioned character and ability.

August H. Runge, who has filled this responsible position for several years with so much credit to himself and to the city, was born in New York in 1852, where he received a common school education.

What such a man as this has to say can scarcely fail to carry weight with it:

"With the hope that what I say may in some way be brought to the attention of others who, like myself, have suffered without any apparent cause, I feel constrained to recite a brief tale regarding an experience which I trust may never be repeated in my case.

"A few months ago, owing doubtless to the exacting nature of my duties as head of the fire department, I began to feel a sort of languor and listlessness, to disguise which I was compelled to bring into play all the strength of will I could command. The feeling grew upon me, however, and in a short time it took such possession of me that it affected my appetite and caused insomnia. I approached my meals with a feeling amounting almost to nausea, and my bed with horror at the restless night which I was almost certain was before me. Matters became so serious with me that I could no longer keep silent about myself, and speaking of it to one of my friends one day, he suggested that I try Paine's celery compound. I purchased a bottle and before I had taken a dozen doses I knew that the suggestion was a good one. I felt an improvement. I continued to use it, and felt restored. My appetite is good, and I sleep well, and instead of an irksome grind my business is again a pleasure to me. I attribute this happy state of affairs to Paine's celery compound."

As in the case of Fire Chief Runge, the beginning of poor health is very apt to rob one of the will power to start immediately about getting out of danger. It is this inertia of poor health that makes an ordinary "run-down" bodily condition so dangerous, and so likely to go on to something worse. Every day it is clearly shown that it won't do to live tired-out, and on the verge of breaking down. The languor and the lack of strength are sure to increase.

Now is the time to throw off disease. As the new year begins there are few-est hindrances to getting back strength and sturdy health. The bracing weather arouses a longing for health. Paine's celery compound, taken now, does its best service toward driving out disease and establishing firm health.

FORT WAYNE CITIZENS.

Cured by a Schlatter Handkerchief.

Nathan W. Baker, proprietor of the Baker house at Lewisburg, Pa., asserts that he was wholly cured of acute inflammatory rheumatism, from which he was a sufferer for a score of years, through the mysterious power of Francis Schlatter, the Colorado healer. None of the local doctors were able to help Mr. Baker, and it was only by the aid of crutches that he was able to move about when not confined to his home entirely. Miss Fesnaught, a Lewisburg girl who was visiting Denver friends, had Schlatter bless a handkerchief, and then she sent it to Mr. Baker. He placed it over the affected part of his body, and says he was able to walk without pain or trouble in twenty-four hours. Now he claims to be better than he has been for years.

REV. A. C. KENDRICK, D. D., LL. D.,
PROFESSOR OF GREEK, UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER,
Is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as one of the revisers of the New Testament. In writing for the public he is always sincere, direct and forcible, and here is what he says: "Having received from the use of Warner's Safe Cure very marked benefit, I can cordially recommend it to others."

BISHOP EDWARD WILSON, D. D., LL. D.,
Says: "I have taken Warner's Safe Cure with great advantage and derived much benefit from its use, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends."
The fact that a man occupies the high position of bishop and religious teacher in the Church evidences in him unquestioned respect and gives his words and counsels great power.

REV. J. P. RANKIN, D. D., LL. D.,
PRESIDENT OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON,
In a most outspoken manner, says: "I have known of several persons who have been permanently cured of disease of the kidney and urinary organs by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I have known, too, of its being used in similar cases by physicians of the highest standing. This treatment, I want in the interests of humanity to recommend."

THE LATE DR. J. G. HOLLAND,
EDITOR OF THE "CENTURY" MAGAZINE,
Who was an educated physician, but for many years best known as one of the leading literary men of this country, wrote and published the following in defense of proprietary medicines: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered or used in actual medical practice."

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

Machinist John Houlihan Falls and is Injured.

Charles W. Hall Has a Knee Cap Displaced—Railway Election Postponed—Local Gossip.

John Houlihan, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, was standing upon an engine yesterday afternoon tightening a nut, when the large wrench slipped and he fell backwards a distance of four or five feet, striking upon the sharp end of the iron frame which holds the pilot beam in position. His spine was injured and there may be a slight fracture of one of the ribs, so the doctor says, and it will be some time before the unfortunate man will again be at work.

ANOTHER RAILWAY CHANGE.

Wanatah News: "A prominent railway official has confirmed the rumor that the coaling station of the Pennsylvania road will be moved from Valparaiso to Wanatah in the spring. This change is made because the company needs the ground at Valparaiso for switching purposes. It will add considerably to the pay roll at Wanatah."

KNEE CAP DISPLACED.

Charles W. Hall was engaged in setting a locomotive valve in the Pittsburg shops yesterday, when he slipped and fell off the block he was standing upon. His left knee struck the sharp edge of the wood, displacing the knee cap, an injury which sometimes results in making a life cripple out of the person receiving it. Mr. Hall received prompt surgical aid, however, and there is no occasion for alarm in his case, yet it will be some days, and possibly weeks, before he will be able to walk without the aid of crutches. He is a popular young man and is not lacking in sympathy both in and out of shop circles.

A BIG SHIPMENT.

The Electric corporation has commenced the work of installing an electric lighting plant at Canton, Miss., and today shipped to that point one 40 light arc and one 750 light incandescent dynamo, together with wires and all the electrical apparatus necessary for a complete plant. From Salem, Ohio, there was also shipped to the same point, on the order of the Electric corporation, an engine, boilers and pumps for equipping a steam plant. This is a big contract, but it is nothing unusual for this company, whose business has grown to immense proportions. An 80-light arc dynamo also left the electric works today for San Francisco, Cal., consigned to the Mutual Electric Light company.

RECEIVES ITS CHARTER.

Peg Miller, of the Indiana Federation of Trades and Labor unions, is in receipt of information from President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, that a charter had been granted and forwarded to the Fort Wayne branch of the union. Therefore the meeting tonight will be held under the new charter and it is expected that there will be a large attendance. Many persons who favored the Indiana Federation, but held aloof until it was certain a charter would be granted by the American Federation, will now make haste to be enrolled.

RAILWAY ELECTION POSTPONED.

It being evident that the proposed subsidy of $95,000 for the construction of the Indiana Central railroad through Huntington township would be defeated at the election, the railway people have withdrawn the petition and filed another, in which the amount asked for is $55,000, one per cent. of the assessed property of the township. The election, which was to take place next Tuesday, has been postponed thirty days.

Machinist W. S. Wells resumed work this morning. He states that the condition of Mrs. Wells is much the same as it has been for several days, though her temperature is not quite so high, an indication that the fever is abating.

The Logansport Journal is of the opinion that Harry N. May will succeed his brother as trainmaster of the Chicago division of the Panhandle road. Sherman May was recently promoted to superintendent of the Richmond division of the line.

Indianapolis Journal: "It is stated that the position of general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg was offered to E. B. Taylor, general superintendent of transportation, which was declined; then F. L. Lorce was selected for the position. A Pittsburg paper says there is some soreness over the recent promotions, two or three persons having been ignored who thought themselves first in the line of promotion."

Monroeville Breeze: "Johnny Finan, a Monroeville boy, who is now filling an important position as telegraph operator in one of the railroad offices at McCalester, Indian territory, writes home to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Finan, that he is about to take unto himself a companion for life, of his choice from among the fair sex of the far southwestern territory. The intended is a sister to the wife of O. W. Argo, and the daughter of a prominent and wealthy citizen of McCalester."

Twenty-three hundred railway stock cars were sold at Chicago Thursday for $630,000. The cars were formerly the property of the Hicks Stock Car company. Last November a judgment was entered against the company for the sum of $1 341 000, under a bill of foreclosure filed by the Railway Equipment company, which furnished the cars. Judge Jenkins, of the federal court, decreed their sale. The cars were purchased in the interests of the foreclosing company by Charles S. Kimball, of New York.

A paper on Nathaniel Hawthorne was read by Mrs. George DeWald before the Carroll reading club yesterday. This was followed by a reading by Mrs P. J. McDonald. The club met at Mrs. DeWald's.

The Fort Wayne Cornet band will give an entertainment at the Saengerbund hall in a short time for the purpose of raising money to help buy new instruments. The entertainment will no doubt be a good one.

Miss Nettie Fry, of 62 John street, was very agreeably surprised by a merry party of young people, who called Wednesday evening to remind her of her eighteenth birthday and to enjoy her genial hospitality for a few hours.

Last Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leykauf entertained a few friends at progressive pedro in honor of Miss Della and Robbie Dehark, of Bloomville, Ohio, who are visiting at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicolaus Leykauf.

A Black-Talked-Of Woman.

Mrs. Dimmick, who, the idle gossips of the social world have it, is to become the wife of ex-President Benjamin Harrison, will be pleasantly remembered by those who were frequent visitors at the White House during its occupancy by Mr. Harrison and his family. Mrs. Dimmick now resides in New York. She is the niece of the late Mrs. Harrison, and her presence added much to the charm of the social life of the last administration. She was extremely popular and scarcely less esteemed than Mrs. Harrison, whose graciousness and sweetness of manner won the friendship of all who met her. Mrs. Harrison died Oct. 25, 1892, and through the long and tedious illness her devoted husband was greatly assisted in his patient vigils at her bedside by Mrs. Dimmick.

MRS. DIMMICK.

Mme. Scarron.

Mme. Scarron, afterward the famous Mme. de Maintenon, wife of Louis XIV. was in her girlhood remarkably beautiful. She was dark, with piercing black eyes and wavy hair. In middle life her gravity of countenance and of deportment was considered quite extraordinary in that age of gaiety.

A Hero.

She—There is nothing heroic about you. I ordered you to do something brave, before I would consent to love you, and you didn't do it.
He—Pardon, but I did.
"What did you do?"
"I disobeyed you. Don't you think that required courage?"—Truth.

Not If the Moon Was Bright.

Harry—"Is this Miss Wallace that I am going to meet to-night a pretty girl?"
Ned—"Well, that's a matter of opinion. My own idea is that she is much more likely to get engaged on a moonlight buggy ride than at a fashionable ball."—Somerville Journal.

Thought So.

Maid—"The new cook has come, ma'am, and she's made herself comfortable in the parlor."
Mistress—"Goodness! Has the woman her faculties?"
Maid—"I think so, ma'am; she's brought something tied up in a big red handkerchief."—Truth.

Five applications for membership were also received and referred to investigating committees.

Dora Davis is a young woman who has been in the police court many a time before, and she was there again this morning. She was found by Officer Knock last night on the street in an intoxicated condition. In court this morning she gave the name of Smith. The girl's parents live near Marseilles, Ohio. She has been in the city for a few years, and has been an inmate of various low resorts, her last appearance in police court being a few weeks ago when she was arrested together with Mrs. Barnum and Fanny Lovejoy at the Barnum house, near the driving park. She served a term in jail and was released only a few days ago. She went to jail again this morning.

A new lodge of the Knights of the Maccabees was instituted at Ossian last evening under the direction of Past Great Commander E. P. Thomas, of this city, assisted by about twenty-five members, including the initiatory team of Wayne tent No. 54. The new lodge is composed of prominent business men of that town. After the formal institution of the tent by Sir Knight Thomas and a candidate had been conducted through the initiatory work by Wayne Tent's team, the new lodge proceeded to the election of officers, choosing Jos. B. Bailey past commander and Jas. C. Hatfield commander. Deputy Great Commander D. S. Bechtel, of Columbia City, organized the new lodge.

Last Monday night was the occasion of the public installation of the newly elected officers of Monroeville lodge Knights of Pythias, at that place. Mr. E. V. Emrick, of this city, delivered the principal address, and in speaking of it the Monroeville Breeze says: "At the close of the installation the choir rendered another selection and Bro. E. V. Emrick, of Fort Wayne, was introduced and proceeded to address the assemblage. Mr. Emrick is too well known here for us to enter into details concerning his address. It contained a glowing tribute to this, the order so effected by young men; praised its work for good, its effort for the advancement of truth and morality, and was delivered in his usual interesting style."

A brilliant event was the reception given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Rich, at their pretty home on West Lewis street. Music was the feature of the evening and at midnight a three course luncheon was served. The table was beautifully decorated with smilax and carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Rich have lately returned from California and the gathering last night will be a long remembered one by all who participated therein. Those present were Misses Florence Dalman, Josie Carter, Mabel Davies, Anna Davies Minnie Adams, Lula Adams, May Headley, Anna Headley, Maude McBride, Lota Rich, Della Rich, Bessie Rich, Cora Moore, May Fisk, Hattie Jones, Lillian Fisk, Bessie Dille, Olive Brorius, Messrs Charles Yagerlehner, John Wagner, Ormonde Davies, David Greenawald, Eugene Fitch, Del Fitch, Don Smith, Carl Dameuth, Norman Robbins, James Swayne, Frank Rich, Noble Hunter.

OLD SUPERSTITION.

What the Curfew Bell Meant in Olden Time.

And What it Should Mean Today to Millions of People.

To Persons of Sense This Has Great Weight.

The curfew bell was no myth. It was a summons to the people to put out the fires, stop all labor and retire to sleep. It was a summons also, which none dare disobey, for heavy penalties followed disobedience.

O, for a curfew bell at the present day!

A bell whose ringing tones should summons us to rest from work! To rest from the intense, mad rush which hurries us on in the weakening, wearying, nerve-tearing, brain-destroying struggle of life.

Do you know what this means?

You professional and business man, how severe is the strain of thought and mind is plainly evidenced in your weakened nerves, your trembling on excitement, your sleepless, restless nights, your utterly relaxed nervous condition after mental work.

You clerks and mechanics, who work all day, how weak you grow, how pale, lifeless, spiritless you become, how dull and tired-headed.

You women, sales girls, and those confined in mills and factories, how heavy is your drudgery, how wearing upon your life, how enervating to your feelings, how exhausting to your strength, how blighting to your beauty. You are often nervous, generally weak, and always tired.

Alas, no curfew bell can call a halt in the world's work, but a warning voice can direct you how best to overcome the nervous and physical weakness which such work entails. You who would be strong in nerve and brain, who would gain physical and mental strength to continue your work successfully, use as the vital restorative, the strengthener of brain and nerve, the giver of renewed life and vigor, that greatest of all medicines, Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Nothing on earth will so quickly and surely restore your strength.

Just see what it did for Mr. John Connors, of 321 Rivington street, New York city, who says:

"I cheerfully recommend Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It has acted like a charm. Six months ago I became restless, weak and all broken up from unrefreshing sleep. My rest did me no good—I thought more harm than good. I had lost my appetite day by day.

"I saw my doctor and I tried different remedies recommended by the people I came in contact with as keeper in the Tombs, but of no avail, until one morning my wife got me a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried that bottle and it did me a world of good. I took five bottles in all, but could have dropped off at three.

"My sleep is now of the most refreshing kind. I never remembered in thirty-six years feeling as well as I do today. My wife and two boys, five and three years old, are taking their first bottle, and they already show the benefit of it.

"I hope this will reach those unfortunates who are suffering as I suffered from loss of appetite, loss of sleep, unstrung nerves, melancholy feeling and general weakness, all of which I suffered from six months ago, and from which that valuable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy relieved me forever, I hope and believe."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to conquer your weakness and debility. Use it and get yourself strong, vigorous and well.

This remarkable discovery should not be classed with the ordinary patent medicines. It is the prescription of the most successful specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, and he can be consulted by all without charge, personally or by letter.

BILL NYE'S COMET.

HE BOUGHT IT IN GOOD FAITH, BUT IS DISAPPOINTED.

He Finds That Investing in an Unbranded Comet Is Extremely Hazardous and Not Always to Be Relied Upon—He Wants to Exchange It.

[Copyright, 1895, by Edgar W. Nye.]

I suppose that I have done a very foolish thing. But my impulse was a good one. Last year an astronomer who was very hard pressed for money came to me and wanted to dispose of a comet that he had just discovered. He needed the money so badly that he won my young heart after awhile in spite of my better judgment.

Common sense told me not to buy a heavenly body on the hoof, but tenderness and a warm, sympathetic nature overcame my cool business sense. We looked over the property through a telescope, and when my attention was called to its speed and good condition and low taxes I yielded.

The first jolt, as I might say, which was given to my faith was when our gentlemanly, genial and urbane negotiator began to talk slang. But that was the way the matter struck me in my callow days. But the practical part of today is careful to write in such a way as to fill out columns that need one or two stanzas only. Milton today would be unpopular, and if he sent "Paradise Lost" to one of our old season cracked editors he would send the poem down the dumb waiter to the room of a pale girlish youth, with orders to boil it down to 16 lines to "justify" with the Holmes murder.

But since my real estate deal in the comet line I have been reading up more in regard to these erratic bodies. I am surprised to find that they are irregular in their habits and move in a parabola, like a presidential candidate.

I had made some calculations covering both sides of the barn and was sure that I was coming at the date of my comet's return when I ran across this caution: "It has been remarked that when an ephemeris of goes little pastimes (right ascension and declination) for any length of time is required it is convenient to calculate with rectangular equitorial coordinates instead of by the process we have followed in comparing the orbit with the middle observation."

So then I had to buy a new barn and begin all over again.

At one time I had the whole back yard full of logarithms, and a person going out after coal in the gloaming would fall over and skin his nose on an equation almost invariably.

After I had worked my multiplier till I had to build on a lean to for my multiplicand I ran upon this little paragraph of instructions:

"We may now refer to the calculation of ephemerides of the geocentric places of a comet from the parabolic elements which are required during its visibility to facilitate observations."

Now, what sort of reading matter is that to place before a family?

The general respect and esteem shown by comets toward the sun have endeared them to the thinking mind. I have read of every comet since the savant was enabled first to ramble through the sky, and no comet has ever been known to turn its tail toward the sun during that time. Comets for many years were regarded with disfavor and were unpopular among the masses, the general opinion being that they preceded pestilence and congressional legislation. In the fifteenth century to the "Ave Maria" was added "Lord, save us from the devil, the Turk and the comet."

The chemical construction of comets has for many years occupied the attention of our greatest scholars and atmospheric explorers. Generally they are thought to contain nothing but carbonaceous gases and scenery. As one may comfortably observe the stars through the tail of a comet, says the astronomer, we are led to believe that the whole substance of the comet is merely a web alone gas illuminated by other bodies, such as the sun or moon.

If I had known that in April, it would have been worth something to me, but I was not apt to purchase things and then read about them afterward.

Donati's comet, I think, gave the most general satisfaction. It was here in 1858 and returns regularly every 1,950 years.

SOME CALCULATIONS.

rain or shine. It would some oftener, but has an aphelion of 16,000,000,000 of miles and therefore has to be very active in order to make the trip.

Donati was very proud of his comet, but it has never paid him at all. Since getting mixed up in the matter I have had a good deal of correspondence with other discoverers, owners or assignees of comets, and many of them are actually suffering from want.

A general movement toward the relief of these people is now on foot, and a Christmas tree is talked of at least for next year.

Any one visiting the Holy Land this year who may notice an unscrupulous astronomer over there carrying a good gold watch with any initials on it and inclosed in a chamois bag will do well to communicate particulars to me at an early date. I will drop everything and go at once.

I would exchange my comet with a steady, industrious man for a revolving bookcase with a much smaller orbit, if in good condition.

I will keep the dangerous seat I am occupying here near the stove. I will not expose that lady standing up in the aisle to the risk of death or lasting disfigurement."

MEN ONCE PROMINENT WHO HAVE DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

Oldest Living Ex-Senators Gilbert Railroad Builder Railroad Yic Investor. Many Has Been Now Living In New York and Engaged In Business There.

It would be an interesting thing if it were possible to find out and set down on paper the facts regarding some scores of men who once were prominent in the great world of national affairs, but who are now heard of but seldom. So seldom indeed are the names of some of these once giants in the public's eye seen in the newspapers that those appearances excite surprise and occasionally the comment, "Why, I thought that man was dead."

These men are sometimes termed "has beens," and so they are in a sense, but many of them are still in active life, though not in public life, and no doubt the intimate friends of many such would be surprised to know how completely they have dropped out of public knowledge.

Among the most interesting of all the present has been ex-Senator Bradbury of Maine, George W. Jones of Dubuque, Ia., and Alpheus Felch of Ann Arbor, Mich. These men are the oldest living ex-United States senators; they were all members of that body at the same time, but they retired so long ago that they have been forgotten by the great mass of their fellow citizens, although during the years of their public activity they were all personages of prominence. The oldest of the three is Joseph Bradbury. As he was born in 1802, he is now 93 years old. His six years' term in the senate began with 1847 and closed with 1853. Mr. Jones is nearly two years younger, his birth having occurred on April 12, 1804. His term of service in the senate began in 1848 and ended in 1859. Mr. Felch is a little younger than Mr. Jones, his birth was on Sept. 9, 1804, and he served exactly the same time as Mr. Bradbury.

All three were members of the Thirtieth and Thirty-first congresses. They are the sole survivors of the senates of those congresses. They were the colleagues of John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, Sam Houston of Texas, Robert M. T. Hunter of Virginia, Tom Corwin of Ohio, William H. Seward of New York and John A. Dix of the same state, Thomas H. Benton of Missouri, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi, Daniel Webster of Massachusetts, Lewis Cass of Michigan, Hannibal Hamlin of Maine, Henry Clay of Kentucky, Herschell V. Johnson of Georgia, John M. Clayton of Delaware and many others of lesser importance, long since called from the scenes of their earthly labors and forgotten by the rushing world of today.

Each of the three oldest ex-senators must have stored up in his memory a series of reminiscences that would prove a veritable mine to the inquiring writer. What they could tell of the politics of past years would no doubt be vastly entertaining and valuable. They could talk about other things than politics most interestingly also. Mr. Bradbury was a member of the famous class of 1825, at Bowdoin, and among his associates there were Longfellow, the poet; Nathaniel Hawthorne, the writer of eerie romances; John S. C. Abbot, whose "Tales of Franconia" delighted the young several decades ago and whose life of Napoleon found thousands and thousands of readers, and Jonathan Cilley, the Maine congressman who was killed in a duel by Graves of Kentucky in 1838. Mr. Bradbury was a practicing lawyer for many years and when a young man was also a journalist, being editor of the Maine Patriot for a number of years. He is ex-frame by well preserved and attended the World's fair in 1893.

Mr. Felch, who served as senator from Michigan, was the recipient of many political honors in his young manhood and middle life, having been a member of the state legislature, and serving a part of a term just before his election to the senate as governor of Michigan. After the expiration of his senatorial term, he was sent by President Pierce to California as a member of the commission appointed to settle the land claims there.

Mr. Jones served also in several other public places besides being a senator. President Buchanan sent him to New Granada (now Colombia, South America), as United States minister. Upon his recall from that place in 1861 he was accused of disloyalty and imprisoned at Fort Warren, but he was soon released. He was a warm friend of Jefferson Davis, and it was partly owing to the intimacy of the two men that Mr. Jones was charged with disloyalty. Like both the other venerable ex-senators here mentioned, Mr. Jones is in excellent health in spite of his advanced age. Three years ago he led the grand march at a charity ball, and he was one of those who, in 1886, received the remains of his old friend Davis from New Orleans to Richmond.

So much for these three of the oldest living. There are not many who have attained to their great age. John P. Blair, the venerable pioneer in railroad building, is one of those who have. Perhaps he should not be termed a has been, yet he is one who has been obliged to retire from the stress and anxiety of active life and whose name is seldom seen in print, excepting when a searcher after reminiscences seeks him out at his home in Blairstown, N. J. Mr. Blair is possibly not so active as the oldest ex-senators. It is true that he is still president of the Belvidere (N. J.) bank, which he founded 50 or 60 years ago, but he is not now very active in its management and he passes most of his time in the warm weather sitting upon the upper veranda of the fine old house which has been his home since very early manhood. He likes to sit on the sun, and a part of the veranda has been inclosed with glass, so that even in cold weather he may enjoy his much loved sun bath every day that the solar luminary deigns to show its face.

General James S. Greene, the oldest living graduate of West Point, is another venerable has been. He lives in Morristown, N. J., in the winter, but he spends the summer, like the sprightly old man that he is, at Newport, the summer capital of America's fashionable folk, while his autumns are put in at Schenectady, N. Y. General Greene has other distinctions besides that of being the oldest graduate of Uncle Sam's military academy. It was he who when the iron horse began to run his course on roads of iron in America, nearly 60 years ago, devised the railroad car or sleeper. During the civil war he was a member of the northern army and he distinguished himself at Gettysburg.

The city of New York is the home of many has beens, several of whom are ex-governors. Ex-Governor Hoadly of

JOHN F. WIKE.

Ohio, who during his term in that post was one of the best known men in the United States, is one of these. In a certain way, Mr. Hoadly is not a has been. His law firm enjoys one of the largest practices of any concern in New York. Mr. Lauterbach, who is now so prominent in New York city politics, is one of his partners. Mr. Hoadly was born in New Haven and comes of what might be termed "colonial stock," since his father, when a young man, served a term as mayor of New Haven, and then of Cleveland, while his grandfather, who was a captain in the Revolution, was elected to the Connecticut legislature 26 times consecutively, a record which has not been broken or equaled, so far as I know, in the land of steady habits. Mr. Hoadly was a partner of Salmon P. Chase in the law business at Cincinnati, and also served on the bench in that city. But from a money point of view, at least, he has secured his greatest success in New York.

Two of the other ex-governors now living in New York are named Chamberlain—Joshua L., ex-governor of Maine, and Daniel H., ex-governor of South Carolina. Joshua L. is an ex-college president as well as an ex-governor. For years he was the chief executive of Bowdoin, and he served as professor of mental and moral philosophy for a number of years after 1874. He was an officer in the Federal army during the civil war and served in 24 pitched battles, a record that has been equaled by few. In his early days he was licensed to preach, and was government commissioner to the Paris exposition.

Ex-Governor Lounsbury of Connecticut, still a resident of that state, is now a bank president in New York, and although he is a has been so far as the entire country is concerned, he is still an important factor in the business life of the metropolis of the Atlantic seaboard.

John S. Wise, sometimes called colonel and sometimes ex-governor, who was once much more prominent than he is now, is also living in New York at present. He was a soldier on the Confederate side, but he was neither a colonel nor a captain nor was he ever a governor. It was his father who was governor of Virginia, and who ordered the execution of John Brown. Like some of the others mentioned in this article, although Mr. Wise is less of a public character than in the past, he is making more money during his present retirement than he ever was before.

NEW STYLE FARMING

PROJECTED AGRICULTURAL VILLAGE IN THE SACRAMENTO VALLEY.

Irrigation Plays an Important Part In the Plan, Which Is Partly Socialistic—to Make Tuscaly Acre Farms Profitable. William E. Smythe the Promoter.

A new colonization scheme for Americans has been projected that appears to be entirely practical, and that is interesting at least. The promulgator is William E. Smythe, who is well and favorably known throughout the west as the editor of The Irrigation Age.

Mr. Smythe's plan is somewhat eclectistic and somewhat cooperative, but is not wholly of either nature. He proposes, in brief, to found a farm village somewhat on the order of many that now exist in Europe. He has selected as a site for the proposed colony a ranch of 10,000 acres located in the Sacramento valley in northern California. The property was very valuable in the days when wheat raising was profitable, but since this market has failed the land has depreciated because other crops cannot be raised there on account of lack of irrigation. Mr. Smythe proposes to cut canals through from the Sacramento valley and reclaim this almost arid land.

In the center of this tract 300 acres are to be set aside for a village. The tract is to be cut up into 20 and 10 acre farms. Each purchaser of a farm is to be given a single or half acre lot in the village. The idea is that the farmers shall live in the village and till their adjacent lands. The village is to be surrounded by a broad, circular boulevard on which the houses will face.

Another feature of the plan is to be the system of ownership. The owners of the farms are to constitute a company which shall own the village and conduct various enterprises necessary for the profitable utilization of the crops. Thus there will be a creamery, to use the surplus milk; a cannery for the fruit, a packing house and a starch factory to convert the surplus potatoes into a marketable article.

The most important feature of the plan, and the one on which its life depends, is the irrigation system. This is to be in the hands of the company and the water right goes with the title to every farm. Each colonist is to purchase as many shares of stock as he does acres of land and the capital thus acquired is to be used for the general benefit of the colony. While the Sacramento valley is not actually an arid region, the rainfall is only sufficient for the raising of grain and early vegetables. With sufficient irrigation almost any kind of crops could be raised, as well as such semi-tropical fruits as oranges, lemons, limes, pomegranates, olives and figs. Good railroad facilities are easy of access and, besides, the Sacramento river furnishes a clear water way to Sacramento and San Francisco.

It is estimated that a capital of $670 is sufficient to establish a family on a 20 acre farm in the proposed colony and $417 on 10 acres. In return for this it is estimated from $50 to $100 an acre can be made over and above living expenses.

Mr. Smythe's idea is to attract a number of thrifty American families to the west, gather them into farm villages like this, where they can rely upon their own efforts to bring them a good living with good prospects for securing a modest fortune. A community similar to the one proposed has already been started in Payette Valley, Ida., and in the two years of its existence has prospered greatly.

The plan gives the colonist a great advantage over the individual farmer, for the cooperative company, of which he is a member, furnishes him with water, power, electric light and, what is more, a good market for his products. He gets the benefits of living in a village and is still near to his farm.

Mr. Smythe, the author of this scheme, is neither a wild dreamer nor a selfish land boomer. He is a young, energetic, earnest business man, with lots of practical common sense. He was born in Worcester, Mass., about 34 years ago and comes of Puritan stock. He is a journalist by profession, but has been identified with several successful business enterprises in the west. For two years he was president of the irrigation congress.

His plan is the outcome of a study of various colonies at home that have already been tried, and he claims to have improved all the best points and avoided the bad ones. The idea is primarily that a hundred such communities would reclaim by irrigation the so called arid lands and secondarily the establishment of combined agricultural and manufacturing communities on a sound financial basis. These colonies would consist of men who owned their own farms and at the same time had an active interest in the community in which they lived. Their interest would not depend on a mere theory. It would be a financial interest and consequently a lasting one. Social economists will watch with great interest the new colony which Mr. Smythe is to establish.

OLIVER BELMONT'S SECOND BRIDE.

She Will Be Alva Vanderbilt, Who Not Long Ago Divorced William K. Vanderbilt.

New York society was not at all surprised when it was recently announced that Mrs. Alva Vanderbilt would become Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont. He was one of the guests on the Vanderbilt yacht Valiant in 1892 when Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt departed for some months and the cruise around the world was abandoned. Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Consuelo, went to England. Mr. Vanderbilt went to Paris and Mr. Belmont returned to his home in New York. Then followed Mr. Vanderbilt's escapades in Paris and Mrs. Vanderbilt's suit for divorce in New York. At the time of the divorce it was rumored that Mrs. Vanderbilt would marry Mr. Belmont.

Oliver H. P. Belmont is one of fortune's favorites. He is a son of August Belmont, the world famous banker, who died a few years ago, and a direct descendant on his mother's side of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, who at the age of 27 whipped an entire British squadron of six ships on Lake Erie in 1813 and sent his famous message, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," to General William Henry Harrison. Oliver Belmont as a boy adopted the sea as a profession and with a commendable desire to become a hero like his illustrious ancestor was educated at the Annapolis Naval academy and served long enough to learn that he would probably be old and gray before he rose in the command of a ship.

Resigning from the navy, Belmont married Miss Sarah Whiting, who later divorced him, and devoted himself to travel. His father left him a fortune, and his wealth has made it possible for him to visit almost every part of the habitable globe. He has also devoted himself to the amelioration of a great racing stud and possesses one of the finest stables of carriage horses in the world. He owns a palatial mansion called Belcourt at Newport and entertains there in princely style. His grand Lachaise ball at Belcourt last summer was one of the social sensations of the season.

A WOMAN AT THE WHEEL.

Mrs. Thorrold Steers a Tug and Will Soon Be a Full Fledged Captain.

Mrs. E. Thorrold probably does not know it, but she is a new woman of the thirty-third degree. She is the pioneer tugboat captain of her sex and not only owns, but steers the tug Ethel and Marion in San Francisco harbor. She did not make this departure because it was the fad to do so, but because five children were dependent upon her, and personally conducting a tugboat seemed the best paying thing she could do. Her husband owned the tug, and it gave him a good revenue until one day, during a birthday romp with his little daughter, he was pricked by a pin, blood poisoning set in and he died.

For a time Mrs. Thorrold endeavored to continue his business with the aid of hired help, but the tug's net earnings were insufficient for her needs, and she concluded to learn the business herself. With an engineer at her elbow she took her first lessons and ere long was able to steer the tug as well as a veteran.

This does not mean that she can yet be officially addressed as captain, for she lacks the "papers," without which no one is allowed to engineer a tug on San Francisco's bay, but she is competent to pass the statutory examination and intends soon doing so. Then she will be the lifelong captain of the Ethel and Marion, as she is now really captain in fact.

The engineer is still with her when she grasps the wheel and the tug goes puffing about among the ships, but Mrs. Thorrold does not need his services in the least. With a brisk business air she rings the bell. Her soft, white hands clutch the wheel firmly, her bright eyes watch the course ahead with unremitting vigilance. The screw begins to turn and the tug is off on a mission that means bread for a family of six. Mrs. Thorrold is not particularly anxious to vote, but she is proud of the fact that she is the only woman skipper of a tug boat in the United States.

AVENGED BY HIS DOG

MURDERER OF TOMAS MARTINEZ BROUGHT TO JUSTICE.

AN ATTECTING STORY THAT COMES FROM SANTA FE.

The Faithful Canine, Seriously Wounded, Leads the Way to the Scene of the Crime and Uncovers the Body of the Victim.

ON CARLOS IS a dog of Rabbit mixed breed but in spirits of the worthy Martinez family of Santa Fe, N. M. He is not beautiful but he is the hero of this remarkable tale. Up to the time of the recent tragedy that made him famous his home was Shady Glen. The Don was prefixed on a bridle but pleasure with the attempt to recognize the brute's extent to distinction. That a Mexican should so honor a dog amounts a good deal.

The story of Don Carlos' leap to fame in the story of a real crime. Don Lee chez Martinez, of Santa Fe, owns and I operates an extensive cattle and horse ranch at Ojo de la Baca (Cow Spring). In the southwestern part of the county. Last January his sons, Tomas and Maximiliano, were there looking after their father's interests. On Thursday morning, Jan. 17, Tomas, the elder of the young men, started away from the cabin on horseback in quest of missing cattle. He was mounted on a good horse, had a first class saddle and bridle; was well armed and had an excellent equipment of blankets and warm clothing. Carlos, who was accustomed to such trips, eagerly followed his master. As the young man rode away he told Maximiliano that he would be back on Sunday afternoon.

Tomas Martinez never returned.

On Tuesday morning, when Maximiliano was becoming anxious about his missing brother, Carlos limped back to the homestead and fell exhausted on the threshold. There was a ghastly wound in his head, and his limbs were quivering with weakness produced by loss of blood, hunger and exposure. Water was brought to the dog, and he drank greedily. It seemed to restore his strength, for he barked, ran out of the house again, looked around at the younger Martinez, and barked again more loudly.

"Yes! yes! I will come with you, my brave Carlito," replied Maximiliano, whose fears, were now thoroughly aroused. "Only you must eat first."

He threw the animal a piece of meat, which Carlos devoured in two gulps, and quickly saddled a horse. Tomas had ridden south, and Maximiliano started in the same direction. But Carlos barked distressfully, and ran almost due east, turning round every few yards with such manifest tokens of intelligence and purpose that Maximiliano spurred on his horse and blindly followed the dog.

With his nose to the ground, and pausing only to drink at the brink of a creek, Carlos led the horseman nine miles across country to Don Lorenzo Martinez's round-up corral at La Mesilla. As Maximiliano dismounted, Carlos, yelping as if with pain, rushed to the remains of what had evidently been an unusually large cinnamon bear, and began dragging furiously by the ears.

And then, amid the black and ugly ashes disturbed by the dog some Mexicans found a curious thing. It was a boot, his brother's boot. Although it was charred the lad no difficulty in recognizing Tomas' heavy shoe and steel spur. A moment later he discovered the large bone of a human leg, charred to a dead black, and around, as his eyes grew accustomed to the night, more and smaller bones, for the animals had a touch.

The children of the neighborhood were arrested, tried and hanged by the other dogs in the presence of large people. Pablo Martinez, brother of the dead Tomas, followed Don to the scaffold. Don Carlos was at his knees. The crowd cheered the dog. In time to catch a glimpse of the black scarred and ferocious head, and a great shout broke over Don Carlos' head.

per's Ferry, W. Va., disappeared from Camden Station a few days ago. Though detectives have been at work ever since they were unable to solve the mystery. Miss Stewart went to Baltimore to visit her sister. She had promised her mother to send a message from the station announcing her arrival. She notified her mother by letter from the station that she had just sent a message to her sister. The clerk at the news stand remembered selling the girl the stationery and saw her write two letters. Who got the second is a question. Detective Riordan of Baltimore says he saw her leave with a man and woman. Her father, who is assistant the police, fears that she has been abducted. The girl has never been away from home before. She wore short dresses, and had no male visitors.

Fire from the Ghost of an Indian.

An Osage Indian, named Webster, was killed in the Osage village, near Grey Horse, six weeks ago. His wife and mother-in-law were first charged with murdering him, but at the investigation of the matter it was decided that Webster came to his death by falling upon a butcher knife in his own hand while quarreling after his wife and threatening to kill her. The Indians accepted this verdict at the time. Now they say there is something wrong, as the spirit of the dead man returns among them every night, weeping and wailing and demanding justice. Every night at the very hour Webster died a strange wailing sound be heard where in old wigwam stood and a tumultuous object moves about for a time. Many white people have been it and cannot explain it, while the Indians all declare they recognize Webster's voice and that he is demanding to be avenged. So excited have they become over the matter that they are abandoning the village and moving to other parts of the reservation.

Wingle—Yes, I hope to.

Dingle—Well I suppose you are pretty busy. Have you selected a place to live in yet?

Wingle—Not yet.

Dingle—Haven't got around to it, I suppose. What in the world are going to give your bride for a wedding present?

Wingle—I don't know.

Dingle—That so? Decided on the clothes you will wear?

Wingle—No yet.

Dingle—Well what? Going to keep house or board?

Wingle—Can't say.

Dingle—You seem a certain fellow. On the eve of your wedding and can't say how. What are you waiting for, anyway?

Wingle—I am waiting, old man, to learn the size of her future check.

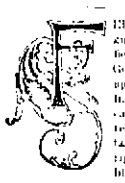
ROASTED WILLIAM H.

THE MAN WHO IS BRAVING THE KAISER'S FURY.

Herr Bebel, Leader of the Social Democrats in the German Reichstag, Has No Use for Empire or Emperor—Threatened Revolution.



FERDINAND AUGUST Bebel, whose fierce attack in the German parliament upon Emperor William II. on the occasion of the debate relating to the current of the right of free assemblage has earned so much comment in Germany, shares the leadership of the social-democratic party in the country with Herr Liebknecht. Bebel is considered the more aggressive, but Bebel in every sense a self-made man undoubtedly has more force with the masses. He was born Feb. 22, 1840, in Cologne, and received his early education in a village school near that city. Later on he attended grammar school in Wetzlar, and in 1860 he removed to Leipsic, where he established his own business, that of wood-turner and carver, in 1861. Two years prior to that date he had joined in the workingmen's movement in Germany, and soon became one of the most aggressive leaders in that cause. From 1865 to 1890, when he removed to Berlin, Bebel was president of the Workingmen's Educational club in Leipsic and member of the permanent executive committee of the German Workingmen's association. In 1867 he became identified with the editorial management of the Volksstaat, a socialistic paper in Leipsic, and continued this connection until he became one of the managers of the Vorwaerts, the leading German socialistic daily, published in Berlin. He was elected to the North German parliament in 1867 and to the German parliament in 1871. In the election of June, 1893, he was even elected in two districts, choosing the mandate from the Strasburg district. From the beginning of Bebel's parliamentary career dates his uncompromising attitude against all monarchical institutions. Bebel seems to be in the dark about the policy of his own party, for when he was asked in February, 1893, during a session of parliament, what sort of thing he thought the socialistic state should be he remained silent despite repeated taunts. Bebel is at present treasurer of the socialist party in Germany, to which office he was elected in 1892. During the re-organization of the party in 1890, Bebel advocated parliamentarianism as the chief means of agitation, but in this he was opposed by the reformists of the party. He served as a delegate to the international socialist congresses in Paris, 1889, Brussels, 1891, Zurich, 1893, and Breslau during the present year. On the latter occasion he made his famous speech, in which he said that socialism would finally crush imperialism, for which he has just been sentenced to six months' imprisonment. In 1872 Bebel and Liebknecht together were tried on a charge of attempted high treason against the German empire and the kingdom of Saxony. Each was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, which they served, and Bebel had to serve an additional nine months for lese majeste. Bebel is the author of a number of books on socialism, chief among them "Woman and Socialism," 1885, six editions, "Christianity and Socialism," 1882, nineteen editions, and "Our Aims," 1891, six editions. He has on several occasions come out unreservedly in favor of the Paris commune and the international.

How to Prepare Spaghetti Timbale.

Spaghetti timbale makes a pretty dish. Cook some pieces of spaghetti in salted water until they are tender. Lay the pieces on a napkin to cool, being careful not to break them. Butter a dome shaped mold. Wind the spaghetti around the mold, holding it in place with a layer of force meat. Fill the mold with boiled macaroni and cheese. Make a layer of force meat thick enough to give the timbale stability. Cover with greased paper, stand in a pan of hot water and poach in a slow oven for thirty minutes.

Hepzibah's needle flashed in the fire-light.

"There are other women in the world as fond as Nellie," she said coldly, with her eyes on her knitting.

There was a long silence in the room. The fire flickered, a cinder fell on the hearth. Hepzibah could hear her heart throbs, she slowly flattened her eyes in the man's face.

He was not looking at her at all, but at a china shepherdess upon a little table against the wall. His eyes were troubled; he was trying to remember.

"My Nellie did not keep that on there. No, it was on the mantlepiece, here, that she had it."

He brought the ornament over, dusting it with his handkerchief.

"We must keep the things as she left them, Hepzibah," he said. But Hepzibah had slipped out of the door into the summer darkness.

She rested her arms on the little gate, and stood looking far out to sea. Her face shone white and ghostly in the dimness. She shivered in the warm air.

"You dead woman you Nelly," she whispered touch. "why will you not give him up to me? You have your Jack you do not want him—and I oh, my God!"

A great fearless sob choked her; the shimmering waves mocked her; her face hardened.

"Why should I not tell him? I shall do you no harm. Are you anywhere here to care at all? God, the life beyond—are there anything but words? How can one hurt the dead? You are asleep in the churchyard there, and I love him—and I tell you I love him!"

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Horrors in Armenia Vividly Portrayed.

Dr. Talmage Tells Why He Did Not Go to Armenia with the Relief Fund—Words of Commendation for Clara Barton.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage told the story of the Armenian massacres to his Washington congregation, predicating his remarks on the text:

They escaped into the land of Armenia.—II Kings, xix., 37.

In Biblical geography this is the first time that Armenia appears called then by the same name as now. Armenia is chiefly a tableland 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, and on one of the peaks Noah's ark lighted with its human family and fauna that were to fill the earth. That region was the birthplace of the rivers which watered the Garden of Eden when Adam and Eve lived there, their only roof the crystal skies, and there came the general of Sennacherib's host. Ethnologists tell us, are a superior to the Caucasian race. Their religion founded on the Bible. Their King is our Christ. Their crime is that they will not become followers of Mohammed, that Jupiter of sensuality. To drive them from the face of the earth is the ambition of all Mohammedans. To accomplish this, murder is overcome, and wholesale massacre is a matter of enthusiastic approbation and governmental reward. The prayer enjoined by highest Mohammedan authority and recited every day throughout Turkey and Egypt, while styling all those not Mohammedans as infidels, is as follows: "O Lord of all creatures! O Allah! Destroy the infidels and Polytheists, thine enemies, the enemies of the religion! O Allah! Make their children orphans and defile their bodies; cause their feet to slip; give them and their families, their households and their women, and their relatives by marriage, their brothers and their friends, their possessions and the race, their wealth and their lands as booty to the Moslems, O Lord of all creatures!"

The life of an Armenian in the presence of those who make that prayer is of no more value than the life of a summer insect. The sultan of Turkey sits on a throne impersonating that brigandage and assassination. At this time all civilized nations are in horror at the attempts of that Mohammedan government to destroy all the Christians of Armenia. I hear somebody talking as though some new thing were happening, and that the Turkish government had taken a new role of tragedy on the stage of nations. No, no! She is at the same old business. Overlooking her diabolism of other centuries, we come down to our century, to find that in 1821 the Turkish government slew 50,000 anti-Moslems, and in 1866 she slew 30,000, and in 1868 she slew 12,000, and in 1876 she slew 10,000. Anything short of the slaughter of thousands of human beings does not put enough red wine into her cup of abomination to make it worth quaffing. Nor is this the only time she has promised reform. In the presence of the war ships at the mouth of the Dardanelles, she has promised the civilized nations of the earth that she would stop her batteries and the international and hemispheric farce has been enacted of believing what she says, when all the past ought to guarantee of that she is only pursuing in her atrocities to put nations off the track and then resume the work of

W. C. T. U.

In 1830 Turkey, unlikely with Russia, promised to alleviate the condition of Christians, but the promise was broken. In 1839 the then sultan promised protection of life and property without reference to religion, and the promise was broken. In 1844, at the demand of an English minister plenipotentiary, the sultan declared, after the public execution of an Armenian at Constantinople, that no such death penalty should again be inflicted, and the promise was broken. In 1850, at the demand of foreign nations, the Turkish government promised protection to Protestants, but to this day the Protestants at Stamboul are not allowed to build a church, although they have the funds ready, and the Greek Protestants, who have a church, are not permitted to worship in it. In 1856, after the Crimean war, Turkey promised that no one should be hindered in the exercise of the religion he professed, and that promise has been broken. In 1878, at the memorable treaty of Berlin, Turkey promised religious liberty to all her subjects in every part of the Ottoman empire, and the promise was broken. Not once in all the centuries has the Turkish government kept her promise of mercy. So far from any improvement, the condition of the Armenians has become worse and worse year by year, and all the promises the Turkish government now makes are only a gaining of time by which she is making preparation for the complete extermination of Christianity from her borders.

Why, after all this national and continental and hemispheric lying on the part of the Turkish government, do not the warships of Europe ride up as close as is possible to the palaces of Constantinople and blow that accursed government to atoms? In the name of the Eternal God, let the nuisance of the ages be wiped off the face of the earth! Down to the perdition from which it smoked up sink Mohammedanism! Between those outbursts of massacre the Armenians suffer in silence arrows that are seldom if ever record. They are taxed heavily for the mere privilege of living, and the tax is called "the humiliating tax." They are compelled to give three days' entertainment to any Mohammedan tramp who may be passing that way. They must pay blackmail to the assessor lest he report the value of their property too highly. Their evidence in court is of no worth, and if 50 Armenians saw a wrong committed and one Mohammedan was present, the testimony of the one Mohammedan would be taken and the testimony of the 50 Armenians rejected; in other words, the solemn oath of 1,000 Armenians would not be strong enough to overthrow the perjury of one Mohammedan. A professor was condemned to death for translating the English Book of Common Prayer into Turkish. Seventeen translators were sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment for possessing a Christian book from the Bible. This is the way the Turkish government amuses itself in times of peace. These are the delights of Turkish civilization. But when days of massacre come, then deeds are done which men are ashamed to put in any refined vocabulary, and if one awake of the horrors, he must do it with well-nigh sealed lips. SPLITTING BANK NOTES.

Clumsy Devices for Counterfeiting Five-Dollar Bills.

Many devices have been resorted to by counterfeiters to circulate their bank notes, but as to novelty none begins Foster, but one of the most novel has come to light within the last few days at the United States subtreasurer's office here in the city, say the Philadelphia Record. It is not known whether the plan was ever tried before, nor how successful it was in the case, as it is not known whether anybody was caught by it. The scheme consisted of splitting a $5 and a $1 note and then pasting the back of the $1 note to the face of the $5 note and the front of the $1 note to the back of the $5 note. The mechanical part of the work was readily done, but the fraud could be detected the moment the note was turned over.

An effort had been made to change the color of the "check letter" side of the note's ordinal name, but it was done so clumsily that the fraud would have been seen at a glance, and the only hope of passing the notes as genuine would have been to pass them over with the $5 side up and hand in the man receiving it not to turn it over before putting it away. The doctored notes came to the subtreasury through one of the banks, with the request that they be allowed whatever they were worth. The government always redeems notes at the face value, and as the faces in this case were of a $1 and a $5 note $6 was allowed. It is not known whether the bank was caught on the split notes or not.

A cleverly executed counterfeit $5 national-bank note was also detected at the subtreasury the other day. It was on the First National bank of Tamaqua and was burned in several places to give it an old appearance and then pasted on a piece of paper as if to hold it together. The fraud was first detected by turning over one of the corners and detecting a misspelled word on the back.

Temple of the Fraternity at Grand Rapids From Various Quarries.

The Masonic temple recently dedicated at Grand Rapids is in some respects unsurpassed in this country. In furnishings and fittings it is richest and costliest, $100,000 having been expended for these purposes. The temple occupies the four upper floors of the building, the fourth and fifth being set apart for the uses of the Blue lodge and chapter. On the fifth floor also are the Masonic ball rooms, with parlors, billiard rooms, etc., in front, with a large banquet hall in the rear. The sixth and seventh floors of the temple are devoted to the uses of the consistory, council of royal and select masters. The temple is lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

Every member of M. Bourgeois' cabinet is a Freemason.

There are 241 lodges, with a membership of 26,000 Masons, in Massachusetts.
